Joshua Gifford, on trial in Oswego for the murder of his wife,attempted suicide Sunday night in a peculiar manner. He is confined in the county jail and occu-pies a cell with three other men. One of his companions awoke about mid-night and saw the old man sitting up-right holding in his lap a wash basin. The light admitted to the cell revealed that the basin was partly filled with blood. Sheriff Huntington was aroused Dr. Stockwell summoned and an exam-amination hastily made. An incision was found on the underside of each fore-arm, the deepest cut being about one inch and a half deep. The wounds were dressed and pronounced not dangerous. If the old man had not been discovered he would have undoubtedly bled to death in a short time. A knife was found in his pocket but as it contained no blood stains a further search was in-stituted and a razor covered with blood was found in a box in his cell. He at-tends court with his arms in a sling. He was considerably weakened from loss of blood. His action occasioned consid-erable comment and indicates that he dreads the trying ordeal he is to pass through. To deputy Sheriff Hulett the old man said he would never let the devil get the start of him again.

It is generally understood that the finest fitting clothes worn in Fulton are made by H. & A. Rosenbloom.

Rev. F. H. Beck who has occupied one of the Methodist pulpits in Oswego for three years, was granted a supernu-mary relation by the present conference on account of ill health in his family, the weather being too severe. He has been appointed to supply the pulpit of Christ church, the leading Methodist church in Pittsburg, Pa., for the remain-der of the conference year, which ex-pires in October.

Alexander Allen who left Fulton about a year ago for Cincinnati, Ohio, died the 10th inst. in Michigan. Mr. Allen re-sided near Williams Corners in Granby for many years and previous to moving west was a resident of Fulton. The Fort Howard (Wisconsin) Sentinel of the 14th inst, says :—

"James Alexander Allen, brother of Joseph Allen of this city, and Nathan Allen of Kenosha, died at Stephenson, Mich., April 10th, 1883, of quick con-sumption. His remains were brought to this city on Thursday night and taken to the residence of Jay Allen, from which the funeral took place yesterday forenoon at 10 o'clock. His remains were interred at the Fox Hill cemetery.

Chaplain McCabe's Lecture.

Chaplain McCabe will lecture in Nich-ol's hall next Tuesday evening, April 24, on "Bright Side of Life in Libby Prison," for the benefit of Post Daniel F. Schenck G. A. R. Chaplain McCabe is a humorist, an orator, a forcible and pleasing speaker and talks from actual experience. The Columbia City, (Md.), Commercial says we have heard Beecher, Tilton, and other noted lecturers, but we consider the lecture of Rev. C. C. McCabe, D. D., delivered at Central Hall on Wednesday evening of last week, on "The Bright Side of Life in Libby Pris-on," the grandest thing to which we have ever listened. The Chaplain held his audience for about an hour and a half, and when he closed we heard but one expression from his hearers, and that was that they regretted that he did not continue much longer. He would have his audience shedding tears one moment, and the next would have them convulsed with laughter.

Seats for sale at C. R. Nichols'. Re-served seats 35 cents; general admission 25 cents.

A Fashionable Wedding.

In New York Thursday evening two weddings took place at the same time in the Broadway Tabernacle, the contract-ing parties being Miss Minnie B. Rogers, a daughter of Mr. Charles P. Rogers, of New York city, who was married to Mr. Charles F. Zabrizkie, and Miss Louisa Willard of Oswego Falls, who was mar-ried to Mr. Dudley Miller, jr., of Oswe-go The ceremony was per-formed by the Rev. Dr. Taylor in the presence of a large num-ber of friends of the two couples. Six bridesmaids preceded the brides as they passed up the aisle. They were dressed alike in white silk en train, the front of the skirts being trimmed with plaitings of white tulle. Low cut corsages were filled in with lace, while the corsage bouquets were roses. Each carried a bouquet of roses. Miss Rogers entered the church on the arm of her father, while Miss Willard was accompanied by her brother, Mr. Charles Willard. Miss Rogers was dressed in a rich white ottoman silk trimmed with point duch-esse lace ond cut with a court train. Along the front of skirt were ruffles of duchesse lace. Miss Willard's dress was also of white silk, with a corsage decolletee and filled in with duchess lace. Both wore tulle veils fastened with the spray of lillies of the valley, and carried bouquets of white rosebuds. Mr. and Mrs. Miller will return after a wedding tour and reside in Oswego.

Rev. B. R. Dorr, of Madison Universi-ty will officiate in the Baptist church again next Sunday. He is an interest-ing speaker and is attracting large au-diences.

The Philharmonic Society of Syracuse will give the "Chimes of Normandy" in Stephen's Opera House, Thursday evening, the 26th inst. Seventy voices and an excellent orchestra.

Sunday the bulkhead at R. K. Harris & Son's wagon shop went out, causing a cessation of work in the mills and man-ufactories along the race. The water will be let in at the earliest moment.

A fire caught in the residence of Mrs. Chas. J. DeGraw in lower Oswego Falls this morning from a defective chimney. By the timely arrival of help it was sub-dued without much loss. Carpets and some furniture were slightly damaged.

The new fire council convened last evening. Chief S. B. Whitaker was detained by sickness and Jefferson Bai-ley called the meeting to order. S. B. Mead was elected secretary, pro tem. The council adjourned without doing any business, until the 25th inst.

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's lecture in Stephens' Opera House last evening was listened to by an appreciative audience. Her subject, "The Coming Man," was handled in a masterly style and replete with valuable suggestions and informa-tion. It was one of the most finished educational as well as rhetorical efforts ever delivered in Fulton. Her voice is pleasant, annunciation perfect and her speech deliberate and understanding. An effort will be made to place her be-fore a Fulton audience again at no dis-tant day.

The action against Frederick J. Allen an alleged habitual drunkard whose mental condition and capacity to man-age his own affairs was to have been in-vestigated in Fulton last Thursday was finished yesterday. The case was ad-journed from Thurs'ay. It was found Mr. Allen was incapacitated from man-aging his own business. Mr. Allen did not war against the proceedings it being understood that he will be allowed to control his business as long as he re-frains from using intoxicants. Mr. Allen has expressed himself as anxious to lead a different life and his friends will extend all the encouragement pos-sible. L. D. Wilder of Cleveland and H. C. Howe of Fulton appeared for the defendant and W. H. Kenyon of Oswego for plaintiff. S. Mortimer Coon of Os-wego was Commissioner.

By reference to the proceedings of the Board of Trustees it will be seen that a portion of that body are disposed to bat-tle against appropriating funds that will allow the necessary village work to be performed. Andrew Jones was not Willard Johnson's choice for Street Commissioner and he is laboring to withhold him from assuming the duties of his office or to draw pay. Mr. Jones is working and will continue to until his term of office expires. The streets must not be left in a filthy condition; defective sidewalks and bridges neg-lected; street lamps and crosswalks abandoned and the general prosperity of our village be retarded to appease the wrath of any man. Money was voted at the charter election to carry on the work and it can be used for no other purpose and the Board at its sec-ond meeting voted a compensation for Street Comissioner and help to be em-ployed by him. Mr. Johnson says the charter will not allow the expenditure of money without the assent of four trustees and this he will not permit. The world moves and so does the Street Commissioner and his force.

Joshua Gifford needs watching in his present condition of mind. It is believ-ed that if he has an opportunity to take his life he will do so. The old man seems completely exhausted, and two or three times yesterday he dropped his gray head on the table in front of him and seemed to sleep. He has become very restless and uneasy, and looks at each juryman in a pitiful way, as if he partly comprehended how much depend-ed upon their feeling toward him.

Deserving of Patronage.

It affords us much pleasure to an-nounce to our readers the existence and rapid growth of the new marble and granite works of Mr. C. F. Salladin, situated in the Stephens block on Cay-uga street, two doors east of the Opera House. While walking by his place of business the other day we chanced to drop in and there saw an extremely large display of the best executed work we have ever seen in this section of the country. The proprietor is gentleman-ly and courteous and took great pains to point out and explain to us the vari-ous points of interest in the workings of marble, granite, etc. and we would advise our readers whether intending purchasing or not to call on him, as a half hour or more can be spent both pleasantly and profitably in viewing the work. Mr. Salladin employs none but the most expert workmen, foremost among whom is Mr. R. Y. Allen, the most accomplished designer and sculp-tor in Northern New York. The de-signs which he works from are entirely original and extremely unique. Among some of the work now finished is a high-ly polished "Rutland Blue" marble monument surmounted with a Bible and and prayer book over which is careful-ly thrown an exquisitely carved drap-ery. On the face a finely carved hand with the index finger pointing upward and a well cut inscription which shows taste and skill in cutting never excelled and seldom equaled. Also a somewhat plain but very tasteful monu-ment of the same material to the mem-ory of the wife of Rev. O. C. Lathrop, one to be erected at the grave of the late S. W. Brewster of Hannibal. This is design is very plain but rich in ma-terial and execution. It is very large and weighs in the neighborhood of six-ty thousand pounds. There are many more under way among which are one to the memory of the late Thos. Burns of Oswego Falls, Rev. Mr. Peck of Oswego Falls, Hiram Cook of Fulton, the late B. Peets of Fulton, W. J. Wendell, FairHaven, Mrs. Henderson, Fulton, the late wife of David Sears of Pennellville, and many others which space forbids mention. 48t1

BECAUSE

"I have no other than a woman's reason:
I think him so, because I think him so."
[TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

There are a great many ways of get-ting at a thing; and the reason for any given action, in more cases than not, sifts down to that of the typical wom-an—"because." There are thousands who spend their entire lives dreaming about going to bed poor and waking up rich; and that is as far as they ever get towards riches, because—they only dream. Sudden riches do not come in that way, but they never learn the les-son until it is to late, and then do not know why it is,beyond the very definite reason—"Because." Many people are kept poor because they do not keep themselves informed concerning the changes in the business world of which they might take advantage, and when asked why they always seem to be un-fortunate, the only reply is—"Because." Not least among the advantageous facts which it is worth the beginnings of a fortune for every man, for every youth, yes, and even for every boy to know, is that Kent & Miller, the well-known manufacturers of Ready Made Clothing and the leading dealers therein, have goods on exhibition which will bear the closest investigation as to their merits, in style, in material, in finish, in fit. Any one who investigates and compares arrives at the knowledge of a truth which is realy more valuable than the entire suit of clothes, or overcoat per-haps. He learns that a good garment, well made and durable when sold at a reasonable rate, is more economical than many a cheaper article elsewhere, which, if bought speedily, becomes a total loss besides the cost of an extra suit. Why are you so foolish is the query; and the inevitable reply is "Because I didn't buy.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address, The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 50,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup will relieve an ordinary cough or cold. It does not dry up a cough like many preparations, and leave the disease behind it but acts directly on the throat and bronchial tubes, removing all the phlegm and morbid matter that accumulates in the throat and lungs. It allays all irritation, and renders the voice clear and distinct. Trial size free. Sold by M. M. Williams.

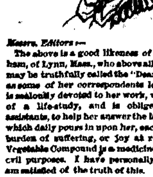
A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]



Messrs. Editors:—

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1. per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.

All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.

For Man & Beast.

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

A Death Bed Impression.

The N. Y. Tribune is authority for this singular, and unquestionably truthful story about the late ex-Governor Jewell: On the morning of the day before his death, it is said, the late Marshall Jewell awoke from a sound sleep and at once asked what was the matter at the house of Wm. E. Dodge. A telegram had just been received by Mr. Jewell's family, announcing the death of Mr. Dodge, but it was not thought best to let Mr. Jewell know it, so he was told that all was well there. He would not believe them. Something had happened, he said; some great affliction had overtaken the family. Insisting upon this, and refusing to accept his family's denials, he at length induced them to telegraph to New York, to see what was the matter. But Mrs. Jewell so worded the message as to instruct those who received it to answer that everything was all right. When that answer came, they told Mr. Jewell who refuses to believe it and asked to see the message itself. The request being granted, and having the ocular proof before his eyes, in the shape of an unmistakeable telegraphic message, he dubiously remarked: "Well, it does seem to be so; but it it is very strange; I know there is something the matter; that something serious has happened in Mr. Dodge's house in New York." And that impression he retained until he too ended his earthly life.

☞ With Diamond Dyes any lady can get as good results as the best practical dyer. Every dye warranted true to name and sample.

Certainly He Would.

The other evening as a muscular citizen was passing a house on Montcalm street, a lady, who stood at the gate, called out to him:

"Sir! I appeal to you for protection!"

"What's the trouble?" he asked as he stopped short.

"There's a man in the house and he wouldn't go out doors when I ordered him to!"

"He wouldn't eh?" "We'll see about that!"

Thereupon the man gave the woman his coat to hold and sailed into the house spitting on his hands. He found a man down at the supper table, and he took him by the neck and remarked:

"Nice style of a brute you are, eh? Come out o' this or I'll break every bone in your body!"

The man fought back, and it was not until a chair had been broken and the table upset, that he was hauled out of doors by the legs, and given a fling thro' the gate. Then, as the muscular citizen placed his boot where it would do the the most hurt, he remarked: "Now, then, you brass-faced old tramp you move on or I'll finish you."

"Tramp! Tramp!" shouted the victim, as he got up, "I'm no tramp! I own this property and live in this house!"

"You do?"

"Yes, and that's my wife holding your coat!"

"Thunder!" whispered the victim, as he gazed from one to the other, and realized that the wife had got square through him; and then he made a grab for his coat and slid into the darkness with his shirt bosom torn open, a finger badly bitten and two front teeth ready to drop out.

A National Question.

A correspondent of the New York Sun writes the editor:

I am a great big hulking fellow; my better half is hardly half my size. Our baby took after its father in physical proportions. Attracted by the fine weather last Sunday, we thought we would take the hope of the house out and it was agreed, after he had been carefully wrapped up in his cloak, that I should carry him. I received all necessary instructions in regard to his being properly held to prevent taking cold, and everything went well until we heard a passer-by remark to a companion: "How funny to see a big man carrying a small baby!" And after that my wife insisted that I must surrender the baby at once to her. Now the baby, by comparison, looks small with me, but very big with her, and we had not gone far before we heard this remark: "Look at that big fellow loafing along and letting his poor wife carry that great big baby!"

"Now what I want to know is, who should carry the baby?"

Hans Yeager and the Butcher.

Hans Yeager sent his boy to the corner meat store, yesterday, for a quarter's worth of steak. When the boy brought it home, Hans observed that there was more bone than meat. He became riled over the matter, and rolling up the stuff again in the paper, he wabbled off in great haste to the meat store, where the following took place:

"Ouf I vas a butcher, und you vas now one, and you sendt your leedle poy for dwendy fife cent meat, und I gif him flifdeen cent pones und ten cent meat, you dinks dot vas righd?"

"The rule is, 'when you buy land you buy stones, when you buy meat you buy bones.' It sometimes happens that there is more bone in one cut than another."

"Vell, den; ouf I sendt my poy another time you gif him anoder cut."

"I have to give out as they come. I treat all of my customers alike."

"No sir-ee Bop! You make you mistake. You vas no goot mans. You don'd to yerselps do like you haf yerselps do to odder peoples." "I always try to do right by my fellow men."

"Dot might be drue, ober you don'd do right by yer feller schmall poy. Ouf mine frau gomes on dot shop she got goot meet; ouf I gomes on dot shop I got goot meat; ober ouf leedle Yacob gomes he got efery dime dwice as much pones as he got meat! How vas does? You dinks I got me a tog family vot gan on pones lif? Maype you dinks I vant to schtard a pone yard! And he wobbled out and off to a meat store kept by two men down the street.

"Doubtful friend is worse than a certain enemy," and vice versa a certain friend is infinitely better than a doubtful enemy. Thus Kidney Wort is an inccomparably better friend to the human race than whole catalogues full of doubtful nostrums. It is an unfailing remedy for that tormenting disease piles. It moves the bowels gently and freely, and thus removes the cause. Do not fail to try it faithfully either in dry or liquid form.

The Vanderbilts.

William H. Vanderbilt has eight children and eleven grand children. Should no pecuniary misfortune overtake him he will divide more than 150 millions of dollars among these fortunate descendants. His income is $9.92 every second. A correspondent of the Charleston "News and Courier" writes of Mr Vanderbilt's children: His four daughters are married to New Yorkers, and two have been presented with small palaces costing $600,000 apiece, while he is building houses for the other two at the corner of Fifth avenue and Fifty-fourth street, adjoining St Thomas' church. The ground for the two buildings cost $400,000 last spring and I suppose the house will cost double that. His two eldest sons Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr, who seems destined to occupy toward his father the same relation that William H, held to the Commodore and William K. Vanderbilt, the second son, are already millionaires in their own right, and are now finishing palaces which eclipse the house which Vanderbilt moved into last year. Cornelius Vanderbilt is the financier among the sons, while William K, is the æsthetic member of the family, having employed Richard M. Hunt to build his stone chateau at the corner of Fifty-second street and Fifth avenue, and having paid $385,000 for the carving stone alone on the inside of his house. Some of the tapestries for his house are now on exhibition at the Metropolitan museum, while the painters and decorators are giving the last touches. The house has been three years in building, and has occupied the whole time of two architects, working under Hunt, and six draughtsmen. The design for one of the mantles alone required three months's work by two men. George, the youngest son, of whom no mention is made above, is a bibliophile, and has an ambition to own the most costly library in America. His good mother watches him so carefully that no designing female will easily entrap him into matrimony.

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."

Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."

River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."

520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

Y., on the 16th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m. in Liber 109 of mortgages, at page 210, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Auringer, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage as follows: Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86). The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4) block number twenty-eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 2d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 7th day of March 1883. ORLANDO HOWELL.

Howe & Rice, Att'ys, Assignee.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagor Nathan Rowlee mortgagee Harmon J. Rinons, mortgage dated March 31, 1879, to secure four hundred and eighty dollars ($480) part of the purchase price, and recorded in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego May 2d 1879 in book 94 of mortgages at page 425. Said mortgage has been duly assigned to James H. Langdon of Oswego Falls N. Y., who is the owner thereof. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby county of Oswego, and state of "New York, and being five acres to be laid off in a "square form as near as may be on the south west "corner of forty acres on lot seventy-one in the old "military township of Hannibal, now Granby, and "bounded as follows: East and north by the original "line of said lot No seventy-one. South by the road "leading from Oswego Falls to Hannibalville, and "west by a line to run from said road leading as "aforesaid to the north line of said lot and parallel "with the east line of said lot 71, and at such a distance therefrom as shall exclude the said five acres "of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the 1st publication of this notice the sum of one hundred dollars principal and interest thereon from October 1st 1881, which is the whole sum unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding in law or equity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid and notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction, to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 6th day of July 1883 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, April 3d 1883. JAMES H. LANGDON, Assignee and owner of said mortgage.

When Your Wife's Out of Town.

Of all the insiduous
Temptations invidious
Contrived by the devil for pulling men down,
There's none more delusive,
Seductive, abusive,
Than the snare to the man with his wife out of town.

He feels such a delightfulness
Stay-out-all-nightfulness,
Shall-I-get tight-fulness—
I own it with pain!—
A bachelor rakishness,
What-will-you-take t-ishness,
Next day's headacheness,
None can explain!

His wife may be beautiful,
Tender and dutiful—
'Tis not that her absence should cause him delight
But the cured opportunity,
Sale immunity,
Scatters his scruples as day scatters night.

With a take-every-trick-ishness,
Full-as-a-tick-ishness,
I'll-be a brick-ishness,
Though conscience frown;
With-a-forth-let-us-steal someness,
Kick-up-your-heels-someness,
There's a wife of the de'il sometimes
In a wife out of town.

TALKS ON HARMONY.

The Republican Party Awakening To the Necessity of Harmony to Insure Victory—A Stalwart View of the Situation—Concessions, etc., etc.

The New York Commercial Advertiser was a pronounced Stalwart journal during the factional dissension in the Republican party and regarding the present and future of the grand old party it says editorially:—

The Albany Express says the Commercial is disposed to take a gloomy view of Republican prospects. There is where our position is missapprehended. If the Republican party is true to itself; true to the principles that have sent it so often to victory, and again exhibits the fearlessness for which it was once distinguished, it will be irresistible. The Commercial has so much confidence in the intelligence of the members of the Republican party that it is certain no temporizing or make-shifts will satisfy them. They look for courage, force, and decision; they want something to fight for, and will not be appeased with simple but noisy claims to retain their representatives in office. Our esteemed Albany contemporary says if we "concede" something all will go well! What shall we concede? The "Republican machine" here is ready for reformation. John J. O'Brien, who has done more for Republican success than any twenty men who are yelping for "reform" says he is ready to accept any sensible plan that may be recommended for reorganization, but will offer none himself because any suggestion he might make would be regarded with suspicion. What else shall we concede? Confess that the supporters of Folger were knaves or fools? That Arthur, Grant and Conkling are public enemies? That every man who wanted Grant renominated in 1880, sought to destroy the Republic, and every man who wished to see Conkling returned to the Senate deserves nothing but abuse? This seems to be the quality of the harmony desired by the other side, but is it the kind of concessions the Express proposes to make? The men from whom these "concessions" are demanded never deserted their colors. They did not worship strange idols in 1872, 1874, or 1882. In and out of season they have been loyal, upright, faithful republicans. And now they are asked to concede? What, and to whom? The Albany Journal has made its ipse dixit. They must give "guarantees of good faith." As Mr [illegible] would say. "Here's richness!" "Guarantee of good faith" to the people who deserted their flag last year! The [illegible] the Commercial speaks for, and if we may judge from the tone of the correspondence that comes in from every section, there are not a few of them, have never given occasion for any one to question their Republicanism. When [illegible] was to be fought they were on hand and no liberals, reformers, or [illegible] who sought to weaken the [illegible] were ever able to shake their allegiance. They want harmony and peace [illegible] with honor. If the re[illegible] New York "machine" will [illegible] "belief in the divine [illegible] they cannot rule, [illegible]

The "reorganization" of the New York machine being conceded, what will the other side concede? Let us hear what they are willing to do for the good of "harmony?" Since our esteemed Albany contemporary has got into such amiable company, where—

"Soft voices had they that with tender plea Whispered of peace, and truth, and friendliness unquelled," perhaps it will ask them to make a little "mem," of what their concessions are to be? By this all hands will be able to see where the ship is steering and where it is likely to bring up. The late George Dawson once told the writer of this that the Commercial could do more to bring harmony to the Republican party of New York than any other agency; but if he were still living he must needs confess that our esteemed contemporary the Albany Express is the only paper in the State capable of that. It commands the confidence of the "machine" men, who have never seen it waver in its devotion to Republican principles, and seems by some occult process to have ingrafted itself into the confidence of those who have assailed it with more bitterness than ever Democrat did. But being thus admirably situated, it stands in a position to command the whole. Let it inquire, then, of its new friends what they will "concede," and perhaps the Republicans of New York may be happy yet.

Humor Among The Negros.

The Hon. John Kelly introduced Congressman S S Cox to a large audience in Steinway Hall, and announced that Mr. Cox would tell what he knew of African humor. The proceeds of the lecture went to aid the Woman's Home, in charge of the Sisters of St. Joseph. Many Roman Catholic clergymen were in the audience.

Mr. Cox's lecture was chiefly a series of anecdotes of negro humor Colored men, he said, are humorous not witty. They are unconsiously humorous, even in their most serious moments. Thus when a colored man was baptised in the river, he struck out for the shore, shouting with unchilled fervor; "Glory, glory! Hallelujah. The devil be—"

No colored man in Congress, Mr. Cox said had ever voted against amnesty, even when the whites voted against it. It was difficult to give an exactly satisfactory definition of humor. Even Congressmen did not always know what it was. Some of them had it, and were not aware of the fact, others thought they had a good deal, while they had none at all. There was humor in the remark of a colored man who, on receiving a glass of whisky which his master told him was twenty-five years old, said it was the smallest child of its age he had ever seen. Another negro was refused admittance to the Badtist Church, because he was too bad. The Methodists, however, took him, hoping to make him better. He said the Baptists wanted ready cash, while the Methodists were willing to give him six months' credit.

Recently Mr. Cox was walking in Atlanta, Ga., when a darkey called "Sam, Sam!" apparently addressing him. "Well," he said, "what do you want?" "Oh I was speaking to that other colored gentleman across the street, sir, not to you," was the answer.

A colored preacher in the South said he did not care to speak of the Ten Commandments. They dampened the feelings of his congregation. The lecturer once heard this toast from a colored orator, "Here's to Gen. Butler, who, though he has a white skin, bless God, has a black heart." There was no sarcastic or disrespectful meaning behind the words.

Fashion Notes.

Turban and polo caps are worn by two-year old boys.

Embroidery is the trimming preferred for thick white dresses.

Girls of four to ten years wear Jersey and sailor-blouse dresses.

Boys of four years wear kilt suits and strait English dresses.

The skirts of infants' dresses gathered to the yoke are very long and full.

For summer cloaks for infants white ripped pique or white basket cloth is used.

Long overskirts, looped up on the left side as high as the waist, have been introduced.

Girls of two years wear flowing Mother Hubbard and half-loose English princess dresses.

Sashes are little used with the first short dresses, the full flowing effect being simpler and prettier.

For very ceremonious occasions fashion favors the English style of low neck and short sleeves.

Basques of dresses are made in single-breasted frock coat style, or in pleated basques, with narrow belts.

The newest caps for babies are the close cottage shapes made of embroidered muslin done in open patterns like arabesques.

There is little change in infant's dresses. They are still made of white nainsook and French lawn, with high-necked yokes.

The first short dresses, which are put on children at the age of six months, are white nainsook slips with high yolks and long sleeves.

Very long Jersey gloves of cashmere or fine Austrian wool, devoid of buttons, come in all the dark sweet shades to match the costumes, [illegible]

LETTER FROM MARTHA.

She Resumes Her Pen—Spring in the Mill—Walks, Talks and Reflections.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And days O' lang Syne? [Burns.
And the Spring comes slowly up this way.
[Coleridge.

Mine be a cot beside the hill;
A beehive's hum shall soothe my ear.
A willowy brook, that turns a mill,
With many a fall, shall linger near.
[Samuel Rogers.

After several requests of friends, who placed too high an estimate on the letters of Martha, I have characteristic of my sex, yielded to my better convictions and will resume the publication at irregular periods of some of my observations and experiences, from which the readers of THE TIMES for over a year have had a vacation.

Ned, my husband says, "you will find it more or less difficult to warm a second time a clam in the shell however tolerable it may have been at the first heat." I am some of that opinion myself, yet notwithstanding this cold comfort I will take that one chance and think Ned will chip in and "assist" me to some facts and fancies that my limited opportunity for observation might not take in; for ten to twelve hours in the mill is being deprived of the sunshine and the walk in life's varied avenues as well as that practical education that comes from the magnetic presence of the active, pushing and never tiring man or woman who are earnestly struggling for something better and higher.

My loom has run with more or less loss of power by friction, and I have sometimes been short of lubricating oil; but since my husband's mother came from England and occupied the east end of our little cottage it has been different. She is a noble, pure minded woman, a mother-in-law whose shoulders could gracefully bear the silken and purple mantle of Penelope;

"She laid upon the loom
Within her rooms a web of delicate threads
Ample in length and breadth; * * *
So went she on
Weaving that ample web, and every night
Unravelled it by torchlight."

All these twenty long years sage Penelope used her hands in her household affairs and the weaving of fine linen and she had but little time or desire to gad or gossip.

When anxious fears disturbed my breast
Who lulled those anxious fears to rest
And bade me feel no more oppres't?
My mother-in-law!

Thus the warm spring days with balmy air fan my aching brain and give new life to my weary hands. The peep and sweet evening song of the frog has settled to business, and spring has unconsciously slipped from the cold lap of winter to the green earth and is already filling its apron with the flowers of the crocus and trailing arbutus. The robins and blue birds are building their nests in a tree near my window and they are so active and chatter all the day long, as they so deftly gather material, and I place upon my window-sill shreds of fine wool with which they can give the "silver lining" to the nest in which the young are to snugly lie and open their broad mouths as they hear the rustle of the mother's wings with the dainty morsel to drop into the opening as she chidingly talks to them, as she rests upon the outer rim of the nest; where the bill of fare too plainly indicates she is not keeping a second-class boarding house but is a generous and respectable landlady.

Andromache has even caught the spirit of inspiration that comes with spring and its necessities and has put on her high necked apron and has bought a crocus and six hens and the first week broke the corner in the egg market. The back yard is strewn with tin cans and the wind whistles mournfully across the open end and proclaims their emptiness and utter desolation. The clustering around the entrance of the Smith House and Gray's saloon doors too plainly indicate that the winter months are over, and with the instinct of wild geese the shiftless drones and loafers seek a congenial spot, where they can warm their shins and stomachs without being long out of the sunshine. The wives and mothers of these bipeds are as a rule at home in the meantime and with a long handled broom bring down cobwebs and are raking down the front lawn. Thus does beer and bourbon contribute to home industry and the development of feminine muscle.

My eldest daughter, Jane, has been a member of the C. L. S. Circle and was married this spring and has removed to the suburbs of Ingell's Crossing, where Ned and I go up for a walk after the Sunday morning service in our new church. We hear and see ever so many nice little sermons, and the roadway and green fields are filled with volunteer choirs, and every songster has a solo of his own composition set to faultless music.

Josephine and I are in the midst of housecleaning, doing what we can on Saturday after factory hours. Ned has taken down the parlor stove and removed the cooking range to the summer kitchen and put up the stove pipe very nicely; for since adopting the "new version" of the Testament, (not of the stove) he has escaped the usual head-winds and friction incident to such labor—"condemn it!" is the preferable word.

The New Two-Cent Stamp.

It is stated that the post office authorites have at last agreed upon a design for a new two-cent stamp. It is not to present the head of Grant or Garfield, but a medallion of Washington is the most prominent feature. Half round at the top are the words "United States Postage," and on the lower portion are the words "Two Cents," divided by the figure 2. The design is conspicuous for plainness, and the portrait of Washington is pronounced perfect.

Oil Discovery.

A Mr. Brooks, who lives about a mile north of Somerset, Pa, dug a well on his farm last fall, but the water had such an odor that he could not use it. Upon examination of the well a few days since he found it contained about ten feet of petroleum. In the same neighborhood petroleum is running in a small stream from a spring. About two years ago a Pennsylvania oil man examined the land in that section, and wanted to lease the farms for boring and inspection but a number of the farmers refused to lease their lands, and the matter was soon dropped, but now the excitment is on the rise.

One who knows says that in the country they blow a horn before dinner, but in town they take one.

"Gracious, wife," said a father as he looked at his son William's torn trousers, "get that little Bill reseated."

A woman who fell desperately in love with a man on sight and married him, refers to him as her lord and mashed her.

Dorsey says that it is only "sometimes" that a postmaster is a gentleman. That's so; in some country offices he is a lady.

"Is that your dog Mr. Trigg?" "Yes, sir, that's my dog." "Is he a setter?" "He's of that type, yes sir." "Oh! then he's a type setter." [Rome Sentinel.

"Ella is better looking," remarked Mrs. Brown with a smirk, "but Lucy will get married first." "Yes," chimed in her husband, "gimme Luci-fer-matches everytime."

The sale of the revised New Testament has suddenly come to a stop in this country, greatly to the discomfiture of the publishers and the astonishment of the committee.

The Chicago Tribune remarks that the United States went on a land grant debauch in 1862 which lasted ten years. It is now waking up to the inevitable head ache of repentance and reform.

It doesn't take a norther invalid very long to get well in Florida. When the first week's board bill is presented, he generally says, "I guess I am well enough to start for home this afternoon."

An exchange asks whether anybody can tell any characteristic fact about the boyhood of the political "boss." Yes; he was the big boy who when he saw a little fellow fishing took the pole away from him and said: "Johnny, let me catch fish for you while you put on the bait." And Johnny stood by by and wondered where the fun came in.

One of the most influential Georgia grangers was superintending affairs at his cotton press the other day, when he was accosted by a neighbor: "I see, colonel, the tariff bill has passed." "Is that so! How about cotton ties?" "Still 35 per cent ad valorem." "Well, here, you boys thar, sift another shovel of sand in the middle of that bale; I can't afford to reform till the tariff does." And the sifting was strictly attended to.

NINETY-THREE thousand acres of land were planted with timber in Kansas last year. Forestry is attracting the attention of all the western states. In the east everything is being stripped and no provision for the future is being made.

ILLINOIS took a scattering sort of test vote on Monday on the temperance question. Four towns out of forty-eight reported ignored the question, six voted for high license, seventeen were prohibition entirely and twenty-five were for license. The majority thus appear against prohibition.

THE famous Horace Greeley farm containing 80 acres at Chappaqua, N. Y., will be sold in a few days. Here the Sage of Chappaqua wrote "A Busy Life," "What I know about Farming," and "History of the Rebellion." Horace Greeley died a poor, heart broken and disappointed man. He has one daughter living.

GEORGE SCHELLER, who was tried in Milwaukee, Wis., last week on a charge of incendiarism in firing the Newhall House in that city by which sixty lives were lost, was acquitted. When the verdict was announced the most extraordinary scene ever witnessed in a court room took place. Scheller's friends were almost frantic with delight.

AMONG the bills passed in the Senate last week, was one to compel telegraph, telephone and electric light companies to paint their poles within the limits of villages and cities, and prohibiting them cutting trees without the consent of the owners. In the Assembly, a bill was passed prohibiting persons under eighteen years of age from carrying firearms.

THE Pension List to be published by order of Congress will make a work of forty-five hundred pages and be given to the public just as soon as completed. It will give the names of all pensioners, their post office address, the amount of pension they draw, how long they have been drawing it and the nature of the disability that entitles them to a pension

THE John A. Andrews Post, No 15 G. A. R., of Boston, Mass., has led in a movement to do away with flowers for Decoration Day, for the reason that the money expended for flowers at that season of the year in Boston could be better applied in providing for the material needs of the widows and children of dead comrades. This post decorates hundreds of graves every year, and will hereafter use only silk flags for this purpose.

RINGS and cliques that have flourished under previous Democratic state administrations do not fancy Governor Cleveland. They think he looks out too much for the people, to the prejudice of his party. It is pleasant to have a governor that can rise above partizanship if necessary. Governor Cleveland's fearlessness and evident disregard of the objections of politicians gives evidence of a level head.

SUPERINTENDENT of Insurance McCall is applying the knife to his department. Monday afternoon he notified seventeen employees in the department receiving salaries aggregating $28,400, that April 30 their names would be dropped from the pay roll for the purpose of reducing expenses. There will be no appointments to fill the vacancies. There is reform going on at Albany without any great amount of blowing.

QUEEN VICTORIA objects to the Prince of Wales attending the coronation of the Czar of Russia in Moscow next month. She is afraid Nihilists will be on hand with explosives and prefers to have her government represented by some one outside of the royal family. She has issued an order directing Sir Garnet Wolseley to represent the British government upon that occasion. Sir Garnet's life is considered as valuable by many as the Prince of Wales'.

BRIGHAM YOUNG'S son, Joseph, is a backslider from his father's faith. He rejects as nonsense the visions and dreams and prophecy, the gift of tongues and of healing, baptism for the dead plural and celestial marriages, the creation of bodies into spirits, the progression of men into gods, each with a world of people to rule over. Perhaps he intends to found a new alleged religion. It might assist in breaking up the Mormons which the United States government has not the courage to undertake.

A FRIGHTFUL cyclone passed over Wesson, Miss., Sunday. Its approach was made known by inky clouds and roars of distant thunder that the inhabitants thought was an earthquake. When the rain began to descend, lightning, thunder and wind combined to make a pandemonium and make the existence of life almost intolerable. Over two hundred buildings were blown from their foundations. At Wesson thirteen were killed and sixty wounded. At Beaureguard, a town adjacent Wesson, twenty-three were killed and ninety wounded. From other parts of the country wind storms are reported but not with as serious results as attended the one in Mississippi.

It is rumored that a young man who died in Roosvelt last week confessed assistance in the robbery of Merrick Corey's grave at Pennelville some time ago. A Syracuse medical student is said to be implicated.

Oswego Palladium—The McGibeny family, it is stated, have had $11,000 receipts in eleven weeks. They have only one hired agent and can lay up about all the proceeds of their concerts to pay for cradles and bibs and have some left for rainy days.

There has been considerable said in various papers about a strike in the Oswego Falls woolen mills. There is no strike. About every three months a squib goes the rounds of the press that "a strike is now in progress at the Oswego Falls woolen mills."

Weedsport Sentinel—A doctor, an undertaker and a tomb stone dealer all met the other day at the residence of a Hannibal farmer and sold him a monument. The poor farmer was aghast at the ominous chain of characters awaiting his demise. A lawyer stood outside waiting to be summoned in to draw the will. Could they consistently belong to the anti monopoly party and yet have such a meeting?

Frederick W. Eames, patentee and owner of the Eames vacuum brake, was murdered in his manufactory in Watertown Friday morning by a pattern maker named Higham. Eames had just taken possession of the works after a law suit of several months with members of the firm. Higham was displeased with the decision of the court and there was a bad feeling between him and Eames. It is claimed that the shot was fired in self defence. Eames was forty-two years of age and Higham thirty-five.

Midland Talk.

The new candidate for Wall street honors says the New York Sun seems to be that old sufferer, the Ontario and Midland stock. In about a month's time the company is to enter New York over the Buffalo and West Shore track, now in course of completion, and no end of lumber, hay, milk, butter, cheese and other articles of first necessity are to be daily landed at our doors from the lake regions and the central part of this state. The road runs from Oswego to Middletown over its own track, and is to reach Weehawken, over the Buffalo and West Shore line, on or before the first of June. The favorable prospect has already affected the price of the stock on the company, which passed thro' so many vicissitudes and reconstructions as to be considered a dead cock in the pit. Thousands of shares have been dealt in lately at rising quotations, while but a short time ago it was not an easy task to find a quotation for the stock. The road is capitalized at $60,000,000, of which $2,000,000 is represented by the preferred stock, and $58,000 by the common. There is no mortgage of any kind upon the road, and 8 per cent. has been steadily paid upon the preferred stock.

[illegible] Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY [illegible] (his home is 156 W. 84th street, N. Y.) he came up here and the change of air and water had a fearful effect upon him. His face broke out in blotches and pimples. I had seen the FAVORITE REMEDY used. I told him to get a bottle. He did so, and in three days' time the rash and fever entirely disappeared. It seemed to cleanse the blood with such rapidity. I have recommended Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY to a great many persons who were bilious and troubled with stagnant blood. FAVORITE REMEDY never fails to purify and strengthen. I know this to be a fact."

Of Interest to Farmers.

The United States census of 1880 shows that the number of cows in the county of Oswego the year previous was 37,752; the number of gallons of milk produced was 10,077,763; the average number of gallons of milk per cow was 267. The difference in the average yield of cows in different counties was very great and can scarcely be accounted for. In Herkimer the average was 344 gallons; in Orange, where milk is purchased for the New York market, it was 400 gallons; in Otsego it was 169 gallons; in St Lawrence it was 164. Leaving out Orange county, the yield in Oswego county is somewhat above the average.

Parish.

PARISH, April 21,—The teachers' institute held here this week is one of the largest ever held in Oswego county, about 300 teachers being present. Professors Johnnot and Kennedy have been very energetic in their labors in their instruction being practical and progressive. Messrs. Dr Lee and Sheldon of Oswego Normal School gave us some good talk and teaching. The commissioners held examinations during the institute. Much praise is due them for their efforts.

Mrs. VanCott is here holding a series of revival meetings. There is something of an awakening on the part of sinners and several have been converted. Her preaching is urgent and effective and we hope the result will be good.

From Across the Ocean.

The English government is leaving no stone unturned in an attempt to mete out justice to murderers and members of dynmaite parties. Two of the Burke and Cavendish murderers have been sentenced to death and a third is on trial at present. Other accomplices stand virtually in the shadow of the gallows. Parties arrested for attempting to blow up government buildings and others found with explosives in their possession are having a hearing. One of the worst features of these plots is the fact that many of them are hatched upon Ameriban soil, and emissaries are sent over the waters to carry them into effect. The terror is widespread in England, for no one can tell where or when some terrible work of destruction may fall.

Mr. J. A. Wheelock, a gentleman well known to many Fulton people died in Hartford, Conn., Saturday of apoplexy, aged 53 years. He removed from Fulton in 1860. Previous to that he was in business in Fulton owning a dry goods and grocery store in the Tucker block. Mr. Wheelock was the first merchant in Fulton to introduce the free delivery of goods. His wife who survives him was a daughter of the late Nicholas Moss and a sister of Mrs. Chas. Whitaker and Mrs. Wm. E Taylor. Mrs Whitaker left Monday to attend the funeral.

Henry Alkenbrecker left his home in Oswego February 27th and all trace of him was lost. Many stories were circulated to account for his sudden disappearance. Sunday afternoon his body was found floating in the water near Rathbun's dock. The Palladium says a cut which Dr. Stockwell thinks was made before death was found near the crown of his head, but this would not prove that he was a victim to foul play as the wound might be the result of striking either the ice or the river bottom immediately before death. An empty pocket book and a valuable watch and chain were found on his person.

That was probably a conscience stricken man who entered the store of Penfield, Lyon & Co. in Oswego the other day, and after receiving an affirmative reply to his question if the firm was in business thirty years ago, said that a man who had obtained a barrel of flour from them about thirty years ago, thought he would feel easier in mind if he would pay for it. It was estimated that flour was worth $4 per barrel thirty years ago, and that if the money had been put at interest during that time, it would have quadrupled. The stranger handed $16 to the clerk, and without revealing his identity walked out of the store.

WHITEWASHING.

Thomas Otis wishes to inform the public that he is prepared to do whitewashing, Kalsomining and paper hanging. All work entrusted in my care will receive prompt attention. Leave orders at Dexter's meat market, on Oneida St., and Charles Holden's market on Second street. THOMAS OTIS.

At the Woman's Suffrage State Convention held in Troy, last week, Mrs Julia Gage of Fulton, Oswego county was one of the vice-presidents.

Miss Nellie Cavanaugh for over a year a saleslady in Dyer's day goods store, will leave to-morrow morning for New York where she has accepted a position in Harper's publishing house.

At a musicale to be given in Lysander, Friday evening by Mrs R. Bouton who instructs a class at that place Messrs Eli M. DeRusha and W. P. Hillick of this village have been engaged to assist.

Gordon D. Ball esq., was appointed Notary Public by Governor Cleveland last Wednesday. Mr. Ball resides near Volney Centre and residents of the eastern and central part of the town will be saved much inconvenience by making a note of his appointment.

On the first page will be found an interesting article from the New York Commercial Advertiser on the political situation in the Republican party. Just at this time when a serious attempt is being made to harmonize all the elements its perusal will be valuable.

The Utica cheese market opened Monday. The offerings were small. The average price paid was thirteen cents. At Little Falls 2,954 boxes were sold at prices ranging from ten to thirteen and one-half cents. The continued cold weather is having a depressing effect on dairymen.

The sixty-fourth anniversary of the establishment of Odd Fellows in America will be celebrated by Neahtawanta lodge in Fulton to-morrow evening at their rooms in the Dexter block. There will be dancing and refreshments will be served. All Odd Fellows are requested to be present.

Wedding cards announce the marriage to-day in Oakland, Cal., of J. Clayton Hill to Miss Ida B. Hill of that city. Mr. Hill will be remembered as a Fulton boy and was for some time a salesman in B. J. Dyer's dry goods store. He is a son of J. M. Hill. His friends extend congratulations.

Two years ago there were but few Democratic officials in Oswego county whereas at present that party is well represented. The Democrats have a county judge, two coroners, county clerk, member of assembly, canal superintendent, majority in the board of supervisors and numerous minor officers. With the exception of member of assembly these changes have taken place within one year.

The Gifford Trial.

The trial of Joshua Gifford for the murder of his wife progresses in Oswego and attracts but little interest. The attendance is thin and no enthusiasm is manifested. The evidence for the people closed yesterday which was mainly a repetition of the testimony given at the coroner's inquest and published at that time in full in THE TIMES. In the afternoon Mr C. W. Avery presented the case for the defense, and at the conclusion of his remarks Joshua Gifford was placed the stand and testified.

Concert.

The second term of the Oswego Falls Singing school will close Monday evening, April 30, 1883, with a concert at Howe's hall, Oswego Falls. The following talented local musicians have kindly consented to assist making the event a most certain success:—Messrs N. H. Gilbert, G. E. Smiddy, J. F. Cooper, F. E. Goodjon and Misses Gertie Ottman, Mattie Parkhouse, Gertie F. Stephens and others. The programme will be of every variety—solos, duets, quartets and choruses—under the direction of Mr. W. Chase. Admission 25 cents.

"The Chimes of Normandy."

To-morrow evening the charming opera "Chimes of Normandy" will be produced in Stephens' Opera House by the Philharmonic Society, a party of ladies and gentlemen from Syracuse. There are seventy voices in the opera beside an orchestra of twenty-two pieces. Its production in Syracuse has elicited the unstinted praise of the city press and at the request of hundreds of leading citizens it has been repeated three times. The characters are admirably sustained. The opera contains all the elements of comedy, drama and music and cannot help in its varied situations of pleasing every one.

Reserved seats at Watson's, fifty cents, gallery, thirty-five cents.

Bacon's opening to-morrow.

Mrs. John Dyson of Oswego Falls, leaves to-day for England.

George Charlton and family have arrived home from England.

The weather has been decidedly wintry for the past week. A thin coating of snow covers the earth this morning.

M. R. Eggleston, of Minneapolis, Minn., is making his brother C. S. Eggleston a visit.

Annual rental of pews will occur at the M. E. church Monday, May 7th, from 2 to 4 p. m.

Erastus Wells, father-in-law of J. D. Lasher, leaves to-day for Beatrice, Neb., to make his son a visit.

Fulton people are fortunate in having the reigning opera "The Chimes of Normandy" produced for them.

Marlon H. Brando and family will leave Fulton for Providence, Rhode Island, Friday, where they will reside.

Frankie, son of Wm. Covill died April 19, aged 2 years and 5 months. Funeral was held Sunday at 2 o'clock p. m., Rev. A. M. Roe officiating.

Charles Sabin who took a position as salesman in Andrews Bros. grocery at Syracuse, has been promoted to a more remunerative place in the firm's employ.

Miss Emily W. Dyson of this village and Mr. Cornelius Ellis of Oswego Falls will be united in marriage at Zion church this evening at 7:30 o'clock by the Rector, Rev. E. Moyses.

Mrs. Dorliska Northrop died at the residence of her daughter Mrs. H. C. Howe, Monday morning, aged 66 years. Funeral will be held to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock from house.

One of the Rosenblooms left last evening for New York. This makes the second time they have been to New York since April 1st to buy stock for their custom and ready made stores.

Large audiences greeted the Rev. W. T. Markham at the M. E. church Sunday. He is a pleasant and fluent speaker and has created a very favorable impression among his parishioners.

Miss Myrtie Peek, the little Michigan girl, who rode in the running races at the Oswego Falls fair ground last summer, is out with a challenge to any lady equestrian in the United States to ride twenty miles or more for a stake of one or two thousand dollars a side.

At the earnest solicitation of friends "Martha" again takes up the pen and will furnish a series of articles and readable letters for THE TIMES. "Martha's" first production for 1883 appears on the first page of to-day's issue. "Martha" is a pleasant and interesting writer.

Chaplain McCabe's lecture in Nichols hall last evening, was well attended and proved very interesting. He dealt with the bright side of prison life and interlarded his lecture with enough spice and humor to rivet the closest attention of his auditors. As an entertaining lecturer his equal does not exist. The Chaplain made many friends in Fulton.

Mr. James Dourtherty of Fultonville, N. Y., and Miss Mary Lomasney of this village were united in marriage at the church of the Immaculate Conception, April 28th, by Rev. Father Kearney. After the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents. The presents were numerous and beautiful. Mr. and Mrs. Dourtherty left on the evening train for Albany where they will spend a few weeks, after which they will leave for Pennsylvania.

THE Ohio legislature has passed a bill which imposes an annual tax of $300 upon spiritualistic mediums. Spiritualists lay the responsibility for its introduction and passage to members of orthodox churches. They claim that mediums are the ministers of their religion and that a tax upon pastor and priests of other denominations could have been included in the act with equal propriety. They declare the act oppressive and unconstitutional, and will oppose its enactment to the bitter end.

Barney McCann was picked up by Officer Back Monday afternoon on First street completely drunk. He was placed in a wagon and deposited in jail. Barney told Justice Piper yesterday that he had been sick for two weeks and the thought of his being able to breathe fresh air once more pleased him so that he couldn't walk. Thirty days in jail or $5.00 fine was the sympathetic answer from the throne.

Barney paid but muttered: "By the Howly St Patrick, purty good rint for an hour's slape in the road."

NORTH POLE EXPEDITIONS.

[illegible] In [illegible] he said:—

"No, sir; this is not a secret organization. Some have said to us that church obligations forbid membership in secret societies, with strange objects and stringent oaths, but the Knights advertise their object and have no oaths. There is nothing in aim or attainment but is sought to be accomplished by every Christian body."

"I suppose that any and everybody that is able to pay the initiation fee is eligible for membership."

"Well, not exactly. But every person who earns an honest living, not less than eighteen years of age, without regard to sex, color, creed or nationality, whether manufacturer, employer of any kind, wage-worker or farmer, is eligible to become a member of the Order, except lawyers, bankers, professional gamblers stock brokers and any person who either makes or sells, or derives any part of his support from the sale of intoxicating drink."

"You hold your meetings with closed doors and so quiet is business transacted that it is almost impossible to learn of more than two or three members of the order. There is a certain degree of secrecy maintained I presume?" ventured THE TIMES.

"Yes; our meetings are held with closed doors. But this is true of every association. Those who believe in making honorable effort to attain the object sought by the Knights of Labor have no occasion to hold back on account of secrecy."

"How many assemblies have you in Fulton?"

"Two. In our assembly we have some of the best men in town. One assembly meets Thursday evening and the other alternate Friday and Saturday evenings. We are growing numerically strong. We intend fitting up a reading room and lecture hall. We will not relax our work until every working man in this vicinity is enrolled."

"To whom will people apply who wish to join this organization," asked THE TIMES.

"Any information desired by persons who wish to join the organization can be had by addressing 'Labor' box 75, Fulton post office."

"What are the objects and principles of the "Knights of Labor," enquired THE TIMES as his working friend started to move.

"The object is to ameliorate the condition of the men and women who work for a living. Our declaration of principles is a complete summary of the object sought to be attained. I have them on my tongue's end and will recite them to you":—

1. To bring within the fold of organization every department of productive industry, making knowledge a stand point for action, and industrial, moral worth, not wealth, the true standard of individual and national greatness.

2. To secure to the toilers a proper share of the wealth that they created; more of the leisure that rightfully belongs to them; more society advantages; more of the benefits, privileges and emoluments of the world; in a word, all those rights and privileges necessary to make them capable of enjoying, appreciating, defending and perpetuating the blessings of good government.

3. To arrive at the true condition of the producing masses in their educational, moral and financial condition, by demanding from the various governments the establishment of bureaus of labor statistics.

4. The establishment of co-operative institutions, productive and distributive.

5. The reserving of the public lands—the heritage of the people—for the actual settler. Not another acre for railroads or corporations.

6. The abolition of laws that do not bear equally upon capital and labor; the removal of unjust technicalities, delays and discrimination in the administration of justice; and the adopting of measures providing for the health and safety of those engaged in mining, manufacturing and building pursuits.

7. The enactment of laws to compel chartered corporations to pay their employees weekly, in full, for labor performed the preceding week, in the lawful money of the country.

8. The enactment of laws giving mechanics and laborers the first lien on their work for their full wages.

9. The abolishment of the contract system on national, state and municipal work.

10. The substitution of arbitration for strikes, whenever and wherever employees and employers are willing to meet on equitable grounds.

11. The prohibition of the employment of children in workshops, mines and factories before attaining their fourteenth year.

12. To abolish the system of letting out by contract the labor of convicts in our prisons and reformatory institutions.

13. To secure for both sexes equal pay for equal work.

14. The reduction of the hours of labor to eight hours per day, so that the laborers may have more time for social enjoyment and intellectual improvement, and be enabled to reap the advantages conferred by the labor-saving machinery which their brains have created.

BECAUSE

"I have no other than a woman's reason:
I think him so, because I think him so."
[Two Gentlemen of Verona.

There are a great many ways of getting at a thing; and the reason for any given action, in more cases than not, sifts down to that of the typical woman—"because." There are thousands who spend their entire lives dreaming about going to bed poor and waking up rich; and that is as far as they ever get towards riches, because—they only dream. Sudden riches do not come in that way, but they never learn the lesson until it is to late, and then do not know why it is, beyond the very definite reason—"Because." Many people are kept poor because they do not keep themselves informed concerning the changes in the business world of which they might take advantage, and when asked why they always seem to be unfortunate, the only reply is—"Because." Not least among the advantageous facts which it is worth the beginnings of a fortune for every man, for every youth, yes, and even for every boy to know, is that Kent & Miller, the well-known manufacturers of Ready Made Clothing and the leading dealers therein, have goods on exhibition which will bear the closest investigation as to their merits, in style, in material, in finish, in fit. THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

[illegible] bill, reminds a correspondent of an incident in the clerical experience of the Rev. Christopher Corey, of Le-Grange county, Indiana. Several years ago on a very cold day that excellent man rode on horseback a distance of six miles to perform a marriage ceremony. As he was about starting for home, having duly authorized the two hearts to beat as one, a coin was placed in his hand. He dropped it into his pocket and rode away. When he got home he looked at it, and lo! it was an old fashioned copper cent. The next morning the groom appeared at his door, and having explained with considerable embarrassment how the annoying mistake had been made, took back the cent and handed the clergyman a quarter.

*The surprising success of Mrs Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound for the several diseases peculiar to women forcibly illustrates the importance of her beneficent discovery and the fact that she knows how to make the most of it.

[Dr Haskill.

Wifely Patience.

"I have heard," said the kind hearted Austin female philanthropist to the woman who lived in a dilapidated shanty in the suburby, whose head was tied up and who had one arm in a sling, "I have heard that your husband beats you, and I thought I would consult with you to see if we could restrain him."

"You are mistaken, madame; my husband never beat me. We have lived together fifteen years, and he has never beat me yet," and the woman adjusted her arm in the sling.

"I am so glad to hear that I am mistaken," replied the female philanthropist.

"No," continued the woman, sadly, putting the bandage over her eye, he has never struck me a blow yet. He has kicked me in a dozen different places over forty different times, he has taken me by my two ears and bumped my head on the floor, or on the corner of the mantel-piece; he has poured hot water down my back; pulled out my hair by the handful, and he has stuck pins in me a time or so; he feeds the horses on my new spring bonnet, but he never beat me yet, and until he does I don't think I ought to complain."

Hundreds of persons using Ayer's Hair Vigor, certify to its efficacy in restoring the hair to the health and beauty of youth.

Selecting a Pattern for New Dress.

He stood a long time gazing into the window of one of our large dry-goods stores, staring at the draperies of new spring goods, and then he boldly marched in, for he had promised to buy his wife a new dress. He weighed nearly a ton and felt about as brave as a sheep, but he plucked up his courage and approached a gentlemanly clerk, who was doing up nothing in a package, and asked to look at the goods. After he had fingered each piece in a dazed, helpless sort of a way, he asked:

"How much will I need?"

"That will depend upon the number of yards you require," said the clerk, with icy sarcasm. "Hum! I suppose so. I want enough goods to make a dress for my only wife—I mean for—for—my wife only," stammered the luckless shopper.

"I think twenty yards would do," answered the clerk, measuring the man before him mentally and wondering if his wife was off the same piece; "shall I cut it off?"

"I—I—haven't decided on the color," said the perspiring buyer. What are the new shades—have you any of them?"

"We have them all," said the clerk, with emphasis; "our junior partner has just sent us 40,000 cases crushed strawberries, molasses and milk, mashed raspberries, squeezed gooseberries, spotted leopard, mud-turtle, bullock's blood, wall lizard"—

"I don't think she would like them," interrupted the shopping husband; "her tastes are very quiet; have you subdued mouse?"

"That's old," said the clerk; "it's shelved long ago."

"Perhaps you have it's antithesis?"

It's what?" asked the clerk, as he reached under the counter for something to protect himself with.

"The contrasting shade—enraged rat?"

"Is there such a color?" inquired the clerk hoarsly.

"It's the very newest—last from Paree."

"We haven't got it," moaned the wretched clerk, and every woman in town will want it;" and he went out and suicided.

When the shopping husband went home without the new dress the domestic atmosphere turned electric blue.

A poor debtor: He has paid the debt of nature," said a minister to a man who inquired after one of his parishioners. "Are you sure of that?" asked the man. "Oh, yes; for I was at the funeral." "Well, I'm glad that he paid it, for he has been owing me seven dollars for a barrel of flour so long that I had begun to think he wouldn't pay anything. Nature was mighty darn lucky, that's all I've got to say."

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

A Caution.

An exchange says: "The practice of burning a lamp all night is in some cases necessary on acount of sickness in the family, but it is nevertheless very hurtful. No matter how careful they may be attended, kerosene lamps throw out a gas which is poisonous. When a light is left burning the windows in the room are usually closed, to prevent flickering. The flame of one lamp turned down low requires more oxygen to keep it burning than is consumed by two adult persons.—The light from the lamp is also injurious to the eyes, and possibly to this fact may be traced the constantly increasing prevalence of eye diseases. The best way is to keep a lamp ready to light in case of an emergency during the darkness, with matches close beside it. The eyes need rest as well as the brain and muscles, and they need darkness in which to find it.

"The best advice may come too late." Said a sufferer from Kidney troubles, when asked to try Kidney-Wort. "I'll try it but it will be my last dose." The man got well and is now recommending the remedy to all sufferers. In this case good advice came just in time to save the man.

The Westward Rush.

People to the east have no idea of the great land speculation which is now raging in the northwest. There has but recently been opened for settlement the very last great body of free farming land in this country. It is now estimated that in ten years' time there will be practically no land left for free homesteads that will be worth taking up. The rush for Dakota is simply unprecedented. This territory in 1861 had about 5,000 inhabitants, and then Wyoming was a part of it. To-day Dakota has a population of nearly 80,000, and Wyoming probably, one-third as many. In June, 1880, there were 260 miles of railroad in operation in north Dakota; now there are 860 miles in running order, and 150 miles more under contract to be completed during the current year. The advance of the new northwest in population and wealth is simply phenomenal, and is but the very beginning of its history.

BEATS THE WORLD.

This is what H. C. Hoberman, a druggist of Marion, Ohio, says: "Thomas' Eclectric Oil beats the world. Sold nine bottles yesterday and to-day. One man cured of sore throat of eight years standing. Is splendid for rheumatism."

A Young Lawyer's Embarrassment.

A young lawyer, with his first case, went into Judge Hagner's court the other day to present a petition. He was so embarrassed that he forgot to remove his hat, and stood before the judge with a petition in his hand, a big umbrella under his arm and a new silk hat upon his head. In a trembling voice he began: "Your petitioner respectfully presents"—when Judge Hagner stopped him.

"Wait a moment" said the judge; "hadn't you better raise your umbrella too."

The young man clawed his hat off in a twinkling, but he was so put out that he could not read his petition. Is it not strange that some men, apparently well bred, never think of taking of their hats when they go into a private office, or in presence of people from whom they seek a favor? [N. Y. Sun.

The Unsolved Problem.

The New York Herald says that since the exposure of the dishonest clerk in the Equitable Trust Company, who stole nearly a hundred thousand dollars from his employers before his rascality was discovered, ingenious experts have been devising patent traps of various and elaborate design warranted to catch and hold dishonest clerks. One plan offered to a well-known bank is to employ professional experts to go over the accounts at unexpected intervals. This has been indignantly rejected by directors of the board as insulting to their dignity, since it proposes to hire outsiders to perform the duties they have sworn to fulfill. Another plan, and not a bad idea either, is to give the clerks no salaries, but instead let them take as much as they can without detection. When they are found out by the examining expert, they have to pay back, and the expert has a percentage on what is found. With proper "rules of the game" this would be no doubt a very exhilarating pastime. But it is doubtful if it would meet with the approbation of the depositor, because although the expert watches the clerk, it is not exactly clear who is to watch the expert. To be sure the bank department might, but again it not.

ROCHESTER, N.Y.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the state of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the 18th day of May 1876, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego at Oswego, N. Y., on the 16th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Liber 100 of mortgages, at page 310, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Auringer, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage as follows: Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86). The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4) block number twenty-eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 2d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 7th day of March 1883. ORLANDO HOWELL, Assignee.
HOWE & RICE, Att'ys,

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagor Nathan Rowlee mortgagee, Harmon J. Rasons, mortgage dated March 3d, 1870, to secure four hundred and eighty dollars ($480) part of the purchase price, and recorded in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego May 2d 1873 in book 91 of mortgages at page 425. Said mortgage has been duly assigned to James H. Langdon of Oswego Falls N. Y., who is the owner thereof. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York, and being five acres to be laid off in a "square form as near as may be on the south west "corner of forty acres on lot seventy-one in the old "military township of Hannibal, now Granby, and "bounded as follows: East and north by the original "line of said lot No seventy-one. South by the road "leading from Oswego Falls to Hannibalville, and "west by a line to run from said road leading as "aforesaid to the north line of said lot and parallel "with the east line of said lot 71, and at such a distance therefrom as shall enclude the said five acres "of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the 1st publication of this notice the sum of one hundred dollars principal and interest thereon from October 1st 1881, which is the whole sum unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding in law or equity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid and notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction, to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 6th day of July 1883 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, April 3d 1883. JAMES H. LANGDON, Assignee and owner of said mortgage.

Strange But True.

When lovely woman sees the chickens
Caverting through her garden beds,
She mutters wildly, "Oh, the Dickens!"
And all her tender aspect sheds.
Her beauteous teeth she gritteth wildly,
While angry fires her eyes ungulf—
We think we put it rather mildly,
To say she's hotter than a wolf.

Out through the door on brisk feet flying
She shoots like meteor from the sky,
At each wild jump emphatic crying:
"Shoo! Shoo! Shoo! Shoo! Shoo! Oh, my!"
But yonder fowls pay no attention
Unto the droppings from her jaws,
But strain unto the utmost tension
The stowing powers of their craws.

She seeks a rock in quiet lying
Beside the rustic garden gate,
Which quick she grabbeth up, and flying
Toward the object of her hate,
She draweth back her arm, each muscle
As firm as gilded brass; 'tis fun
To then observe the neighbors hustle
Toward some shelter, on the run.

Then lets she drive with great vehemence,
The hurling rock flies through the air,
But seems to have delirium tremens,
And, unlike Eli, gets not there.
It flies across in manner angling,
And caroms on a neighbor's head,
Then shoots into a window, mangling
A feeble boarder in his bed.

Then switches she her kitchen apron,
And yells until her corsets crack,
And still the chickens keep on caperin'
Amid the planted seeds, till black
As midnight grows her frown, when frantic
With rage she rushes on the flock,
And with full many a grotesque antic
She chases them about a block.

CHINESE IN NEW YORK.

Habits and Manners of the Mongolians—How They Live, Eat and Work—Opium Dens.

NEW YORK, April 28, '83—Antiquity affords us but a few uncertain hints in regard to China, for it was so far removed to the utmost limits of eastern Asia, as to form no part in the aspirations of the Roman or other conquerors of those days. The first definite knowledge we get is from the Arabs, as they invaded China in the year A. D. 94. Since then of course all nations have established treaties with China, with more or less success. In their own country we have always read and known of them as a superstitious, sly, cunning people, for the most part well versed in handicraft, but not much given to the study of books. They claim to have known and used a great many of the recent inventions of the Europeans. The use of firearms and gun powder was first known to the Chinese as, also was the printing press and the art of paper-making. They were not at all progressive and the implements that were used a century ago are still in use, and until lately (probably before our centennial) they had made no progress to amount to anything in art, science, or mechanics. A glance at any exhibit of their instruments will show that they are coarse, cumbersome things, and little adapted to their respective uses. The Chinese always show the greatest reverence for those in authority and also for the aged; the female portion of their homes, however, never received any consideration, and a female child did not count as one drop in the bucket of humanity. Although one of the oldest nations China does not, even now, add much to the value of the commerce of the world.

THE CHINESE IN NEW YORK

are of more interest to us, so I will pass on to that subject. The Chinese immigrant usually lands in San Francisco, stays a few months with his people there (to pick up a little English) and then comes on to New York. He settles down in Mott street for a few weeks and goes in search of a small basement or store in which to begin business. In two or three days a painter will be seen in the shop selected, and the next time you pass the place you can read in glowing red letters on the window glass a small sign, "One Lung" Chinese Laundry. One Lung lugs in two tubs, a few flat irons and some red cloth and then he's ready for work. As soon as he is settled he goes out in search of a horse shoe, to drive away bad spirits. (You see he has brought his superstitions with him). I saw one of them last week hopping up Broadway with a big, [illegible] horse shoe in his hand, that he [illegible] picked out of the gutter. His smile [illegible] great happiness, and he prob[illegible] it over the door as soon as [illegible] the laundry. When you [illegible] and behind this all the washing, cooking, sleeping and eating is done. I never invaded these quarters, and can say nothing about them. After "One Lung" has been here a few months, another "Lung" comes, and maybe two, or three, but the business goes on just the same as before. If you go into their place in the evening, you will find one of the heathens behind the desk, scratching away in the book with a camels hair brush dipped in India ink. He's the bookkeeper and financial manager. Its a hard matter to cheat one of these men with a counterfeit coin, or wrong change, for they seem to learn to count our money before they acquire our language.

There are several things against these people in New York, while there are also some things in their favor. They are very industrious and pay strict attention to their own business, even. "Is this hot enough for you?" during the warmest summer days, fails to draw them into conversation. They will stand at the bench the year around and never observe a holiday; not even a Sabbath, until the code came into effect. They are unproductive; for their whole work is limited to washing. They live on next to nothing and dress very cheaply. They are a simple people and of course their wants are simple. I meet them in the markets some times with their baskets, from which protrudes the heads and necks of a couple of live geese or ducks. These are their favorite meat, and the fowls are bought in this way because they are cheaper than the dressed and then the feathers are obtained free. The Chinaman here wear cotton the year around. A complete suit costs one dollar and a quarter and will last six months. In the winter these suits are wadded, or several are worn one above the other. The blouse and trowsers are always made much too large, and this is the reason a Chinaman always appears so ungainly. Their favorite hat is a soft black felt, and the same shape of the Quakers. Cloth shoes, with the thick white soles, shorter than the foot are mostly worn. Mott street is the Chinese quarter here, but they are also found in all parts of the city. Mott street is between Baxter street and the Bowery, and in only the lower portions do the Chinese reside. While wandering around in this quarter I noticed a drug store, (and the Chinese clerk smiled as complacently as does his fairer skinned brother in the same business) and some dealers in delicacies from across the water. Some of the cans were suggestive of pickled rats, and fricasseed puppies, but as I could not read the label, I would not say that this was the case. I did however see some dried birds nests; used in making soups, and sold at nineteen dollars a pound; also queer looking evaporated soups and the national wine made from rice. Then there were a great many other queer things only known to Chinese cooks. There are only a few Chinese women here but the number is so small that a person never sees one.

TWO OR THREE GROCERY STORES,

All the Chinese in America are governed by the six great companies of China, and each man being taxed a certain per cent of his whole earnings; and the money which is sent back to China is used to purchase the liberty of himself or his parents. This is one reason why Kearney so hates these people. In one of his speeches he said "All the money they earn is sent back to China, and when a heathen dies we don't even get his body to help enrich our beautiful soil." The students that were sent over here to Yale to be educated have made wonderful progress and have proven to be apt scholars. Some have returned to their native land and occupy high positions, others are still at Yale and a few are here in New York in the export business. One of these in his native garb, stepped into a Broadway cigar store the other day, held up one finger and laid down a nickel. As the clerk gave him a cigar he said "Livee round heree Johnee?" Johnee lit the cigar, took it out of his mouth and answered, "Yes, I am making a short sojourn in this locality but as business is not as lucrative as I could desire, I think I'll move to more desirable quarters." With a groan the cigar clerk sank to the floor and since then he to all comers. When the Chinaman has been here some time, he draws in some of our love of freedom and spirit of progression and seems to be a different person. A paper has been established here and is edited by a native Chinees. The sheet looks nice but the jokes are very dry and the chief seems to have clipped from exchanges. The Chinese have learned to do several things "Allee samee Melican man" Among their latest efforts is the art of self defence, a prize fight occurring in Philadelphia last month, between two Chinamen, and it was quite a desperate affair. A secret society exists among them but foreigners are not accepted as members. To inquirers they will say, "Justee same as Flee Masons," and that is all. The naturalized Chinaman is a good citizen and very quiet. Not one was ever known to sell his vote, and that is more than can be said of some who so strongly object to them as citizens. Opium is their national curse, and of course where they go there goes the opium. Americans are good scholars and soon become well versed in the use of the opium pipe. The number of dens in this city [illegible]

ENCOURAGE EVERYBODY.

Talmage's Advice Regarding the Merchant, the Lawyer, and the Doctor.

"If there be room for only one more passenger in the lifeboat, get in yourself. If there be a burden to lift, you supervise while others shoulder it. You be the digit, while others are ciphers on the right-hand side; nothing in themselves, but used to augment you. This, said Dr. Talmage Sunday morning, "is in opposition to the theory of the Gospel advanced by Paul, 'Bear ye one another's burdens.' Everybody has burdens. Sometimes the burdens come down on the shoulders, or the head, or the heart. Looking over this assemblage, you all seem well looking, but each of you has a burden, and some of you have more than you can lift. Paul proposes to split up these burdens into fragments, you to take part of my burden, and I part of yours. When Mrs. Appleton, daughter of Daniel Webster, was dying, she affected the great lawyer to tears by her thoughtfulness for his health as she remarked that he was out on a cold day without an overcoat. How much more beautiful the care of others than this everlasting taking care of ourselves! What you and I most need to learn is the spirit of helpfulness.

"Encourage the merchant if he has a superior style of goods, or if his clerks have adorned his show window. You need not fear that he will be puffed up and arrogant. He will have plenty of trouble before the day is out. Some cranky woman will come in and pull down goods enough to fit out a family for a winter and not buy a cent's worth. Don't be afraid that your praise will make the merchant apoplectic with plethora. Encourage the newspaper man. Do you know how many annoyances he suffers? Have you understood how often his best and most elaborate article is flung out; how he must report an indistinctly uttered speech which must of necessity be all the way through a stenographic guess? Think what the nineteenth century would be without the newspaper. Encourage mechanics; praise them if they do their work well. If he does not get his work done it may be because his wife has been sick, he has lost two children of scarlet fever, and has a felon on his finger.

"Encourage the farmer. It is a common remark that the farmer is independent. Independent of what? Independent of the rot in his wheat? Independent of the grasshopper, the locust, the army worm, and the potato bug? Independent of the storm that blows down his crop, of the snowbank that buries him until he shovels his way out? Independent of frozen ears and frozen feet?

"Encourage the doctors. There is a great deal or cheap wit about the doctors. A man recently wrote a book, "Every Man his Own Undertaker." Doctors have so many hardships and annoyances that they need our encouragement. They stand between our families and the grave.

"One day there was dreadful foreboding in our house. All hope was gone. The doctor came four times. The children put away their toys. We all walked on tiptoe, and at the least sound said 'Hush!' How loudly the clock ticked! How the banister creaked, although we tried to keep it still! The doctor came four times, and stayed all night. At last the restless patient sank into a sweet slumber and the doctor looked up and said. 'The crisis has passed.' We propped her up with pillows and easy chairs, and the south wind tried to blow rose leaves into her faded cheek, and the children brought flowers, and when the doctor told us that in a day or two Bertha could ride out, oh, how life came back to our house, and, as we helped the old doctor into his gig, we noticed not that his step was broken.

"Encourage the lawyers. They are so often cheated out of their fees, so often have to bear ponderous responsibilities, and have to maintain the dignity of their profession against the sharks of the profession. The only man allowed to stand on Sinai, beside the Lord was Moses, the lawyer.

"Encourage the teachers. Don't cut down their salaries when you begin to retrench. Don't expect them to work the great stuffing machine of the modern school successfully without encouragement. They are expected to take children of fifteen and make them metaphysicians, mathematicians, and rhetoricians.

"Encourage all sick people. Don't tell them how bad they look, but remind them of similar cases that you have seen cured. Cheerful words are more stimulating than cognac, tonic, or bitters. Encourage young men starting in business by reminiscences of your own experience. You who are established in business remember what you went through.

"If you have nothing to say that is encouraging, put your teeth tight together, cover them with the curtain of your lips, press your lips tight, and hold your hand over your mouth and keep still! A man once bought some caged birds, and immediately opened the doors of the [illegible] liberty. "Why [illegible]?" said a bystander. [illegible] caged myself, and I know how good it is to be free.' Gov. A[illegible] on his death bed signed the pardon of an unfortunate woman who was in prison, [illegible] a friend said to him: 'Governor, [illegible] a responsibility [illegible]

A Prussian has invented and has on exhibition in New York an electric box that will move along on a wire with lightning rapidity. He proposes to erect cables and do all express and freight busininess by wire and carry passengers too. The wheel of progression is not to rest, contented with the telegraph and telephone.

John L. Sullivan, the pugilist, who has delighted in the distinction of being able to knock any man out who had the temerity to face him, has met his match. John Barleycorn has been tempted until he has downed the pugilist. Mr. Sullivan has had hemorrhage of the lungs until he is said to be virtually a wreck. Better, stronger, and wiser men than Mr. Sullivan have battled with whisky only to find themselves after a short time knocked completely out.

Those who went to Dakota from the east expecting a handsomer financial yield from little or no work are now reaping their illusory fruit. Thousands who were lured thither by highly colored statements, by railroads having land to sell, of the richness, fertility and phenomenal productions are homesick, heartsick and anxious to return. None but workers succeed in any clime and those who migrate to a new country expecting to escape it are unwise. People in the east with limited means and with no knowledge of the western country further than that furnished by land speculators had better let well enough alone.

A boy who can recite any rule in his studies without the slightest idea of a practical application of it is called smart and educated by many of his acquaintances. It is a false idea. Boys who have at the age of eighteen, graduated, full of book learning, without any common sense, do not come to occupy the important and responsible positions in life. One pound of learning requires ten pounds of common sense to apply it. This is the reason why so many men with but a limited education outstrip thousands of our college graduates in the race of life—men in all professions and trades. Education is a good thing, the best equipment, with character, that any young man can possess when starting out to battle for himself. But how often do we see graduates of our schools and colleges left far in the rear by men with but a tenth of their knowledge of books, but far above them in practical common sense and persistent, intelligent industry.

The bill proposing an amendment to the State Constitution allowing women to vote at all elections has been adversely disposed of by the Senate. This disposes for the present of all legislation on that subject. There are in this State 2,557,549 women to 2,505,322 men and the adoption of the above amendment would more than double the number of voters. No attention has been given the bill by the people and we venture the assertion that not one person in twenty was aware of its introduction. The Utica Observer says no woman suffrage movement will command serious attention until the body of women unite in demanding it. There is no general wish for the right to vote among women, and there never has been. Woman's progress and woman's rights rest almost entirely with herself. The men are in no way to blame. In fact men are far easier to convert to the doctrine of woman suffrage than women themselves and the organization and dignity of its agitation has been confined through its espousal by men. When the women get ready to vote the law makers of the State will know it and their wish will be granted.

As Memorial Day is nearing an interest in the proper observance of the day increases. Commander W. J. Pentelow requests the presence of every member of Post Daniel F. Schenck at the regular meeting to be held on next Tuesday evening, the 8th inst., in Post rooms in the Kenyon block. Business of importance is to be transacted, committees named and other matters brought up that can be facilitated by a full attendance.

General John A. Reynolds, department commander of the G. A. R. issues the following general order from his headquarters in Rochester:—

I—In conformity with the Rules and Regulations of the Grand Army of the Republic, Wednesday, the thirtieth day of May will be observed as Memorial Day.

II—Five hundred thousand of the brave who died for the Union and liberty, sleeps beneath the green sods of the valleys, and on the woody hillsides of our land, while over them the shining stars and the angels of God keep silent and ceaseless watch. The glory and beauty of immortality are wreathed about their names and achievements, and a loyal and grateful people will never suffer the memory of the glorious deeds of their heroes to fade away into forgetfulness: For

[illegible] behind,
[illegible] perpetual [illegible],

For [illegible] cause was the cause of [illegible]

Has [illegible] a world [illegible]!"

No one to whom home, and freedom and country are sweet and dear, can withhold the tribute of gratitude and affection from the heroes, living and dead, by whose struggles and victories the unity and liberties of the nation and country have been made secure forever. The comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic will come with full and [illegible] to perform the sacred [illegible] of the Day, and with them will come [illegible] all lovers of [illegible] in this land; and, while they [illegible] comrades dead the tribute of [illegible] and respectful love, recalling the greatness of the conflict and [illegible] issues, and the importance of the interests of [illegible] which were at stake, [illegible] will renew their patriotic devotion to their country and the great principles for which they fought and will pledge [illegible] once again

[illegible] to the dead."

III—The clergy of all denominations are respectfully requested to hold on Sunday May 27th, a memorial service

Post commanders through their decoration committees, will communicate this request.

IV—Flags on Memorial Day should be at half mast.

V—Post Commanders, immediately after Memorial Day, will forward to comrade J. H. Gunning, Chaplain of of the department of New York, Nyack, N. Y., full reports of their observance of the day in their respective localites.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

The Board of Supervisors will meet in Oswego to-day to consider the question of building a new jail.

The Syracuse Standard says the West Shore railroad company gives work to all able bodied applicants, paying $1.50 per day as wages.

Phœnix Register.—It is believed that Dr. Gallagher, under arrest in London as a dynamite conspirator is a cousin of Mrs E. N. Warner of this village.

At a special town meeting held in New Haven Saturday, George E. Sopher, republican, was elected Overseer of the Poor over Henry Williams, democrat, by 63 majority.

A correspondent writes from Cleveland to the Oswego Times that gold has been discovered about six miles north of that village and that a stock company has been formed to work the mines.

One of the most energetic corporations in the State is the West Shore Railroad Co. People who have watched the progress of the road have admired the push and activity of its managers. In filling the positions of greatest trust along the lines the management does not hesitate to pick out young men. That is the avowed policy of the company, which is controlled by men under fifty.

After a heated legal battle the will of Alonzo C. Yates, which devised the bulk of his property to his second wife has been admitted to probate by Surrogate Rollins, in New York. A few years ago Mr. Yates was one of the leading merchants in Syracuse. He procured a divorce and married his housekeeper to whom he devised the bulk of his vast estate, covering valuable property in New York, Utica, Syracuse and Philadelphia. The first wife contested the will on the ground that a divorce was procured from her by unlawful means. By his first wife he had two daughters to whom the interest on $20,000 is to be annually paid over to each. By his second wife he had two children who are liberally provided for. The first wife gets nothing.

What the Syracuse Herald thinks of the Opening of one of our Advertisers.

The second annual spring opening of the "Famous" yesterday and Tuesday was an entire success. Hundreds of eager patrons left the establishment delighted at the bargains they had obtained. A critical examination of the mammoth stock of clothing displayed by this enterprising firm at Nos. 2 and 3 Wieting block will convince the most skeptical that the largest and best assortment of garments in Syracuse is offered the public. Twenty-two watches were given out in one day to those who had bought fifty dollars' worth of clothing since the offer was made. This chance holds good until January 1st, 1884. One hundred and eighteen styles of attractive and nicely finished kilts for children from two to six years old, besides hundreds of natty suits for boys, and all at astonishingly low prices, make, with the display in the men's department the most perfect line of clothing ever shown in this city. One dollar and fifty cents will buy a whole suit for a boy under eleven years of age. In overcoats for everybody all prices and styles are offered. An immense supply of pantaloons of fashionable make up, cut from the [illegible]

[illegible] "Charming spot," was the one opinion.

The road is finely equipped. "That's conductor [illegible], the best fellow that ever lived," said a man, pointing to a jolly, full faced individual collecting tickets. I was introduced. "Where do you get all this glow of health, Conductor?" "Well, sir, I'm looking hearty and feeling hearty because I've formed an attachment for Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Honestly I think it's the best medicine ever given to a man. I have recommended it again and again, every time with the same results. Why, there's Mr Walsh of the Adelphi Hotel (his home is 136 W. 26th street, N. Y.) he came up here and the change of air and water had a fearful effect upon him. His face broke out in blotches and pimples. I had seen the FAVORITE REMEDY used. I told him to get a bottle. He did so, and in three day's time the rash and fever entirely disappeared. It seemed to cleanse the blood with such rapidity. I have recommended Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY to a great many persons who were bilious and troubled with stagnant blood. FAVORITE REMEDY never fails to purify and strengthen. I know this to be a fact."

The Degradation of Office Holding

The Oswego Times and Express in speaking of the demoralizing effects of office under the present sham civil service adds the following as a bit of knowledge that has been learned by personal observation:

Take the civil service as managed here as an illustration. It is something akin to degradation to accept a position in the custom house, from the conditions imposed upon applicants. There are some honorable and competent men filling custom house positions here, but these were not the considerations which procured them the appointments. In every instance the consideration is not, "Is he competent?" Not, "Is he honest?" Not, "Will he serve the government faithfully?" Not "Will he be faithful, to the republican party.,"—but, "Will he be true to the leaders of a particular clique?" It has come to pass that every man in the custom house is a kind of hostage for himself, or his friends, not that he and they will be true to the republican party, but will he and they see to it that the town or ward in which such employe resides, without regard to the popular sentiment, sends managable delegates to the conventions. They are not to consult the popular sentiment, but they are to manipulate it, they are to control or thwart it. When a man obtains a position in the custom house he surrenders his manhood, his independence, his rights of citizenship. He is no longer master of his own actions. He is expected to do, politically, precisely as he is dictated to, and if he fails to do that, or do the men fail for whom he is appointed, he will be bounced at the very first opportunity. Can a citizen with any self respect consent to wear such a collar?

Fashion Notes.

Red in all shades will be much worn.

The simpler the hairdressing the better.

Mantles of grenadine will be worn for mid-summer.

Many of the new mantles are made of velvet in colors.

Bangs and crimps are worn further from the eyebrows.

Lace and embroidery are equally fashionable for trimming.

The new grenadines are plainly woven silk or with armure meshes.

A dash of grass green in a spring toilet is the latest fancy in decoration.

In short dresses with festooned flounces appear Marie Antoinette and Trianon designs.

The preference for those who can have but one mantle is for a black one of ottoman silk.

Pearl or smoke gray velveteen trimmed with black lace makes an elegant dress for cool days in spring and summer.

Imported mantles are shorter than any hitherto seen; in fact, some of them are the merest scarfs, scarcely reaching to the waist line.

The Scotch gingham dresses remain in favor because they wash well, and are now imported in very large plaids, small checks, stripes and plain colors.

Velvet is perhaps the fabric most used for small accesories and for ribbons, but satin still retains an important place, and is preferred to all other goods for facings and for transparents beneath grenadine, laces or embroirdery.

The Bazar says: "Matching gloves to the dress is entirely out of fashion for both day and evening toilettes. Lighter shades of tan-colored gloves than those worn during the winter are used with spring costumes for the street and on full dress occasions; there is also a tendency to more yellow shades of tan-color, showing ecru rather than brown.

Barlow, Wilson & Co's famous minstrels will give an entertainment in the Academy of Music in Oswego Friday evening. A special train with round trip tickets only fifty cents, will leave the lower D. L. & W. depot at 7 o'clock that evening for Oswego. Tickets for sale by William Waugh at Western Union Telegraph Office.

This is an age of progression and it is coming to be recognized as a truism that if a person has anything to sell it won't do to whisper about it. He must speak up loud or his louder neighbor will drown him out. By referring to THE TIMES it will readily be seen that there was never such a boom of advertising as now. Advertising is beneficial alike to the merchant and publisher.

The average Fultonian believes that when the village has been free from fires for some time that the presence of one is always followed by two more in quick succession, making three. By referring to the dates of fire alarms it will be seen that they are singularly in groups of three of neighboring dates, generally followed by a lapse of months. We have had two fires, the Cole and Otis. Where will the third one be?

James Mackie, who claimed to be a tailor from Baldwinsville, was found at midnight Friday by officer Wilkinson sleeping in a hallway. He was given lodgings in the jail and Saturday morning pleaded guilty to one plain drunk. His Honor was inclined to sentence him to 120 days in the O. P. but reckoning on the basis that he was only a ninth part of a man made the sentence 80 days. "Call me the nineteenth part of a man once and make it day and a half in Fulton jail Judge!" His Honor accommodated the Knight of the Goose and Monday he departed for pastures green.

Shortly after [illegible] Wednesday evening fire was [illegible] in the two and one half story [illegible] building on First street in the building occupied by Wm. G. Betts & Co. [illegible] store and sales room for wagons and agricultural implements and Mr. J. H. McKiernan for carriage trimming. The origin of the fire is a mystery. To the south was a one story building reaching to Rochester street occupied by James E. Miller as wagon shop, Dewitt C. Baker blacksmith shop and William E. Fuller, wagon shop. Owing to the old and dry condition of the buildings the flames gained considerable headway before a stream was placed on. The fire department responded promptly and labored faithfully. Everything burned with the exception of the extreme southern portion occupied by Fuller.

Newell Cole, owner of the buildings, loss $2000, insured for $1400; Wm. G. Betts & Co. loss on stock $3500, insured for $2000; Hugh McKiernan loss $300 on stock and tools, no insurance; James Miller's loss on stock and tools, $600, insured for $200; Dewitt C. Baker loss $500, no insurance. Wm. E. Fuller's stock was damaged by smoke and water to quite and extent. Insured.

North of the Cole building stands the Fuller brick block which was considerably damaged. insured. Marcus F. Craban uses the first floor of this building for a paint shop and goods were slightly damaged. Insured. Wm G Betts lived in the second story. Carpets and furniture damaged by smoke and water. No insurance.

SPARKS

Cole's and W G Betts & Co's losses have been settled.

D C Baker will build a brick shop on the site occupied by him.

James E Miller has opened a shop in south end of LaLonde's blacksmith shop.

William E Fuller is negotiating for the south end of the lot. He will put up a brick structure.

Tools belonging to Dewitt C Baker were stolen during the fire. He would be pleased to have them returned.

It is rumored that Mr Cole will immediately erect a two story brick building with a frontage of forty-five feet.

A large roll of patent leather used to trim carriages was stolen from Mr Mc Kiernan. He will pay a reasonable reward for it's return.

The one story Cole building was built by the late Almon Tucker in 1851 and at that time was the commercial center of the village.

At one o'clock Monday afternoon smoke was seen issuing from the roof of James Otis' building on Second street opposite the Midland depot. An alarm was sounded, the fire department responded, and the fire was finally subdued. It caught in the rear of the building from a defective flue and when discovered was making rapid headway betweed the ceiling of the building and the roof. In order to get at the fire numerous holes were cut in the roof and volumes of water poured in that destroyed and injured many articles in the rooms below. Had this fire occurred at night there would have been disastrous results.

Mr. Otis' loss is about $300. Insured.

The Philharmonic Society of Syracuse sang the above Opera in Stephens Opera House Thursday evening. The Philharmonics are amateurs, but they are artists, for a more finished and satisfactory rendition of an opera was never brought out by professionals in Fulton. Miss Marie Sullivan's inimitable portrayal of Serpolette, the Good for Nothing, elicited merited praise. Mr Ruger's Gaspard, a miser, was exceptionally well drawn and Miss Long's Germaine and Mr. Ormsbee's Bailli were kindly received. The characters Henri by Frank Wooley and Jean Greneichieux by James Long were respectively sustained in a perfect manner The orchestra under the direction of Professor Grove L. Marsh kept perfect time and between the acts furnished the audience with delightful airs. All who attended expressed themselves in most complimentary terms with the entire performance.

MARY ANSWERS MARTHA.

She Re-Echoes her Sister's Sentiments—A Place Herbert Spencer Never Visited—Why Mary is a Female Suffragist.

> "In the spring a fuller crimson
> Comes upon the robin's breast
> In the spring the wanton lapwing
> Gets himself another crest."
> [TENNYSON

And in the spring weather Martha picks up her long silent pen, and with a sublime disregard of the eternal fitness of things quotes poetry, and talks about house cleaning, not seemingly to realize the wide discrepancy betwixt the two.

Ned's reformation does not as yet seem to incite him to supporting his family, as Martha gives us to understand that she is still at work in the factory. But Rome was not built in a day, and men of Ned's stamp don't reform entirely in a minute. You might as well expect to see our beautiful river suddenly turn its course and flow in the opposite direction.

Truth compels me to say that Ned is but a fair sample of many husbands in Fulton and Oswego Falls. The wife and children become the bread winners while the husband whose duty it is to cherish and protect his wife and support and educate his children slinks into the background, a shiftless, ignoble nonentity, with none so low as to do him reverence." Herbert Spencer says the Americans work too hard. Evidently Herbert didn't "take in" this class of Columbia's free born sons, while sojourning here with us.

With the true affinity which such kindred souls find in each other, they cluster in groups about their favorite loafing places, befouling the sweet spring air with foul tobacco smoke and fouler oaths, and discuss the merits of Brown's "trotter" and Jones' "setter" and kindred topics of equal importance while their wives and children toil from morning until night in factory and shop, shut out from the blessed sunshine and pure air and every influence which tends to refine and ennoble the human likeness of the divine Creator. And yet some of the papers are howling themselves hoarse in an attempt to impress upon the public, the utter unfitness of woman for the ballot. I'm a woman, and I want to vote (and hope the time will come when I may.) 1st—For prohibition. 2d—That men who can and will not support and care for their families may be assigned just and fitting punishment for their infidelity in this respect. Wouldn't you like to vote so too, Martha? Your sister MARY.

He wants it just long enough. Not too long nor too short. Amdursky has clothing to fit all ages, forms and sizes. It is equal to custom make, not baggy or ill shaped, but an excellent fit every time. No round shouldered coats, or ugly shaped pantaloons in stock. Hats and caps of the latest styles in all material, gents furnishing goods, fine hosiery, etc., in finer styles than ever before offered in Fulton. A fine line of childrens suit to fit youngsters from four years of age upward. If you want clothing of any kind don't pass Amdursky's Clothing House. Goods all new, not shelf worn, and prices way below competitors.

SETTLE UP.

I have many accounts outstanding that I would be pleased to have paid up. I have been burned out and just at this time would appreciate the debts owing me. If not settled in thirty days will place them out for collection.

Incubators For Sale.

We are now ready to make cheap and reliable incubators to meet the wants of those who wish to hatch chickens. The subject of Artificial Incubators is increasing in interest every year and knowing that the majority of people do not wish to pay the high price for the patent Incubators that are in the market we have concluded to make a few that are cheap and reliable and know they will hatch chickens if the directions are followed. Any person wishing to see eggs in the process of incubation, and chickens that have been hatched by our incubator, can do so by calling at the residence of JNO. H. CASE. We also have the White Leghorn Eggs of (Benson strain) for sale. Price one dollar per setting.

Bacon's Opening Day.

Thursday was the spring opening day at Francis E. Bacon's dry goods and millinery store. The display was equal to previous efforts in regard to elegance and style, and greater in extent than any former opening. Every department was filled with new and seasonable goods and Bacon fully sustained his motto: "Always lead, never follow." Hundreds visited the grand display.

The millinery department partook of he nature of a blooming conservatory. Everything in the line of hats and bonnets was of the latest designs and most elaborately trimmed in a stylish manner. The leading colors were plentifully represented. Orange, Oriole, Mandarin, Crushed Strawberry, Raspberry, Terra Cotta leading. The original designs in trimming by Mrs. Salmon and Miss O'Hara was a subject of general comment by all visitors.

10,000 Rolls WALL PAPER,

[illegible] Details of the Lamentable Affair.

A telegram was received from Syracuse yesterday shortly after noon by Mr. S. C. Howland conveying the sad intelligence that his son Clarence had been seriously injured by an explosion in the drug store of Howland & Young of which Clarence was senior partner. Later in the day Mr. Howland was apprised of his son's death and with Mrs. Howland took the evening train to the city. The Journal gives the following particulars of the distressing accident;—

In the cellar in the north end and immediately beneath the soda fountain, in the store above, stands the copper generator, one of Tufft's patent, and the other apparatus used in working the fountain. About eleven o'clock Joseph W Young, one of the firm, and Lewis D Korb, a clerk in the employ of the firm, went below to charge up the exhausted fountains. They had succeeded in charging two fountains and had filled the generator, for the purpose of generating carbonic acid gas for a third time. At the time of the explosion Mr. Young stood within two or three feet of the generator, the gauge of which showed 170 pounds pressure. Korb stood within about the same distance on the other side of the generator. Just as the guage showed 179 pounds pressure Mr. Young was in the act of taking hold of the wheel to let off the charge into the empty fountain. At this instant Clarence H Howland, his partner, appeared on the scene, having run down stairs to see how the work was progressing. He had just inquired how near they were done, and Mr Young replied that they would finish in a few minutes. The answer had no sooner been given than, as Mr Howland was turning to go up stairs again, the explosion ensued. At the time Mr Howland was fully ten feet from the machine. The generator, composed of copper with lead lining, was literally rent in fragments, a large section being blown entirely clear of the apparatus, while the remainder was torn and wrenched out of all former semblance. The explosion forced Mr Young backward against the wall and Mr Korb backward against the fountain. The only injury sustained by Mr Young was the loss of a portion of his finger, which was torn entirely from its position. Mr Korb's eyes were filled with the compound. By far the worst injured of the trio was Mr Howland. The major portion of the generator seems to have been hurled with terrific velocity towards Mr Howland. A portion of the generator must have struck him full in the right side of the head, as when found he was lying flat on the floor with the mutilated apparatus resting on his head and shoulders. Messrs Young and Korb made their way to the store above to give the alarm supposing Mr Howland was dead. Messengers were dispatched for physicians, and soon Drs Didama, Jacobson, Earll and others were quickly on the scene. The noise of the explosion was heard plainly a block or two away and soon a crowd gathered. The police were soon there and kept order. The two least injured were soon being cared for in the store above, while Dr Jacobson was attending upon Mr Howland, who was lying insensible and gasping below. A cursory examination showed that Mr Howland's right leg was broken short off above the knee. Immediately behind the left ear was a severe wound, but the skull was not found to be fractured. The right lower jaw was found to be broken and dislocated. Mr Howland was otherwise cut and bruised about the head and face. He was immediately after placed in a hack and conveyed to the residence of his partner, Mr Young, No 170 Madison street, where Drs Jacobson and Mumford did all in their power for him but without avail, as he remained in much the same conditions as when found until 12:55, when he ceased to breathe. It is thought that the blow on the head caused his death.

Clarence H Howland was born in Fulton where his youth was passed his aged now residing in this village He was thirty years of age. He entered the drug business at an early age in this village in the employ of Pardee & Chamberlain. About ten years ago he removed to Syracuse but was a frequent visitor to friends in Fulton, Three years ago he established a business of his own with Joseph Young under the firm name of Howland & Young. Mr. Howland was engaged to be married to Miss Emma Keene of Syracuse and the wedding day was fixed for June 11th.

Mr. Howland was an honorable and upright citizen a thorough business man and none could question the correctness of his life. In Fulton where he was so well known and respected there is a feeling of sadness and gloom. The aged parents in their dire affliction have the sympathy of the whole community.

The remains will probably be brought to Fulton for interment.

The Princess Louise Toilet Cream, prepared by Mr. F. Keenan, is meeting with a good sale. The Rutland, Vt., Herald says:

"It is conceded by the pulpit as well as the press that Rutland can turn out more handsome women than any other town of its size, and well it might for the Allen Sisters on the corner of Maine and Jefferson purchase a gross and a half annually of Princess Louise Toilet Cream. The ladies of Rutland owe Keenan a debt of gratitude there isn't but one way they can pay. Bake him a cake for his cream takes it and bake it large enough to last him through Lent and ship it prepaid by express."

The "constantly tired-out" feeling so often experienced is the result of impoverished blood and consequent enfeebled vitality. Ayer's Sarsaparilla feeds and enriches the blood, increases the appetite, and promotes digestion of the food and the assimilation of its strengthening qualities. The system being thus invigorated, the feeling rapidly changes to a grateful sense of strength and energy.

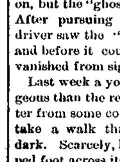
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment For Man & Beast will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

The Ghost of a Miser.

A correspondent says the latest sensation in Shenandoah Pa., is the presence of a genuine ghost. Mr. and Mrs. David Williams, on East Centre street, have both died recently, and about three weeks ago a night watchman at one of the collieries, named McNellis, was coming home at an early hour in the morning, when he met a figure clothed in white emerging from their late residence. He hailed it, but received no answer. Being a man of pluck he sprang forward to seize it, but, as if by magic, it eluded his grasp and vanished. Subsequently, a belated traveler returning with a team from Mahanoy City, while passing the house, saw a white robed form start up from the ground and walk rapidly off in front of his horse. He urged his horse on, but the "ghost" still kept in advance. After pursuing it some distance the driver saw the "spirit" turn a corner, and before it could reach the point it vanished from sight.

Last week a young lady, more courageous than the rest of her sex, on a banter from some companions undertook to take a walk through the house after dark. Scarcely, however, had she stepped foot across its threshold when a tall figure rose at her very side, attired in the ghostly white. She screamed and fainted. Her companions, who had been awaiting developments outside, rushed to her aid, but when they entered the house the spirit was gone. It has been seen at various times since, but never has been cornered so as to clear up the mystery of its appearance and strange disappearances. Superstitious people maintain it to be the ghost of old Williams, restless because of worldly misdeeds. Others, more sensible, regard it as a shrewd disguise under which some avaricious individual is searching for the hidden thousands of the dead miser.

"It is easier to convince a man against his senses than against his will." When a sick man has given Kidney-Wort a thorough trial, both will and senses join in unqualified approval of its curative qualities in all diseases of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Plucky Mrs. Barber.

Mr. and Mrs. Barber board at 1,212 Michigan Avenue, Chicago. Mr. Barber is not a coward; neither is Mrs. Barber. They occupy a room together. About 1 o'clock Sunday night Mr. Barber woke up. He thought he heard some one in the room, and putting out his hand, touched a human head. He felt for Mrs Barber. She was still asleep beside him, so that the intruder was probably a burglar. What was to be done? With rare presence of mind Mr. Barber reached over and shook his better half. She did not wake, so the operation was repeated emphasized by a pinch.

"What is it?" she whispered.

"A burglar," was the reply.

"A burglar?"

"Yes."

"Well."

There was a pause, and Mrs. Barber finally sprang out of bed and opened the door leading to the hall where a lamp was kept burning. She had no taste for a conflict in the dark. The light revealed a colored burglar, who made for the door. Mrs. Barber clasped him energetically about the waist calling to Mr Barber to uncover his head and help her. The gentleman did not hear. The burglar unclasped the lady's hands and made off, only to leave his coat-tails seized by that determined woman. Mrs Barber pulled one way and the thief pulled the other. But the strain was too great and the garment parted, Mrs Barber sitting down very hastily, while the colored intruder took a header down the stairs. That was all he took from the house. Mr Barber was finally rescued form imminent peril of smothering. Mrs Barber annointed herself with liniment, the other white-robed boarders returned to their beds, and dove-eyed peace reigned again over No. 1,212.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Conkling Would Not Mix.

Among the spectators at Barnum's show in Madison Square Garden, N. Y., Monday evening, were Secretary Folger and Assistant Treasurer Acton. They occupied Mr. Barnum's box. Later in the evening Mr Barnum joined the company. The entertainment had just begun when ex-Senator Roscoe Conkling entered the garden and was shown to box No. 9. Mr Hutchinson recognized the ex-Senator later and going to his box invited him to take a seat in Mr Barnum's box. Mr Conkling had accepted the invitation and had proceeded part way in that direction, when he thought he recognized Secretary Folger in the box also. Turning to Mr Hutchinson, he remarked, laying his hand on his shoulder: "Isn't that Secretary Folger there?" "Yes," said Mr Hutchinson, somewhat surprised at the suddenness of Mr. Conkling's question. "Well," said Mr Conkling, "I'll have to ask you to excuse me. I see I have friends in box No. 30, and I guess I'll join them." And he did. Mr Hutchinson, amazed, looked first at Mr Conkling and then at the box, and turned on his heel, leaving Mr Conkling plodding on his impressive march to box No. 30. The circus went on as usual.

ITS EQUAL YET TO HEAR FROM.

The movements of a mule's hind legs are very variable and uncertain, but Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil takes but one course—it heals and cures. Its equal for asthma, diphtheria, catarrh, cold and sore throat has never yet been sold.

Women's Bangs.

Nature has given woman a forehead, which is one of her chief adornments. The Flathead Indians think the forehead is a mistake, and mash it out of all decent shape by pressing the heads of their infants between cruel boards. This gives the heads thus mashed an idiotic and inelegant appearance. We do not permanently deprive woman of her forehead by flattening out her skull; but the caprice of the hair fashioner has put the forehead into temporary retirement. The lady trims her hair so that a considerable portion of it falls over in front toward the eyes. The curtain of hair thus hiding the best part of the forehead is known by the name of "bangs." No satisfactory account is given either of the origin of the name or the inventor of the fashion. There are many fashions which have some reasonable apology for their existence, intrinsic beauty, physical healthfulness or benificent moral effect. The "bangs" is not one of these. It spoils a high brow and is of no advantage to a low one. It reduces the appearance of an intellectual young lady to something like very ordinary mediocrity. If it appears in the style of a few graceful curls airily and saucily played about the top of the forehead, there may be a degree of beauty in it. The curly bang is sometimes seen, but it has of late, given away to that which is cut on a straight line and brushes down in the direction of the eyes and nose. [Philadelphia Press.

A VERY OLD MAN,

John Funk, of Springfield, Ohio, writes, "I was tramped upon by a horse, and for a year the pain through my hips was so bad I could not rise on my feet. Thomas' Eclectric Oil helped me beyond description. It will do wonders for those who suffer from colds.

It is well remarked that four or five dogs around a house is a sign that their master is out of work and his wife takes in washing.

"Did you ever run for a sheriff?" asked Poots of a Cumminsvile man. "Only once," was the reply, "and I wouldn't then if there hadn't been two deputies with him."

A tramp in the back country refused to saw wood for his dinner, giving as a reason that he was bitterly opposed to the destruction of our forests, and would do nothing to encourage that kind of business. And he walked off licking his teeth.

"FIRE HIM OUT.,,

This is a common remark when roughs and rowdys insult public decency by their unseemly ways. Dyspepsia is a horrid bore. Fire it out with Burdock Blood Bitters. You can do it.

"How is your brother?" asked Mr. Grumper of a friend. "Oh, so-so. His health is not any too good, and he has been bothered a great deal of late, with spinal meningitis." "Spinal who?" "Meningitis." "Well, why don't he shoot the Italian son-of-a-gun?"

A Detroit grocer is trying to make his friends believe that while he was stooping over some butter he was knocked senseless and robbed. An intelligent jury will decide whether the suspected parties did the knocking down or whether the smell of the butter was the guilty one. And as to the robbery, there is butter sold in Detroit that no living man can rob of a single scent. [Free Press.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the state of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage which is dated the 13th day of May 1876, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego at Oswego, N. Y., on the 15th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Liber 109 of mortgages, at page 210, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Aulinger, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage as follows: Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86.) The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4) block number twenty-eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 2d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 7th day of March 1883. ORLANDO HOWELL,
HOWE & RICE, Att'ys, Assignee.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagor Nathan Rowlee mortgagee, Harmon J. [illegible]
But every hour the mighty power
Of printers' ink is seen ;
It moves the world as easily
As does some mighty thing,
And men proclaim in despots care
That printers' ink is king,

The man of gold, of wealth untold,
Printers' ink may scorn,
Or knit his brow, nor deign to bow
To one so lowly born ;
But printers' ink has built its throne
Where mind its tributes bring,
And printers all the world around
Shout, "Printers' ink is king!"

King of the world, of thought refined,
No abject slave it claims :
Where superstition's victims pined,
It burst their servile chains,
In every clime, in coming years,
Will men proud anthems sing,
And round the world the echoes float
That printers' ink is king,

HIRAM'S FOLKS.

"So Hiram's folks has made money, eh?" said Mr Biggs.

Miss Paulina Prickett had invited the Biggs family to tea, with hot waffles, quince preserves, Sally-luns, angel cake, and the best quality of Young Hyson, to celebrate the purchase of a new tea set—white French china with a gold band on the edge—in which she had indulged. Inviting the Biggs family, as Miss Paulina very well knew, was better than advertising in the newspaper, for there was a goodly number of them, and they always talked to everybody about everything. The Biggses seldom invited company themselves, because, like John Gilpin's wife, they had a frugal mind, but they always came in full force wherever they were bidden.

"Yes" said Mrs Horatio Biggs; "in the book business I'm told."

"I knowed a book maker once," observed Miss Prickett, liberally ladling out the golden syrup of the quinces "as only got ninety cents a day and found himself."

"That was a bookbinder, Aunt Prickett," said Esther, her niece, who was serving up the waffles hot and hot, with a countenance considerably inflamed from the vicinity of the kitchen stove.

"Well, where's the difference?" sharply retorted Miss Prickett.

"And everybody knows as printers don't get no wages to signify," joined in Mrs Luke Biggs, who wore a green dyed silk, with plated bracelets and a cameo breastpin as large as an individual butter plate. "I saw one standing on the steps of a newspaper office, and he wore a dreadful shabby hat, with no coat, and a shirt as was all blacks and grease spots only fit for a wash tub."

"Printers have to dress according to their work, I spose," said Luke, surlily.

The Biggs family had not been like Dr Watts' proverbial birds, which 'in their little nests agreed.' Horatio Biggs had overreached his two younger brothers in business, and had set up a general store in Biggsville, out of the result of his sharp practice with a tall, angular wife who despised Mrs Luke because she had worked in a factory, and scorned Mrs Hiram because she was a teacher when her husband first met her. Luke Biggs was a selfish, grinding, miserly fellow, who drudged away on the old farm because he was too parsimonious to spend the money necessary to enter any other business, and Mrs Luke's chief end and aim in life was to screw enough cash out of her husband to outshine the other matrons and maids of the neighborhood. Miss Josepha Biggs, the unmarried daughter, made dresses for "the genteelest families only," and old Mr and Mrs Biggs lived in a wing of the old homestead, and when they were not quarreling between themselves made common cause against Mrs Horatio.

Under the circumstances it was not to be marveled at that Hiram Biggs who had contrived to get an education from a slender share of the family money [illegible] thousand dollars left by a distant [illegible], and gobbled up at once by the [illegible] and the young wife that he [illegible] had found the air full of [illegible] electricity, and removed to [illegible]

[illegible] for it," said Mrs. Horatio [illegible] are [illegible] a mis-[illegible]

[illegible] ain't no business at all. [illegible] was café [illegible] now, or [illegible], or if [illegible] had energy [illegible] go into the millinery trade, instead of paying good [illegible] money for a spring hat, as she did when [illegible] was staying here in April! But I've no faith in their calculations and never had."

Mr and Mrs Hiram Biggs, however, had ambitions which the family never dreamed of. Hiram's tastes had always been of a refined and literary nature, and several simple stories of rural life which he had ventured to send with fear and trembling to a popular monthly magazine, had been accepted and liberally paid for. And Elizabeth, though she could not trim hats, and abhorred the dressmaking business, had a delicate fancy with her pencil in illustrating the ideal dreams of [illegible], and she too tried her luck, and succeeded in the artistic world, much to her own amazement. And as time went on their good fortune became more pronounced. Mr Biggs wrote a satirical novel under the nom de plume of "Paul De Saves" which had a wide and brilliant circulation; Mrs Biggs illustrated a popular poem which was brought out in an edition de luxe at Christmas. And the young couple became the fashion.

The Biggses of Biggsville, not being literary were a long time in finding out that their kinspeople were succeeding in the world. At first they declined to credit the thing at all, having a settled idea that the "bookmaking business," as they persisted in calling it, was but a grade above the avocation of the rag picker. But when at last they realized matters, they decided that Hiram and Elizabeth ought to be encouraged.

"I've never been to New York," said old Mr. Biggs. Folks tell me it's quite a stirring place. I guess I'll go and stay a spell with Hiram's folks. And it'll be a good opportunity for mother to buy herself that new alpacky gownd she's been cacklin about over so long."

"I don't see why I shouldn't see the world as well as other folks," remarked Mrs Biggs senior.

"I shouldn't wonder if I went along to get a look at the fall fashions," said Miss Josepha.

"Well, while we're about it," suggested Mrs Horatio, "why don't we make up a party and get excursion tickets cheap? I've always wanted to see what the city was like myself, only I don't care about paying hotel prices."

Mrs Luke entered with ardor into the scheme, and the old man sat down, with a single sheet of fibrous paper, a muddy inkstand, and a stumpy steel pen tied on a stick with thread, to concoct a letter in which he formally notified "Hiram's folks" of the pleasure that they might expect.

The document was brought just as Hiram Biggs was getting into the spirit of his morning work in his study, with Elizabeth dreaming at an adjoining table and the breath of a vase of Niphetos roses perfuming all the room-

'We must do the best we can, Hiram,' perplexedly knitting her brows together.

'My darling child, there is no 'best' about it,' groaned Hiram, tearing his hair—which being brown and curly, looked none the less picturesque for the operation. 'You don't know the peculiarities of the operation. You will be dragged up and down Grand street, Eighth avenue, and the Bowery from morning to night—you will have to visit every show, theatre or picture gallery in New York and pay all the bills. Your housekeeping would be picked to pieces, your dress criticised, and ten to one my mother will offer to come here and take charge of the baby, while Josepha will volunteer to improve your most cherished drawings.'

Mrs Hiram Biggs glanced with terror at the plump little baby who, in charge of its white capped nurse, was being carried up and down the pavement in front of the house. Then she looked piteously around the pretty brussels carpeted library with its deep crimson curtained bay windows, its tall Dracæna plants in Majolica vases, its oil paintings and Japanese scrolls, its cages of green paroquets, and shelves of china and bric-a-brac, and pictured to herself the whole Biggs family spreading themselves over this sacred precinct. She was only human, too, this young wife; she could scarcely help remembering how Mrs Horatio had snubbed her when she first came, a timid and shrinking bride, to the Biggs farm house; how Mrs Luke had once refused to lend her twenty-five cents, in Hiram's absence, to pay charges on a telegram, alleging as a reason 'that it wasn't never good policy to have business matters between relations,' nor how old Mrs Biggs had cried and said 'that Hiram had shown dreadful poor judgement in selecting a wife'; Miss Josepha had taken especial pains to contradict every statement she made, and Luke and Horatio had ignored her altogether.

Hiram laughed. 'My little darling,' said he, 'I can interpret that look. You shall not be tormented out of your existence to become a convenience to a swarm of relations-in-law, who don't care a copper cent for you. If they had ever treated us decently it would be a different matter. As it is—'

'But, Hiram, you can't send word to your father and mother and brothers and sisters not to come,' pleaded Elizabeth.

Hiram said thoughtfully, 'No, I shall [illegible]

Mrs Biggs [illegible] cally.

'There's a family of Biggses in the next avenue,' said she—'H. Biggs, books, stationery and news agent.' They'll go there.

'Well, let them,' said Hiram. 'Just as they please so long as they don't come here.' And he threw the letter of Biggs pere in the scrap-basket, secretly feeling himself to be avenged on the family for all the slights and jeers and neglect that they had cast not only on him but on his gentle little Elizabeth.

'But Hiram,' said Mrs Biggs 'It seems so dreadful!'

'Not half so dreadful as a visitation of the whole Biggs family would be,' said Hiram, with a groan.

But Hiram knew but little of the perseverance [illegible] he believed that so trifling an impediment as a lack of invitation or delay in sending addresses wuld keep out the invasion. It was Canute and the ocean over again; and in three days the whole family arrived, all packed into one hack to save expenses, with a perfect leaning tower of Pisa of baggage on the roor, the driver perched in front nobody knew how, and Mrs Luke's two little boys astrade of the very apex of the tower.

At the first wholesale grocery store on Barclay street a directory was handed in and duly studied, and the driver, 'hanging half-way down like one who gathers samphire, dreadful trade,' was bidden to drive to No 26,012 Thirteenth Avenue.

'H. Biggs,' said Mrs Horatio.

'Book-maker and news agent,' added old Mrs Biggs, in high falsetto.

And the man chirruped to his horses and drove on.

'Humph!' sniffed Miss Josepha, who had had the good luck to secure a window 'If this is Hiram's elegant city mansion, it don't come up to my idea of style. Brown brick with dormer windows, and only two stories high; and the whole front a store with shutters up just exactly as if there had been a death in the family.'

'Dear me! how you do startle one! But there aint no crape on the door' said old Mrs Biggs.

'Mother takes everything so dead in earnest!' said Mr Luke Biggs ssornfully.

'Lemme see,' said Mrs Horatio, crowding across the old lady, and giving her best hat a poke not intended by the milliner. 'Well, I declare! I guess the book-maker's business ain't so dreadful full of money after all.'

'And a liquor store next door and a pawn broker across the street!' jeeringly observed Miss Josepha.

'P'raps that's the way folks live in New York,' said old Mr Biggs, who was squeezed nearly flat between his wife and Mrs Luke on the back seat.

Tain't what I expected to see,' said Mrs Horatio in accents of scarcely repressed scorn.

"I don't know how they can accommodate us all," sighed old Mrs. Biggs, vainly endeavoring to straighten her bonnet.

"That's their lookout," said Mrs. Luke, leaning comfortably back, with the heel of her boot balanced on her father-in-law's most sensitive corn.

The driver having by this time tumbled of his perilous seat, and rung the door-bell twice without evoking any signs of life from within, looked appealingly toward his fares.

"What am I to do?" said he.

"Ring again," said Mrs. Horatio.

And the hackman rang again, this time with so much energy as to pull the whole bell-wire out and precipitate himself backward on the pavement, like Hamlet at the first sight of his father's ghost, at which the little boys laughed engagingly, and a hat box tumbled down from the Leaning Tower into the gutter, where it split open like an over-ripe nut, revealing Mr. Horatio Biggs' best black felt hat.

"Boys, boys, do set steady up there!" screamed Mrs. Biggs. "Look! There some one coming at last. It is Hiram? Or is it Elizabeth?"

It was neither one nor the other, as it happened, but a stout old woman in a flannel dressing-gown, carpet slippers, and a red nose.

"Mr. Biggs' folks home?" shrilly inquired Mrs. Horatio, who had constituted herself spokeswoman for the party, without any formal appointment.

"Oh, yes," answered the old woman, in a snuffy, confidential sort of tone, "they're to hum. But p'raps the children hadn't better come in."

By this time the hackman had opened the door of the vehicle, and the tide of Bigges had begun to flow out on the pavement. But Mrs. Luke stopped abruptly on the carriage step, with her father-in-law's bronzed visage peeping over her shoulder.

"Not come in," said she. Why, we're their relations—come to visit 'em."

"Not but what they're a deal better, and the doctors say there ain't no more danger of contagion," reassuringly added the old woman.

"Contagion!" echoed the Biggs family.

"Hadn't you heard?" said the old woman, with the solid satisfaction which old women generally evince in communicating any startling piece of information. "Well, it [illegible] in the neighborhood, [illegible] people ain't been pleased with the Board of Health's [illegible] of sendin' 'em to hospital. They're every one of 'em, [illegible] and that's the [illegible] the man to drive back to the ferry as fast as he can. Perhaps we will be able to catch the four o'clock train back to Biggsville."

"I don't know," suggested the old woman, rather disappointed at this sudden withdrawal of the invading forces, "but you might have come to help nurse 'em."

"Nothing of the sort," Mrs. Horatio answered, as, forcing herself into the already overful hack, she slammed the poor with an emphatic bang and shouted to the driver to "Go on!"

'The—small pox!' Groaned Mrs Biggs senior. And not one of the children has been vaccinated!'

'We had better stop at the nearest drug store and have it done at once,' said Mrs Luke breathlessly.

'It'll be dreadful expensive,' said Mrs Horatio.

'But it'll be cheaper than having the small-pox,' argued Mrs Biggs.

So, after this important sanitary ceremonial, during which the Biggs boys bawled as if they had been flayed alive, the family returned, without loss of time, to Biggsville.

And Hiram's folks did not have the pleasure, then or ever of entertaining their relations. In fact, they never dreamed how near they had been to that happiness. The Biggsville Biggses declared over and over again that they never should forgive their city relations, but as Hiram's folks did not know it, they were saved from any overwhelm- pangs of conscience. They wrote a letter to the board of health, reproaching them bitterly with the bad management of the varioloid case in Thirteenth Avenue, but they never got any answer from that august body. In short the Biggs family were very angry, bnt they would probably have been angrier still if they had known with what fortitude Hiram's folks endured the deprivation of their society.

AN EXPLANATION.

No one medicine will cure everything, but it is an incontestible fact that Thomas' Eclectric Oil will cure a sprain, a bruise, a bite, or an ache, and is also an active and pronounced cure for neuralgia and rheumatism.

A Pawnee City (Neb) man sent this order to his merchant: "Please send by barer too pounds of shugor, a blackin brush, five pounds of coffey, and some little nails—(my wife had a baby last night)—and two padlocks and a monkey-wrench."

A FINE HIT.

When the proprietors of Burdock Blood Bitters put this renowned medicine on the market they hit it exactly. They hit dyspepsia, indigestion, and liver and kidney complaint a hard blow, from which they will never recover.

WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT has resigned the presidency of the New York Central, Michigan Southern, and Michigan Cen-tral railways and gone on a pleasure trip to Europe. He has been succeeded as executive officer in these roads by his two sons William R. and Cornelius. He is still the power behind the throne and will as of old outline the schemes for the general management of the above ponderous corporations.

DOCUMENTS containing charges against a dozen persons accused of mur-der in Ireland, who are now in America, have been forwarded to the British Minister at Washington with a view of demanding their extradition. Deposi-tions will be lodged in the cases of five more alleged murderers. Secret nego-tions are now said to be proceeding be-tween the British and American gov-ernments with a view to the extradition of these men.

IN New York city on the 19th and 20th of June the 27th annual convention of the N. Y. Press Association will be held. It is announced that Hon. Chaun-cey M. Depew will deliver the annual address. A steamboat excursion to Glen Island, a fashionable and popular pleas-ure resort, has been tendered the mem-bers of the convention by Ex-Congress-man Starin. It is believed that this con-vention will be more eagerly attended by N. Y. State editors than any of its predecessors.

THE Saturday Night Club gave a din-ner in New York Saturday evening to several distinguished men among whom were Gen. Grant and Hon. Roscoe Conkling. There was the usual after dinner speech making. Mr. Conkling among other things said: "One of my friends here to-night is a leader and ex-ample of the democrat party. Well, he and the rest of them are about to control the country; indeed, they control it pretty well already. Two years ago the republican party came out with flying colors from the greatest battle it had ever fought, in which tho' weighted down and struggling against heavy odds, it triumphed and flew its banner in every state from sea to sea. To-day in almost every state from sea to sea it lies prostrate."

THE Republican party is beginning to discuss with much seriousness their chances of success in the fall elections. The New York Sun says if the present distracted contracted of the party in State should continue it would be over-whelmingly defeated in the next elec-tion. Some of the leaders are trying to bring the two factions together, but the figures of the last election are very dis-couraging. Folger's vote fell 213,080 below that cast for Garfield, or, in other words, nearly two-fifths of the Republi-cans refused to support the regular can-didate for Governor, though he was one of the pillars of the national Adminis-tration. These 213,080 voters are Half Breeds. The Republican State Commit-tee is controlled by Stalwarts, and so are the central committees in a large majority of the cities and counties. This faction would manage the work of reorganization in its own interests. The Half Breeds know this, and object to coming under the Stalwart yoke.

THE Legislature has adjourned sine die. Previous to adjournment Gover-nor Cleveland sent in a batch of nomin-ations to the Senate for confirmation. Among them the Harbor Masters, Port Wardens, Quarantine Commissioners, Civil Service Commissioners, Commis-sioners of the State Survey, Chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics and Captain of the Port. The Civil Service Commis-sions and Chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics were confirmed and the re-maining nominations referred to com-mittees. This aroused the Governor, who sent in a sharp message rebuk-ing the Senate for not confirming his nominations. A spirited discus-sion followed as the message was referred to the finance commit-tee. An extra session may be called Tammany and the Governor are out, as the Democrats in the Senate represent-ing that organization refused to vote for the confirmation of the above named of-ficers. The harmony of last fall is be-coming somewhat ruffled.

[illegible] and have in fact [illegible] been an unusually good season for [illegible] The city colleges sent out several hun-dred last month, some of whom have cast their lot here, hoping to battle suc-cessfully with all the different diseases which the body is heir to.

These youthful doctors, however, upon their entry into the practical world have met with a difficulty, which threatens to injure their professional reputation and materially hinder their progress. Since the early part of spring, a peculiar disease has manifested itself in various parts of the city and has thus far baffled the skill of the whole profession. It is not confined to any particular locality and yet many cases are directly tracea-ble to the upper part of the city. The Board of Health have been active for several weeks and are using all precau-tions to prevent the spreading of the disease. Our citizens finally became so thoroughly aroused that the medical profession held a consultation last week to diagnose a case and decide upon some mode of future treatment. The discus-sion was naturally warm and animated, the "regulars" taking one view and the "irregulars," an entirely different one. The latter however carried the day, it is said, and the announcement followed that "dude" fever was raging and fur-thermore that it was apparently conta-gious. The query now is, what is "dude" fever and what gave it its name? Many unsuccessful attempts have been made to answer this. One writer says the word is derived from "dood," another form of "good." Another says it is de-rived from "dugong" which being short-ened gives "duge." This was changed to "dude" for the sake of euphony. This sounds very well but the etymology is quite unsatisfactory, if not doubtful. The only theory that is now accepted as true and reasonable is that "dude" is the anglicized form of the Latin "dudum," meaning "not long ago, lately, a short time since." The fact alone that the disease is of recent origin would seem to be sufficient proof of the propriety of its name.

But this is not all. There are certain symptoms plainly to be observed in the patient as he walks along the street. And here let me remark that a patient is never confined to the house. He is constantly on the move—generally on Broadway or Fifth Avenue—conveying to one the idea that it was a "short time since" he left his residence or place of business. Then again there are striking symptoms of brevity to be noticed, such as a close fitting collar, small tie, coat rather short, pants high and not too large, shoes a la toothpick, small cane, and it is said that his cerebrum is not well developed; but this is as yet a mere theory of a few of the profession and is yet to be proved by actual exam-ination. These symptoms have devel-oped somewhat gradually and more are looked for as soon as the weather be-comes warmer. It might be inferred that males were the only victims of this fever. Such was the fact until very re-cently when several of the opposite sex were observed with some of the pre-monitory symptoms. It is estimated that their case will be hopeless in two weeks.

The fever still spreads and the doctors are at the present time doubtful as to the correct remedies to prescribe. The "regulars" advise more cloth and less cane while the irregulars suggest less collar and more brain. Another meet-ing will be held next week.

In the meantime their verdict will be anxiously awaited by GILL FUDDY.

No other preparation so concentrates and combines blood-purifying, vitilizing, enriching and invigorating qualities as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Ruality should be considered when making comparisons.

Changes in Sunday Law.

The Sunday law provisions in the Penal Code have been amended, and having passed both houses of the Legis-lature and signed by Gov. Cleveland are now in force. They should be read by all:—

Section 263 has been amended so as to read as follows: "All labor on Sunday is prohibited, excepting works of neces-sity or charity. In works of necessity or charity is included whatever is needed during the day for the good order, health or comfort of the commu-nity."

Section 265 is amended as follows; 'All shooting, hunting, fishing, playing, horse racing, gambling or other public sports, exercises or shows upon the first day of the week, and all noise disturb-ing the peace of the day are prohibited."

Section 266 now reads: "All trades, manufactures, agricultural or mechan-ical employments upon the first day of the week are prohibited, except that when the same are works of necessity they may be performed on that day in their usual and ordinary manner so as not to interfere with the repose and re-ligious liberty of the community."

Section 267 is amended as follows: "All manner of public selling or offering for sale of any property upon Sunday is prohibited, except that articles of food may be sold and supplied at any time before ten o'clock in the morning, and except also that meals may be sold to be eaten off the premises where sold or served elsewhere by caterers, and pre-pared tobacco in places other than where spirituous or malt liquors or wines are kept or offered for sale, and confection-ery, newspapers, drugs, medicines and surgical appliances may be sold in a quiet and orderly manner at any time of the day."

A Taxpayer on the Condition of Second Street.

EDITOR FULTON TIMES:—

FULTON, May 8—As we are favored this year in having a thorough going business man for President of the village and a Board of Trustees selected from the best and most energetic men of our village, may we not reasonably expect this Board to compel the New York On-tario & Western Railroad company who have had $300,000 of our money and been granted every privilege they de-sired in the way of using streets to the general damage of all owners of property on Second street to perform some part of its agreement with this village in the way of graveling, planking, and placing Second street in a passable and present-able condition? At many of the cross-ings there are no planks and we are compelled to drive over the bare rails and ties at the risk of breaking our wagons as well as our necks.

The railroad company should be made to put Second street north of Erie in good shape for travel with teams to the "Flat" or lower part of the village as it was before this road was built; and they should also be made to plank between the tracks and gravel or pave each side of Second street so as to make it safe to travel with teams its entire length, or at least from Erie street south to Divis-ion street. They should also be made to keep flagmen at each crossing when there is much travel, say at Seneca, Oneida, Cayuga and Broadway. These streets should be more carefully guarded especially when so many coal trains are running. The company have been allowed to do very little work owing to the fact that they were poor. But they are now in shape to pay their way and there is no good reason why they should not comply with their contract with the village of Fulton. The Board of Trus-tees will be held responsible if they fail to enforce said contract. If the R. R. company have a right to use Second street in the way they have thus far done, and pay no attention to the public then let us abandon the street and not require owners of lots along the street to build sidewalks, shovel snow &c.

Importance of Roots, Herbs and Barks, for the Cure of Chronic Diseases.

If the same amount of time in re-search and experiments had been ex-pended on the vegetable kingdom as have been on the mineral for the cure of human ills, there would be much less disease and suffering in our land to-day; for there are herbs provided by our Heavenly Father, to cure all diseases, if we but seek them out and test their vir-tues; and when properly combined, there is no disease but will yield to their curative powers. The discoveries of each succeeding day convince us of the importance of attending more strictly to the use of herbs, roots, barks, &c., for the treatment of all diseases. The most uninviting and noxious weeds fre-quently give relief in almost hopeless cases.

But, experiments on this subject have been too much neglected. Many of our best and most experienced physicians have within the last few years, largely changed their mode of treatment and are now using roots, herbs, etc., instead of minerals, such as mercury, arsenic, zinc and lead, which have done more to injure and break down the human sys-tem, all over the land, than all other causes. The patient calls his physician and relies on him to cure and bring him through a protracted illness, but, how frequently it is that the patient feels the injurious effects of the poisonous medicines in his or her system all through their remaining days.

We have known many cases, which have come under our own personal ob-servation, where the patient has been covered with Salt Rheum, or Scrofulous sores, and, where outward applications were used to heal these sores, and when healed over were pronounced cured; but soon made their appearance on another part of the body in a much more aggra-vated and sickening form. It is very foolish and absurd to teach or believe that such diseases as Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, or Neuralgia, all of which are caused by diseased and im-pure blood, can be cured by any other treatment than that will first cleanse the blood of its impurities.

If those who suffer from these dis-eases would think for a moment as to what was the direct cause of Scrofula or Salt Rheum, they could readily under-stand why it is that outward applica-tion work more injury than good. In Salt Rheum, the blood and fluids seem to be impregnated with a fiery element, which, when discharged through the pores upon the surface of the body, in-flames and burns, until in his efforts for relief, the patient tears the skin with his nails, and not until the blood flows, does sufficient relief come to cause him to desist. Then the patient will grasp at any thing he may see advertised and there are scores of people who are eager to make money even at the expense of the poor suffer, and who advertise that these the worst of all diseases can be cured by applying salves, or by bathing. The latter, we admit, is very necessary, for it helps greatly in opening the pores and largely prevents the extreme inflam-mation arising from this acrid discharge. But, we challenge the world to produce a single case where a permanent cure has ever been effected by any treatment, other than that of purifying the blood, and to do this all know that we must begin at the primary cause or root of this disease, viz: the Liver and Kid-neys, for by the derangement of these, most important organs of the body, the poisonous or effete matter, which should pass off with the insensible perspiration outwardly, or the waste matter of the system inwardly, is sucked up with its impurities and enters into and circulates in the blood until the whole system is impregnated with uric, or lithic acid, and its soon shows itself on the skin in small watery blisters, discharging an acrid fluid, causing heat inflammation and intense itching. Nothing short of a remedy that will restore the Liver and Kidneys to healthy action and that will nourish and strengthen the debilitated system and thus supply the veins with pure and rich blood, can be of any avail.

Rheumatic Syrup has proven itself to be the safest and most effective remedy to regulate the Liver and Kidneys, and for expelling all impurities from the blood ever offered to the human family. It is a compound of fruits herbs, roots and barks, entirely free from all miner-al or poisons of any kind, and acts direct on the Liver, Kidneys and blood, building up the debilitated system, and leaving the patient free from the inju-rious effects in after years, such as is ex-perienced after the use of mercury, arsenic, and other mineral subtsances. Whenever it has been used for any de-rangement of the Liver, Kidneys, or di-gestive organs, or for skin and blood dis-eases, its effects have been so marked and improvement so plain that it was unnecessary to ask the patient if they were being benefitted by its use, for the life-like expression of the eye, the color on the cheek, the elastic step, the clear voice, all told you that the title of "The Greatest Blood Purifier known" right-fully belong to it.

If you are a suffer from Salt Rheum, Scrofula, Rheumatism, or Neuralgia, or if your blood is thin and unhealthy, re-ly on Rheumatic Syrup and be cured by its use.

Druggists sell it. Send for a circular of testimonials from those who have been cured of diseases so extraordinary that they desire to let their fellow-suf-fers know of its superior merits. Man-ufactured by the Rheumatic Syrup Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Boys' and Children's Clothing a Specialty.
Clothing to Measure, only in first-class style.

The Strongest Argument

after all, the best test of acceptable service on the part of any mer-chant is the number of permanent customers he secures. Some clothing houses assume that "A bird in the hand is worth two in tha bush," and take chances of their customers' return after they had once been stuck "stuck." But alas! The supply of new cus-tomers finally runs out, and it is only a question of time when the artiful dodger is left no more lambs to shear. We have a strong and growing constituency to whom we refer with pride. Many of our customers have dealt with and sent their friends to be clothed by us. The verdict is that our Men's and Boy's Clothing is reli-able, and we lay more stress upon that than upon any other fea-ture of our business. Downright honesty is what we insist upon, both in process or satisfaction and treatment of our customers. Of course we make mistakes; who don't? But the person does not live who can truthfully assert when informed of a fault in our merchandise, we have ever refused to make it good. Supervisor Howard requests The Times to announce that the school money is ready for distribution and those holding orders can have them cashed by presenting to him or at the First National Bank. Fulton. Supervisor Wright of Granby makes the same announcement.

The Cleveland Lakeside Press says one of the best steam saw mills in Oswego county is located in the northern extremity of this town, situated on the east margin of Panther lake. The mill was erected last summer by the owner and proprietor, Thos. R. Wright, of Oswego Falls, present Supervisor of Granby, who has now a very large stock of [illegible] boom near his mill; amount estimated at 2,000,000 feet. It is said to be capable of cutting lumber at the rate of [illegible] per hour, when fully manned and manipulated under the supervision of Hector Martin of Oswego Falls as head sawyer and M. Guile of the same place as assistant.

[illegible] guilty of murder [illegible] in Oswego Friday [illegible] first degree [illegible] A few minutes [illegible] o'clock Saturday evening [illegible] completed his charge and the case was given to the jury.

The Palladium says the first ballot resulted: murder in the first degree 9; murder in the second degree 2; manslaughter in the first degree 1. The next two ballots resulted, murder in the first degree, 9; murder in the second degree, 3. The jury at 10 o'clock came up stairs and asked Judge Vann for information as to what constitutes murder in the second degree, and what constitutes murder in the first degree. The difference was explained to them and they again returned.

At 12:20 the jury returned and announced that they had agreed upon a verdict. When the foreman announced the verdict in answer to the clerk: "Guilty of murder in the first degree" Gifford betrayed no emotion and received the news with wonderful complacency. Court adjourned until 10 o'clock Friday when Gifford was brought in to receive his sentence. When the prisoner was asked what he had to say why sentence should not be pronounced he said: "I am not guilty of murdering my wife with intent."

THE SENTENCE.

Judge Vann said:—"After a long, and I believe fair trial, you have been convicted of the highest crime known to the law. You have been defended by able counsel, who labored nobly and did all in their power for you. The court in ruling, where there has been a possibility of any doubt, has held in your favor The jurymen were selected with great care, and after a patient investigation, have found that, with premeditated design, you took the life of your wife. The most painful duty of my whole life, the law requires of me, and that is, that I pass judgment upon you. I cannot trust myself to say much to you—there is not much to say, I would not add anything to your sufferings. Nothing remains for me to do but to pronounce the stern and dreadful sentence of the law. The sentence of the court is, that, at the place and in the manner prescribed by law, on Friday, the 22d day of June, 1883, between the hours of 8 o'clock in the forenoon and 3 o'clock in the afternoon, you be hung by the neck until you are dead, and may God have mercy on your soul.

Judge Avery then made application for an extension of 30 days in which to file a bill of exceptions. It was granted. A 30 days' stay was also granted the people in which to make amendments to the bill.

Judge Huntington assures the old man that he is confident of securing him a new trial. One of the points which will be relied upon for a new trial for Gifford will be that several of the jury attended chaplain McCabe's lecture in which capital punishment was discussed and advocated. The verdict was a surprise to every one who had watched the proceedings. The opinion generally prevails that a commutation of his sentence to imprisonment would be humane under the circumstances besides saving the county an enormous expense. The old gentleman is quite composed under the circumstances.

Board of Excise.

The Board of Excise held a meeting in W. C. Stephens' law office Monday evening. The schedule of prices for licenses for 1883 was fixed as follows: Hotels from $40 to $75; store, $75; beer $30, and drug store, $30. The following licenses were granted:

Hotel.—B. C. & D. D. Briggs, Summit House Seneca Hill, T. S. Burden, Burden House and John C. Dresser, Johnson House.

Store—John V. Boomer.

Drug store—[illegible] D. Spooner.

Beer—G F Sharp, Frank McNamara, Michael Pomphret, James Otis, John C. Patrick, James Barnes, Michael Connelly and Timothy Sullivan.

The board adjourned to meet at 7 o'clock to-night in W. C. Stephens' office.

A delegation of citizens was present Monday night and asked the board to refuse licenses to all places having gambling devices, and pool and billiard tables. As applicants for licenses give bonds that they will live up to its requirements the board think they are required to grant licenses to all who make proper application. If it can be shown that a liquor seller violates his license the board expresses a willingness to revoke it.

Proper Methods and Right Service.

"Mine honor is my life; both grow in one;
Take honor from me and my life is done."
[Richard II

Punctiliousness in the ordinary affairs of life is rarer than in the extraordinary A man will be proper in company who is very improper in his relations to his own family. A man will be very careful to do right in the presence of the church, who will do wrong in the retirement of his inner business office. His honor is dear to him as life in theory; his life is tainted with dishonor in practice. We all know such men; but they do not know themselves. They become, often, inexplicably mysterious to their fellow men; bundles of inconsistencies while believing them to be models of sincerity and truth. The trouble is that they can only see the outward and never dream that other people can see more. Their honor is not their life, and so, losing honor they still live on, coming at last to the grand catastrophe when they see as they are [illegible]

A lady residing in Upper Oswego Falls had repeatedly asked her husband to saw a huge limb from an apple tree that grated harshly against the house during wind storms. The husband promised and promised but failed to act, Monday she borrowed a saw and mounted the limb determined to sever the obnoxious limb. She, woman fashion, secured a seat upon the limb she was sawing and was half killed by the fall.

The Board of Supervisors held a meeting in Oswego Wednesday to take action in relation to the county jail in that city. The committee appointed to investigate the matter made a report recommending making improvements and repairs to the extent of $16,000 or $19,000. It was moved that the report of the committee be adopted. Supervisor Howard of Volney thought the amount too much and offered as an amendment that the sum of $2500 be appropriated for drainage and ventilation. There was a heated discussion but Mr. Howard's amendment was adopted. The question of building a new jail will undoubtedly come up at the regular session.

William White, son of John White, and Miss Thorza Wright of lower Oswego Falls were united in marriage Wednesday evening May 5th by Rev. Father Kearney. Rev. L. Golden has accepted a call from the First Baptist church in Clinton, N. Y.

[illegible] Clark, an old and respected resident of the town, and father of the Clark Brothers, died at the residence of his son William in this village last Wednesday evening. Funeral was held from the Baptist church Saturday at 10 o'clock.

Ladies from the village or country will find it to their interests to call on Mrs J. E. Miller next Friday and Saturday and inspect her large assortment of trimmed and untrimmed hats, also trimming and flowers of all kinds, which will be sold at the lowest living prices.

Fulton May 8.—Miss Minnie Hill of Fulton and Mr. Charles Foster of the town of Oswego, N. Y., were married last Sunday afternoon at the residence of the brides parents by Rev. J. W. Lyon of the M. P. church. They have many friends in Fulton who unite in wishing them success through life.

Clarence W. Streeter has received the agency of the following companies: London and Lancaster fire, Northern Imperial, Commercial Union, Liverpool London & Globe of London, Hamburg, Bremen, Connecticut, Phœnix and Ætna of Hartford. C. H. David has received the agency of the Manufacturer's fire and marine insurance companies.

At a regular meeting of Fulton lodge I. O. of G. T., held on Monday evening the following officers were installed for the ensuing quarter:—W. C. T.—David Hovey; W. V. T.—Mrs N. R. Cole; W. S.—Miss Ida Miller; W. A. S.—Mrs A. Emerick; W. F. S.—Jay Palmer; W. T.—Mrs Jas Morrow; W. C.—Mrs H. S. Gardner; W. M.—Wm. Mosher; W. D. M.—Miss Carrie Hall; I. G.—Miss Mila Kimball; O. G.—Thos Newton; R. H. S.—Mrs D. Hovey; L. H. S.—Miss Dora Harman; Organist—Mrs L. Livingston.

Gilbert M. Yates, Esq. who came to Fulton in January, 1882, and established himself as a law partner with G. S. Piper, Esq., has severed his connection therewith and departed from Fulton Monday. He will spend a few days with his parents in Canajoharie, N. Y., and then leave for Dakota, where he will seek to establish himself in some enterprising town.

During his stay in Fulton he has made many friends who wish him a bright future. On April 2d he was appointed a Justice of the Peace to succeed W. C. Crombie, resigned. His departure causes a vacancy in Town Board which will be filled by that body appointing his successor.

George K. son of Willis and Mrs. A. K. Ney died at the residence of his parents on Cayuga street, Saturday evening aged 18 years. He had been sick for some time and for weeks his life hung by a single thread but by the most devoted and loving care from his parents he rallied and partially recovered his wonted vigor. During the later part of the winter he was about town. When attacked the second time his strength gradually failed, with an occasional rally, that formed a delusive hope on the part of friends that he might recover until a few days previous to death he sank into a stupor from which he never recovered. His death was caused by an affection of the brain to which his whole sickness is attributable. George Ney was a young man who possessed many admirable traits and was respected and honored by his myriad of companions. The early ending of a life that gave promise of usefulness; also comfort and assistance to loving parents is to be deplored and is only another illustration of the inscrutable workings of a Wise hand. His death brings sorrow to many hearts. Funeral services were held yesterday at 10:30 a. m. from the house, Rev. A. U. Hutchins, formerly pastor of the Universalist church, officiating. Hundreds of friends were present. The floral offerings were superb. The students in the senior department of Fulton Union School, of which deceased was a pupil, attended the funeral in a body accompanying the remains to Mt. Adnah Cemetery. Six of his associates Fred B. Highriter, Joseph Appelt, William Hough, William Patterson, John McIntyre and Justin Morrill acted as bearers.

Thou gavest and we yield to Thee
God of the human heart.
For bitter though grief's cup may be
Thou givest but one part.

O, Thou canst bid our grief be stilled,
Yet not rebuke our tears.
How large a place his presence filled!
How vacant it appears!

We mourn the sunshine of his smile
The tendrils of his love;
Oh, was he bound too well the while
Ere he was called above.

Our chastened spirits bow in prayer,
And blend all prayers in one,—
Give us the hope to meet him there,
When life's full task is done.

[illegible] Undertaking [illegible] a number of foraging parties [illegible] government wagons with their drivers, an officer in charge from Brigade headquarters, also a couple of companies of one of the regiments of the brigade.

I think it was January, 1862, that there were several wagons sent out with a company from the 30th regiment as an escort. They went out past "Sewells" (all the 24th boys know where Sewell's was) and finally came to a farm house where there was food for both man and beast, and while the wagons were being loaded the boys stacked arms and proceeded to enjoy the situation, eating turnips and whatever else they could find. Finally a squadron of rebel cavalry who had been watching "a little out" came down on them, got between them and their arms, and as a matter of course captured nearly all of them and I think all the wagons, with but a very left to tell the tale. That night Colonel Sullivan who was commanding the Brigade ordered the left wing of the 24th under command of Major Tarabell, out on a reconnoissance to see what was going on. We went out past Sewell's and finally came to the place where the 30th boys ware gobbled up, arriving there about 10 or 11 p. m. Part of the men were thrown out as pickets and the rest of them proceeded to take what the 30th boys had left. We found two or three carts and some oxen which were yoked and hitched to the carts. These were loaded with turnips, potatoes, corn and I don't know what all, and about 1 a. m. the pickets were called in and we started back to camp.

"Brate" Colvin, one of the boys of our company was a natural born forager. He was never so happy as when he was interviewing a hen roost or communing with a bee "gum." Colvin was along with us that night and as luck would have it he and myself were detailed on picket and both occupied the same post or fence corner. The poor fellow was nearly heart broken to think of the chances which he was missing that the other boys were improving. Finally I left the post and went to the house and got a couple of turnips which we ate as we sat there, but that was not "a satisfying portion." Just before we started back to camp, Colvin, went to Captain O. J. Jennings and says: "Captain, I was on picket and didn't get a thing, can I 'fall out' on the way back to camp?" Of course the Captain couldn't give him such permission but you know it was dark and no roll call would be had until next morning.

The next morning just about daylight Colvin went to Capt Jennings again and said: "Captain, get up and open this tent." The Captain told him to go away and leave him, but he would not be put off, and finally he got up out of his warm bed thoroughly vexed and went to the door to give Colvin a scolding for disturbing him, but the first thing which met his gaze was a plate full of nice comb honey. Colvin had got in his work at Sewells bee house.

That morning Capt Jennings' mess had hot biscuit and honey for breakfast and as Major T reached over for another slice of the delicious fruit of the white clover blossom, he remarked that such a man as Colvin was of inestimable value.

Along towards night one of the Sewell "niggers" brought in a report from the ladies (of which there were several) that they had been robbed of considerable honey the night before. Then the Major's indignation knew no bounds. "To think that he should go there and rob my friends in that way. He must be punished for it." The Captain remarked to him that it was hardly in keeping with his remark of the morning when he was enjoying the biscuit and honey. Finally, if I recollect aright, he paid his friends for the honey.

P. S. Poor Colvin fell at 2d Bull Run while bravely fighting to save the flag from being captured.

Accusing and Denying.

The Columbus, Ohio, Dispatch, of April 27th, under the heading "Rossvally Roaming in New York" says:

"According to the Pulaski, N. Y., Democrat of the 26th, the people of that section have not "tumbled" to Mr. Rossvally's little game. While here he traveled with a young lady whom he represented as his daughter. This hallucination was broken by the night clerk at the Davidson House making the discovery that Mr. Rossvally was in the apartment occupied by the alleged drughter, at a very unseasonable hour and in a limited costume, when, so far as could be observed, there was no occasion for a father to visit the bedroom of a young lady daughter at that hour of the night and under the circumstances mentioned. Rossvally was condemned by the clergy of Columbus as a fraud. He claims to have been converted from the Jewish faith."

The Parish Sun of last week has the following:—

We have noticed, in the Pulaski Democrat of last and this week, some articles detrimental to the moral character of Dr. Rossvally, but having seen letters, and being familiar with all the circumstances connected with the slander, we can say, and back our assertion with the best proof, that the Dr. is innocent of any misconduct in the matter alluded to. That the Dr. is worthy of confidence as a man and a Christian, none who know him and his record best, can doubt. We shall say more hereafter.

Dr. Rossvally was in Fulton last winter and his instructive and entertaining lectures were listened to by hundreds of people. The Doctor [illegible] are concocted by some of his old co-religionists, who lose no opportunity to [illegible]

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

TRADE MARK

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

My looms are running lively and [illegible] and the filling is not [illegible] my looms are on a strike and [illegible] gossiping about is in what [illegible] and demoralizes business and [illegible] no one's prosperity. I find that steady, honest work from week to week brings a better return than any periodical and spasmodic twist to get more money for the same hours of labor. I am trying to live content by doing well, but may not be able to give as gorgeous a party as Mrs. Vanderbilt and may be a little off color in diamonds and outside wearing gear, but I sleep well "a nights" and my stomach is tranquil. Ned says he is having none of the solicitude that is filling the air around the royal castles of St. Petersburg in anticipation of the coronation of the Czar. Dynamite and whisky are two dangerous forces which soon or late effectually hoist the persons who conceitedly fool around or toy with the fuse. The gin and rum poured from cut decanters over a marble slab work their legitimate results just as certainly as about the same pure (?) poison dealt out at the lowest dive in town Both are licensed by the representatives of the law to do the same disreputable business, which it is conceded by a very large majority of the community to be the most prolific source and instigator of crime and misery. It is not the gilded "regulation" that makes it ennobling and builds character and gives us honest, industrious and useful men. A reform that has a little pure liquor in it that allows only an occasional drink is standing in slippery places and numerous and dangerous airholes are all around. This is a very weak kneed reform and only total abstinence can "reform it altogether." Some wise and interested persons dispose of this and other questions by this somewhat charitable and profound statement, "he is insane, a wild and crazy fanatic!" The supply of billingsgate in some families and neighborhoods is greater by several tons (tongues) than honest, truthful argument.

Ned says since he has been in the dye business he has learned that for coloring matter that is impervious and unmoved by the action of water he can commend the mixture that gives the roseate tint to many a nose found in the hotels and gin mills over in Fulton. We have about the same material over here, but the color does not set quite as quick and its fatality is not as instantaneous on account of a larger per cent of water from lake Neahtawanta.

My husband's mother has returned from Jones', up at Ingells Crossing and is lending her ever helping hand to lessen the cares and duties of our little home. She reenforces the heels of Ned's stockings and ties on the buttons to his shirts the washerwoman has hammered off; she says "Martha, I feel competent to do most that needs seeing to about the house, but I cannot give advice how you shall fill your warp or govern your children; it will be quite time enough when you insist upon my opinion verbal or written."

Mary, in last weeks TIMES comes to my aid (one conversion) and criticises the short comings of Ned, which, perhaps is not entirely unmerited, and also wishes to know the views of Martha on woman suffrage &c—Mary says "she wants to vote." I am glad of it; that at least shows interest, and if she votes for human progress and especially prohibition she cannot be far from the right road if she makes it practical. But I am sorry to know that so many of my sisters take no interest in Mrs. Livermore's "coming man" and use none of the means for the promotion of any reform, especially the temperance one. This indifference foreshadows to some extent what would be their action, or rather inaction, if the ballot was placed in their hands. When the women in this State who number fifty-two thousand or more than the men, fully comprehend the danger and misery that follow and attend whisky selling, pool playing and dram drinking there will be a sentiment prevailing in every town that will reach the ear of the average legislator whose honest heart swells with emotion and yearns to do something for his constituents! I fear there are some women that do not quite realize the privilege and responsibility that is theirs. You truly say that Ned is that stamp of a man that "don't reform in a minute." This is true, reform is another name for growth. A man cannot be a poor misguided sinner, with the marks and sharp lines of violated law plainly written upon his mortal body and moral nature and to-morrow a saint, a perfected man. But time and earnest work have in them the grandest possibilities. Ned says he knows he is not quite as strong as he might have been if he had never indulged in spirituous drink, but says he is fully determined to keep on his flannels for warmth instead of resorting to whisky toddies. He now goes to Howe's Hall on Friday evenings and there learns the marvelous use of pure water.

So Mary, you see we are not far from the Elysian fields with no beer, wine, cider or spirituous liquors in the house, or in Ned. Our domestic affairs move along with the least possible friction, and if the grocer does not refuse to trust and the pump handle break we shall have enough of substantial food to eat and water to drink.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

[illegible] costumes are in vogue, although the low coil is not abandoned by any [illegible].

[illegible] are again imported and are very popular for wearing either with skirts of the same color or in contrast.

Sleeves are made to fit the arm smoothly, are curved above the arm hole, and have very simple small cuffs.

One of the novelties for overskirts is a cook's apron. It forms a square across the front and side breadths and has various arrangements for the back.

The trimming most seen for the tops of sleeves is slashed open spaces showing a puff of satin, or of ecru lace or embroidery, and sometimes ecru lace edges the slashed lengthwise parts.

The invisible net that formerly flattened the hair above the forehead is now little used, bandoline is abandoned, the curls are loose and unconfined, and the hair has its natural gloss heightened by much brushing instead of by the use of pomades.

When the entire dress is of cashmere a darker Havana brown shade is used for three box pleated flounces on the lower skirt and the paler ecru cashmere forms a wrinkled apron front, with its edges sewed on the lower skirt; this may be round, or else droop low on the right, or be caught up on the hip on the left side, and a knot of cashmere be tied there, while the back forms two deep points.

The Bazar says: "For the cashmere suits a pretty little pleated cape is added for the street. This has a standing collar of velvet, below which is more velvet three inches wide shaped to sit smoothly below this collar, and attached to this velvet is a finely pleated fall of cashmere about two fingers deep, merely hemmed on the edges, and pressed into pleats that are held by stitches on the wrong side. Calendar on Your Fingers.

This is the way that an old timer manages to fix the days of the week that months open with. It will be found correct and interesting to people who have a memory for such things:

"What day of the week did January come in on?" asked Grandpa Martin. "If you can' tell me that, I can tell you the day that any month will come in on by the help of a little lingo that I learned from my father when I was a boy. Monday did you say?" and Grandpa held up his hands preparatory to counting on his fingers. "Now April is the fourth month, let me see—'at Dover dwelt George Brown Esq., good Christopher French and David Frier.' We go by the first letters of these words—1, 2, 3, 4,—At Dover Dwelt George—G is the letter, and it is the seventh in the alphabet. January came in on Monday, you say, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, Sunday—seven; April came in on Sunday. Take February—second Month—at Dover. D is the letter, the fourth in the alphabet. Take Monday again as the starting point—Monday, one; Tuesday, two; Wednesday, three; Thursday, four; February comes in on Thursday.

"If you make no mistake in using the rule it will give you the answer every time. Leap year requires the addition of one day for the last ten months to allow for the 29th of February.

"I have never known anybody outside of my father's family," continued Grandpa, "who knew this little lingo and how to use. He taught it to his children, and I have tried to teach it to mine, but they seem to forget it, and I am afraid it will get lost. When father used to go to the Presbytery, fifty years ago, it often happened that a question of dates and their relation to days would come up and no almanac at hand; in fact the question might be as to some day next year, but, almanac or not, my father could always find the fact he wanted with just the little key of the first day of the year."

A GOOD THING.

"I sometimes wish I could take hold of the sale of Thomas' Eclectric Oil for I tell you it is a grand thing, and I am conscientious in saying I could do a good work." Rev. E. F. Crane, Corry, Pa.

Eclectric Oil cured this gentleman of quinsy of many years standing.

Mr Parker Leach of Rutland is the possessor of a Book of Common Prayer bearing date of 1815, in which is recorded the marriage of William Arthur and Malvina Stone, father and mother of President Arthur. The marriage ceremony was performed by "Rev. Charles C. Cotton, minister in Durham, L. Canada, on the 12th day of April, 1821." The book also contains a record of the births of "Regina Malvina Arthur, born March 6, 1822, in Durham, L. Canada, Jane Arthur, born in Burlington, Vt., March 14, 1824, and Almeda Arthur, born January 23, 1826, in Jericho, Vt.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882: "Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

A Confederate Officer's Story.

The most conspicuous act of reckless courage I ever saw displayed on any battle field during the great civil war occurred at the second battle of Manassas on the 30th of August, 1863. It was performed by a federal artillerist in the presence of both armies, and was witnessed by at least 1000 men, many of whom are still living and can readily recall the incident when reminded of the circumstances. Just as Hood's men charged down the hill near the Henry House upon the first Federal line, and it became evident he would capture the battery stationed there, a federal artilleryman determined to save one of the cannon if possible, and to do so he had to take it up the side of the ditch in front of the Confederates for half a mile. The ditch was four feet wide and as many deep, and could not be crossed with the cannon. How he got his horses hitched or whether they had really ever been taken from the piece I never have known, but the first I saw of him he was coming up our front in a sweeping gallop from a cloud of smoke as our men were firing at him. As soon as he escaped from that volley he came in front of our brigade and under range of our muskets on the left and as he swept on up the line a file fire was opened upon him. Our line was approaching the ditch rapidly at a double quick and the lane between us and the ditch was getting narrower each second, but the artilleryman seemed determined to save his gun from capture and he flew along his course at a tremendous rate of speed. He had four large gray white horses to the cannon and they came up the valley in splendid style. The man sat erect and kept his team well in hand, while his whip seemed to play on the flanks of the leaders and all four horses appeared to leap together in regular time. The ground was very dry and a cloud of dust rolled out from under the horses' feet and from the cannon as they came thundering along. Three regiments of our brigade had already fired at him as he rushed along and just as he approached the [illegible] ran down the rear rank shouting to the men: "Shoot the horses! [illegible] the man alone and shoot the horses! [illegible] firing too high!" At this I saw [illegible] marksman in Company F drop upon one knee and sight along the barrel of his musket and fire, but on came the man and the gallop of his team was unbroken. Ramming in another cartridge the marksman was ready again in [illegible] and just as the cannoneer swept [illegible] within a hundred yards [illegible] and taking deliberate [illegible] horse fired again, [illegible] team unharmed as before. [illegible] passed along the whole [illegible] and then along [illegible] and escaped around [illegible] ditch and across the [illegible] beyond. As far off [illegible] his team was still [illegible], but when out of [illegible] beyond the ditch he [illegible], and taking off his [illegible] his head several [illegible] of the Confederates [illegible]

There is nothing that is more calculated to raise and elevate the thoughts of man—nothing which purifies and refines his ruder pleasures, than the pure love and influence of woman. Woman's love is the strongest and noblest. For love, woman will sacrifice right, home, friends, wealth, and if necessary her life. There is nothing more gentle, more affectionate and more lasting than the first love of woman. It is the gentle zephyr of the twilight eve, or the soft dreaminess of the far off landscape. There is nothing so emotional, so soft and true as woman's love; and yet there is nothing which is more trifled with or more trampled on. The villain who would trifle with the gentle affections of a true woman, trample upon her love and cast from him her affections, is not worthy the ennobling title of man. He is fully associated with the rude manners which would disgrace a brute. A man who would trifle with the true affections of a woman, and then tread under foot her virtue and honor, is too low, is too debased, and too vile to receive the slightest countenance, and yet, forsooth, how often and how cruelly it is done even by men having true, good mothers and loving sisters, none to whom they would tolerate to see wronged. If a man will only treat somebody else's sister the same as he would like to have his own sister suspected and dealt with, he will do no wrong unless he is the vilest of brutes. Next to woman's love is her influence. It is almost the ruling power of earth. Take from a woman her influence and the whole of this world would be chaos and confusion. Man would go back to savage, not by degrees but at once. There is a great difference between woman's and man's and influence. The one is gentle, soft and affectionate, stealing upon the heart as some gentle sigh for our happiness. One to which we look up and revere as the guiding star of our existence. It is gentle and sympathizing, entering into the object of its pity; while the influence given out by man is cold and more commanding; is oftentimes true and gushing at others, empty and for self-interest. But woman's influence is always the same—soft, gentle, dreamy ininfluence, which soon lulls the wicked heart and calms the ruder habits of man. May their influence never be less! May God give them more influence, and give them the power to exert it on their surroundings. [Telegram.

The Drift of Labor.

For the ten years ending with the year 1882, 1,013,979 persons emigrated from free-trade England to protected America—a thousand fold more than left America for England, if, indeed, a did so. Of the 3,544,458 persons who emigrated to America during these ten years 338,444 were skilled mechanics, of whom 11,305 were bakers, 18,305 blacksmiths, 10,677 butchers, 54,754 carpenters, 30,248 clerks, 38,754 mechanics, [illegible]

Large [illegible] white [illegible] embroidered on the edges will be worn this summer.

Very large scarf fichus of French lace are imported for summer mantles with black toilettes.

Sunshades are very large. They have deep lace borders and immense handles adorned with ribbon loops.

Plain woolen suitings are in different shades of gray, blue, green and strawberry, and in all the tones of plaid material.

The latest fashion for capes is to have the shoulder piece gathered to form a kind of raised epaulet. The ends in front are pointed.

Small buttons, either in bullet or coin shape, of plain crocheted silk, or else the berry buttons covered with small beads, remain in favor.

Scotch plaids are often combined with "angora" goods, with long hair and a rough surface. This article is called very elegant and makes charming walking suits.

The military collar of Irish point embroidery or of real lace is a novelty in lingerie. It is two inches high, is worn standing, is straight, with the scolloped edge at the top, and is attached to a muslin band.

Valenciennes lace is gradually coming back into favor for trimming fichus, edging frills, and for trimming evening dresses. It is also used for bonnets, and there is an effort to revive duchesse lace for millinery purposes.

Plain cloth suits in light and dark shades are very elegant when trimmed with velvet in the same color, if the cloth is dark, and in a darker hue if it is light or medium, such as pervinca, "cordoue," and "canaque," which are the prevailing tints.

For street suits to be worn with small mantles, black silk or satin dresses are made almost as simply as if fashioned by a tailor. The basque is short and severely plain, with some postillion pleatings in the back and a pleaded plastron, or some ornaments of passementerie or lace between the throat and the top of the darts. The over-skirt is a deep apron or a short one, as best suits the figure, and its edges are concealed if short, or simply faced if long.

About Reporters.

The impression has too long been prevalent in some portions of the community that reporters are vagabonds who fear neither God nor man; that they are dissolute in their habits and undeserving of welcome in polite society. Such an impression does injustice to a class of industrious, painstaking, gentlemanly, and, in the main honest men. There was a time when the news gatherers frequented notorious resorts and guzzled beer. Those who sat around the tables in that place are still remembered for their genius in satisfying the literary appetites of thousands of newspaper readers. To-day such men could not hold positions on a daily paper for twenty-four hours. No man in the community is employed more hours during the day than a reporter, and no one does harder work than he is called upon to perform. He must necessarily be a gentleman or his services are not required. He is expected to visit and converse with the most gifted and famous men and women of our times, and must know how to talk intelligibly on all subjects. He must be able to speak and write fluently upon the news of the day, and must be ready at all hours, in fair weather or foul, to serve his paper. He is denied the comforts of home, which men in other business pursuits enjoy, and become a machine which is almost constant in motion. He is brought face to face with crime and all other punishments, with misery and wretchedness in their worst degrees, and his attempts to benefit the downtrodden and forsaken. In his habits he is cleaner than the average of men who toil for a living, and he is more self-reliant, braver and more thoughtful.

W. C. Bryant As a Journalist.

To those who know anything of journalism it is idle to speak of Mr. Bryant as a great journalist. His range of knowledge was not wide, his judgement was frequently unsound, and he had not the rhetorical gifts which commend opinions to the acceptance of a large audience. It was characteristic of the man that while he imagined himself to be a purist in the writing of English, and prepared a list of errors to be rigorously excluded from the columns of newspapers, his private letters and public writings were thickly strewn with [illegible] which had escaped his imper[illegible] eye. THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case. Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

The Strongest Argument

after all, the best test of acceptable service on the part of any merchant is the number of permanent customers he secures. Some clothing houses assume that "A bird in the hand is worth two in tha bush," and take chances of their customers' return after they had once been stuck "stuck." But alas! The supply of new customers finally runs out, and it is only a question of time when the artiful dodger is left no more lambs to shear. We have a strong and growing constituency to whom we refer with pride. Many of our customers have dealt with and sent their friends to be clothed by us. The verdict is that our Men's and Boy's Clothing is reliable, and we lay more stress upon that than upon any other feature of our business. Downright honesty is what we insist upon, both in process or satisfaction and treatment of our customers. Of course we make mistakes; who don't? But the person does not live who can truthfully assert when informed of a fault in our merchandise, we have ever refused to make it good. A TERRIBLE cyclone swept over Kansas City Saturday evening doing $300,000 worth of damage in the city and killing three men by falling buildings. THE shameful manner in which divorces are obtained in many of the courts of this country is attracting the attention of the public just now. During the past twenty years the divorces granted in the state of Ohio nearly equal the marriages and it is also true of Maine, Massachusetts Connecticut and Illinois. Five-sixths of all of the divorces granted in the year 1882 were for causes not recognized in the Bible. The divorce laws need strengthening and divorce courts purifying. Chicago is the great divorce metropolis of the country.

MATRIMONIAL chances of young ladies have been partially determined by an old maid in Philadelphia. She kept the record of one thousand of her acquaintances who were led to the altar. She finds that the chances between the ages of fourteen and forty are as follows: 39 at 13 and 15; 104 at 16 and 17; 219 at 18 and 19; 230 at 20 and 21; 165 at 22 and 23; 62 at 24 and 25; 60 at 26 and 27; 45 at 28 and 29; 18 at 30 and 31; 11 at 32 and 33; 8 at 34 and 35; 4 at 36 and 47 and 2 at 38 and 39. It will therefore be seen that from 18 to 25 is the flood tide of matrimony, and that it is at those ages that the most chances are taken in the great lottery.

NEXT Thursday the coronation of the Czar, Alexander III., will occur in Kremlin, Russia. At least 400,000 persons will be present. Drink and food for the people will be distributed from 190 decorated railway baggage cars, transformed into temporary bars and drawn up in one long row. Every guest will receive an earthenware jug, stamped with the imperial eagle and the date of the coronation, with which he can call for his beer and mead. Furthermore, every person will receive two meat pies, candies, dried fruit and cake. The greatest precautions are being taken to prevent Nihilists from carrying threats into execution.

UTICA has a prayer wheel, according to the Observer. By means of it a prayer may be repeated five hundred times in a minute. Such machines have long been in use in China, but this is doubtless the first Christian employment of a mechanical device for rapid praying. A prayer equal in quantity of matter in half an average newspaper column can be thus rapidly multiplied. It is about a foot in diameter, with guilded spokes, a brass crank in front of the hub, which rests in an ornamental frame, and round the periphery an embelished inscription of the Lord's Prayer. Although the inventor turned it a little, to let the reporter see how it went, he said that he was not really making it pray, for to do that required certain devotional observances on the part of the petitioner.

She was born in Montgomery county, Pa., removing with her family to Clermont county, Ohio, in 1818. Three years later she married Jesse R. Grant, who was of Scotch descent. Ten months after that she bore Ulysses S. He was christened Hiram Ulysses, but when in West Point took the name Ulysses Sidney, and then in honor of his mother, that of Ulysses Simpson. Among other children was Orville. The mother has led a very quiet life.

Dr. Rossvally Again.

The charge against Dr. L. M. Rossvalley is explained by his daughter as follows. It is a letter written to the Cincinnati Enquirer in 1878. We publish it by request for what it is worth:

ALEXANDER, O., May 25, 1878.

To the Editor of the Enquirer:—

Having noticed in your paper of the 20th inst, an article in which you claim my father is guilty of a great impropriety, I feel it my duty to give you the true version of the story:

Saturday evening, May 11th, I left my father at Pataskala, and came to Columbus. He remained in Pataskala to lecture that evening. He came to Columbus on the freight train at half past ten o'clock. As it was rather late we did not wish to disturb the family at 47 East Friend street we went to the Davidson House. My father is subject to very severe headaches at times and is slightly delirious. For that reason, when we are from home he always tries to procure rooms adjoining, so if he requires my assistance I can be within call. We had a small valise with us which contained a bottle of bay rum, which he always applies to his head when troubled with headache.

On that evening, he was suffering very much, and as I had taken the valise to my room, shortly after I had retired, he was obliged to come to my room to get it. My window was open; he sat down by it and fell asleep and was awakened by a knock upon the door. When told the clerk wished to see him he requested the clerk to come to him, which he did. My father explained to him why he was there, and shortly after retired to his room. No pass key was used, and none was needed, as the door was not locked; neither was my father en deshabille. This is the entire truth, and I beg you to publish it, if not for our sakes for the sake of Christianity. The story was circulated to injure us, but it was only a mistake on the part of the proprietor of the Davidson House, for all who know there can be no truth in it. Please allow us to justify ourselves before the world and publish our vindication as well as our condemnation.

EMMIE L. ROSSVALLY.

Dr Rossvally claims that this happened in 1878 and that he has been compelled to refute the charges dozens of times. A more effectual way to expose the falsity of the charges would be for the Doctor to procure the indorsement of the clergy of Columbus who are said in the charges to denounce him. [ED.

Ferroting out Fraudulent Widows.

When Congress generously provided pensions to widows of soldiers it was incorporated in the bill that when they remarried such pension should cease. In Major Poole's department, which embraces thirty-eight counties, with headquarters at Syracuse, there has been discovered hundreds of women, who, according to the Syracuse Standard, prompted by greed for government gold, have observed the letter of the law while violating its spirit by living in wedded relations with men to whom they are not bound by marriage ties. With these people all respect for the ordinary obligations which society imposes and all thought respecting the illegitimacy of their children have been forgotten in the presence of a sordid desire for the paltry sum of money which a widow's pension brings.

The Standard further says a law was passed August 7, 1882, providing that the payment of pensions should cease at once in the case of all widows of veterans who are living in unlawful relations, and following the passage of this law, word was sent to all pension agents to see to it that its provisions were enforced at once. In Major Poole's department, prompt heed was paid to the instructions from Washington and information was sought in every quarter of the district. In Syracuse Clarissa Crego, of the Seventh ward, Eliza Gaul, of Geddes, a woman residing in Jordan, another in Cicero, and a score of pensioners in the county have already been informed that their names have been stricken from the Government's books. The number will be very large in Major Poole's district.

CONDUCTOR FROST.

Of the Mt. McGregor Railroad, Saratoga —The Best Fellow that Ever Lived.

"Well, sir, I've been up the Mt. McGregor railroad," were the first words your reporter heard when he passed through the gate of the Saratoga depot. "Mt. McGregor Railroad! Where is that? I thought." I looked about me and saw the hurrying crowd—saw the United States Hotel looking as of old. But the Mt. McGregor Railroad was a new feature. The top of this mountain is graced with two charming lakes. Looking about us from the one point we catch a glimpse of the Catskills. There of the Hudson. Here of Lake George. There of the Green Mountains. "Charming spot," was the one opinion.

The road is finely equipped. "That's conductor Frost, the best fellow that ever lived," said a man, pointing to a jolly full faced individual collecting tickets. I was introduced. "Where do you get all this glow of health, Conductor?" "Well, sir, I'm looking hearty and feeling hearty because I've formed an attachment for Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Honestly I think it's the best medicine ever given to a man. I have recommended it again and again, every time with the same results. Why, there's Ed Welch of the Adelphi Hotel (his home is 156 W. 34th street, N. Y.) he came up here and the change of air and water had a fearful effect upon him. His face broke out in blotches and pimples. I had seen the FAVORITE REMEDY used. I told him to get a bottle. He did so, and in three days's time the rash and fever entirely disappeared. It seemed to cleanse the blood with such rapidity. I have recommended Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY to a great many persons who were bilious and troubled with stagnant blood. FAVORITE REMEDY NEVER fails to purify and strengthen. I know this to be a fact."

Importance of Roots, Herbs and Barks for the Cure of Chronic Diseases.

If the same amount of time in research and experiments had been expended on the vegetable kingdom as have been on the mineral for the cure of human ills, there would be much less suffering in our land to-day; for there are herbs provided by our Heavenly Father, to cure all diseases, if we but seek them out and test their virtues; and when properly combined, there is no disease that will not yield to their curative powers. The discoveries of each succeeding day convince us of the importance of attending more strictly to the use of herbs, roots, barks, etc., for the treatment of all diseases. The most uninviting and noxious weeds frequently give relief in almost hopeless cases.

But, experiments on this subject have been too much neglected. Many of our best and most experienced physicians have within the last few years largely changed their mode of treatment and are now using roots, herbs, etc., instead of minerals, such as mercury, arsenic, zinc and lead, which have done more to injure and break down the human system, all over the land, than all other causes. The patient calls his phyisician and relies on him to cure and bring him through a protracted illness, but, how frequently it is that the patient feels the injurious effects of the poisonous medicines in his or her system all through their remaining days.

We have known many cases, which have come under our own personal observation, where the patient has been covered with Salt Rheum, or Scrofulous sores and where outward application was used to heal these sores, and, when healed over were pronounced cured; but soon made their appearance on another part of the body in a much more aggavated form. It is very foolish to teach or believe that such diseases as Scrofula Salt Rheum, or Neuralgia, all of which are caused by disease and impure blood, can be cured by any other treatmentthan that that will cleanse tqe blood of its impurities.

If those who suffer from those diseases would think for a moment as to what was the direct cause of Scrofula or Salt Rheum, they could readily understand why it is that outward applications work more injury than good. In Salt Rheum, the blood and fluids seems to be impregnated with a fiery element, which when disdharged through the poes upon the surface of the body, inflames and burns, until in his efforts for relief, the patient tears the skin with his nails, and not until the blood flows, does sufficient relief come to cause him to desist. Then the patient will grasp at any thing he may see advertised and there are scores of people who are eager to make money even at the expense of the poor sufferer, and who advertise that these the worst of all diseases can be cured by applying salves, or by bathing. The latter, we admit, is very necessary, for it helps greatly in opening the pores and largely prevents the extreme imflammation arising from this acrid discharge. But we challenge the world to produce a single case where a permanent cure has ever been effected by any treatment other than that of purifying the blood, and to do this all know that we must begin at the primary cause or root of the disease, viz: the Liver and Kidneys, for by derangement of these, most important organs of the body, the poisonous or effete matter, which should pass off with the insensible perspiration outwardly, or the waste matter of the system inwardly, is sucked up with its impurities, and enters into and circulates in the blood until the whole system is impregnated with uric, or lithic acid, and it soon shows itself on the skin in small watery blisters, discharging an acrid fluid, causing great inflammation and intense itching. Nothing short of a remedy that will restore the Liver and Kidneys to healthy action and that will nourish and strengthen the debilitated system, and thus supply the veins with pith pure and rich blood can be of any avail.

Rheumatic Syrup has proved itself to be the safest and most effective remedy to regulate the livvr and kidneys, and for expelling all impurities from the blood yet offered to the human family. It is a compound of fruits, herbs, roots and barks, entirely free from all mineral or poisons of any kind, and acts direct on the liver, kidneys and blood, building up the debilitated system, and leaving the patient free from the injurious effects in after years, such as is experienced after the use of mercury, arsenic, and other mineral substances. Whenever it has been for derangement of the liver, kidneys or digestive organs, or for skin and blood diseases, its effects have been so marked and improvement so plain that it was unnesary to ask the patient if they were being benefited by its use for the life-like expression of the eye, the color on the cheek, the elastic step, the clear voice, all told you that the title of "The Greatest Blood Purifier Known" rightfully belong to it.

A Texan's Career at the Capitol.

Stillwell H. Russell, late marshal for a district of Texas, was put in an Illinois penitentiary last week for frauds on the government. He is well known in Washington. He is a native Texan, a man of splendid proportions, six feet two inches, broad shoulldered, full chested, of captivating address, and intelligent. At the time that President Arthur came into power he was an applicant for the position of First Assistant Postmaster General, and was recommended in writing by some of the foremost public men of the country, including Supreme Court Judges, Cabinet Members, Senators, Representatives and others. He was very fond of coming to Washington and mixing in the special pleasures which are so attractive a feature of that city. To "hold his end up" lavish expenditures were indulged in by him, causing a drain which his liberal emoluments could not meet, and yielding to temptation he submitted to the Department of Justice fraudulent vouchers for expenses of his deputies, and realized in this way $50,000 or more. After detection of some of these fraudulent accounts he pressed his claim for reappointment as United States marshal, and brought very considerable influence to bear in his behalf. Disappointed, he held to the idea that he would not be prosecuted for his embezzlements, and until the last moment he thought that executive power would be interposed between him and penitentiary walls.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the State of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the first day of January, 1874, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego, at Oswego, N. Y., on the 17th day of July, 1874, at 10 o'clock a. m., in Liber 102 of mortgages, at page 275, was given by J. Ford Morris, mortgagor to Mary Lewis mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage is as follows:—John W. Pratt. The sum claimed to be due upon the said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is two hundred eleven dollars and sixty four cents which is the whole amount of said mortgage. The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in the said mortgage: all that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, Oswego Co., N. Y., known and distinguished as Lot No. 8, on Block No. 512, according to a map and allotment made by Peter Schenck for Lee and Livingston, Feb'y 1857, a copy of which is now on file in Oswego county clerk's office—said lot being and containing one quarter of an acre of land be the same more or less. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof, at public auction, at the law office of H. E. Nichols, in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the fourth day of August, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 9th day of May, 1883.

Bicycles on the Highway.

There are about a dozen bicycles in this immediate vicinity at present and as many more at Fulton. In view of the above facts, it is interesting to know that quite a number of decisions have been rendered by the courts in Massachusetts, following decisions upon the same subject in England, holding "that the bicycle has the same rights upon the highway as any other vehicle and that if properly handled the rider is no more liable for damage which may result from a runaway by a frightened horse than if the had taken fright at a locomotive, a stump or a piece of paper. On the other hand the decisions are to the effect that drivers of horses are bound to concede to bicycles equal rights upon the highway and each must exercise reasonable care not to come in collision with the other; when meeting must pass to the right, when overtaking and passing, to the left, etc. It is perhaps well that these things should be understood and that drivers take pains to familiarize their horses with the bicycle, if the animals are at all inclined to shy at strange objects.

The Significance of Change.

"O, what portends are these?
Some heavy business hath my lord in hand,
And I must know it." [Henry IV.

Men are largely creatures of change. Monotony kills; change is life. Something new, something novel, something different,—is the constant demand. Times change, say we; so do men themselves; and so also do all their belongings. Customs change, habits change, relations change, places change, circumstances change—everything changes; and when change stops, life stops. Hence we say:—"Better be out of the world, than out of the fashion"—for like all else, fashion changes, and to be out of harmony with it is to be out of the world, practically. People talk of the latest fashions, and the talk is evidence of change of life. Women are generally credited with deeper devotion to the fashions than men; that is, they are more lively, but men are not without [illegible]

Mrs Pruyne became alarmed and attempted to arouse him but discovered he was dead. He was a man well known in Fulton, where he was formerly engaged in the harness business with his son William, who with five other children survive him. He at different times was engaged in business in Oswego and Syracuse. He was 73 years of age.

Mr. Pruyne was a generous, whole souled man with a pleasant word for every one; honorable and upright and a man respected by all acquaintances. His funeral was held in Mexico Monday and was largely attended, friends from Fulton, Oswego and surrounding towns being present.

Ingells Crossing.

A cow on the farm of Reuben Chapman at Ingells Crossing stepped upon a piece of wire, such as is used by the Midland railroad in building fence, a portion of the coil passing completely around her neck. In moving off, one end of the wire became fastened to a stump and the cow anxious to relieve herself pulled so hard and so long that she dropped dead. The cow utilized the most approved methods in committing suicide. *

Two Important Facts

Should be born in mind by all who read the advertisement of the "Famous." It is not a single lot of goods—it is not a single department, nor a stock of clothing limited—but a stock to meet the wants of everybody. Bear in mind that this means a stock of new and fresh goods, of the latest styles and qualities, richer in variety and extent than ever offered to the people of Fulton. If you will take the pains to examine their prices, you will comprehend why people flock to No. 2 and 3 Wieting Block to bear testimony that such opportunities for bargains are rarely ever met with.

A Pleasant Event.

At two o'clock this afternoon the church of the Immaculate Conception was the scene of the wedding of Miss Kittie McCormack of Oswego Falls, daughter of Thomas McCormack, to Joseph Maxwell of Rochester formerly of Oneida county. The ceremony was gracefully performed by Rev. Father Kearney in the presence of a few immediate friends and relatives. Miss Mary McCormack of Oswego, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Martin McCormack of Rochester, brother of the bride, as best man. After the ceremony the company repaired to the residence of the father of the bride and held a reception and partook of refreshments. Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell were presented with many beautiful and substantial wedding souvenirs among which were: silver castor, from Mary McCormack, Oswego; bronze lamp, Kittie McCormack, Stiles; Marcus McCormack, traveling bag and pickle castor; Miss Mary Flannery, tea spoons; Miss Margaret Kelly, bed spread and China ware; Miss Maggie Crahan, two silver napkin rings; Miss Kitty Crahan, dozen napkins; Mrs Michael Lawlor, China ware; Miss Maggie Collins, table spread; Mrs. Thomas Gordon, towels; Mrs. Charles Lily, breakfast dishes; Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McCormack, chamber set, silver knives and forks, china set and towels; Willie and Ella Macormack, three majolica pitchers; Miss Palmiter, set silver forks; Martin McCormick, couch and china set, and numerous beautiful and expensive gifts were presented besides those enumerated. The bride and groom will leave this evening for a brief trip east and will return and take up their residence in Rochester. THE TIMES joins with their many friends in wishing them a pleasant life.

Benjamin Bradway of Fruit Valley, three miles west of the city of Oswego, died Thursday of a type of yellow fever, supposed to have been communicated in a letter from his son who had been ill with the same disease in New Orleans. Mr. Bradway was taken ill on Monday. Before the character of the malady was known, he had been visited by many persons in the neighborhood.

Cayuga Chief—Edward Anthony, of South Hannibal, put some linseed oil in a tin boiler, with a copper bottom, and placed a quantity of new factory cloth in the oil to soak, intending to use it for a covering for his tobacco bed. When next he looked after it, the cloth and oil were burned and the boiler ruined. The man had produced spontaneous combustion. There has been many mysterious fires from this cause. Oily rags should never be left lying around buildings. At a temperature of 60 degrees they are liable to burst into flame.

Oswego county was visited with a severe wind and rain storm last Thursday. At Constantia it was severe. Shade trees and small buildings in the village were leveled. The house and barn of Mr. Batchelor were badly damaged. A large barn belonging to Ira and A. P. Brown was blown down, nearly killing three persons who were driving along the road. Finding progression impossible, they got out of the carriage and lay on their faces on the ground. Herbert Talcott who was riding had his buggy overturned, and he was seriously injured. Robert Black and three others were out fishing on the lake, but by the superior skill of Black as an oarsman, they reached shore. At times the air was so filled with water that they could not see each other. The storm was of short duration, but was so destructive that not a whole fence was to be found the next day in Constantia.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

[From The Utica Herald]

UTICA, May 14—The turnout of salesmen to-day at the board of trade was unusually large for the season of the year. There is no doubt that the membership this season will be considerably larger than it has been for some years. The membership registry already shows a handsome increase over the corresponding date last year. Reports from the country state that grass is very backward, and that only a few cattle are allowed the run of the pastures. Back among the hills there are still banks of snow to be seen, and the weather is decidedly chilly. Quotations to-day are as follows: 34 boxes at 12c.; 6 lots, 367 boxes at 12¼c; 55 lots, 3230 boxes at 12½c; 258 boxes in 4 lots at 12⅝c; 3 lots small cheese, 184 boxes at 12¾c and 3 lots, 211 boxes at p. t. Sales 4284 boxes, commissions 1127; total 5411. Ruling price 12½c. Transactions corresponding day of 1882, 4043 boxes at 9, 10¾c; average 10c. In 1881 there was 4788 at 10¾ to 11c leading price 11c.

LITTLE FALLS, May 14—Prices to-day show a decline of about one-fourth cent from last.

There will be very little if any grass cheese offered here [illegible] thirty days yet, as grass is quite backward in starting on account of the cold weather. Many dairymen will turn their cows to pasture this week. Following are the transactions of the day.

VILLAGE OF FULTON.

Trustees Proceedings.

FULTON, May 15, 1883.

Board met pursuant to adjournment

Present a full board,

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Trustee Francis offered the following resolution: WHEREAS, Lyman H. Patterson clerk of the board of trustees has neglected and refused to draw and deliver an order in favor of the street commissioner for amount of his claim audited May 1st as required by section 53 of the village charter, therefore.

Resolved, That charges be and hereby are preferred against Lyman H. Patterson as such clerk for official misconduct and neglect of duty in the particulars above named and that said clerk be and hereby is required to show cause before this board at the rooms of this board in the village of Fulton on Tuesday evening May 22d instant, at 8 o'clock why he should not be removed from his said office as clerk of this board, therefore.

Resolved, That Trustee VanWagenen be and hereby is deputed to serve a copy of the foregoing charges upon said clerk.

The ayes and noes being called Trustees Francis, Hart, VanWagenen, Cavanaugh, Patterson, and Johnson voted for the resolution. The president declared the resolution carried.

The Street Committee reported the grade on Cayuga street satisfactory to parties concerned. The report was adopted.

The Finance Committee reported the lease for the roadway foot of Rochester street at ten dollars a year, and the president was instructed to sign the lease. The building on Rochester street was allowed to remain during the pleasure of the board.

The Street Commissioner was instructed to do all necessary work upon the highways and cross-walks until the next meeting of the board.

The Attorney of the village was requested to report at the next meeting of the board the necessary quorum required by the charter to pass ordinances and resolutions appropriating moneys from the different funds voted at the annual meeting.

The Finance Committee reported the following bills and orders were drawn for the amounts:

Lyman Judd, board health	$2 00
John W. Youngs "	3 00
Frank Conway, "	2 00
Simeon Coe, "	2 00
John Cavanaugh, lamps	41 19
Pooler & Wilson, coal for office	3 30

The attention of the fire committee was called to the wooden building now being erected on the old Presbyterian lot as being in the fire limits.

The question of the improvement of Fourth street on motion of Trustee Cavanaugh it was tabled for one week.

Adjourned to meet Tuesday, May 22d 1883, at 7:45 p. m. L. H. PATTERSON, Clerk

WHY

MILTON S. PRICE

CAN SELL

DRY GOODS, FURNITURE AND CARPETS

Cheaper than any other dealer in Syracuse.

FIRST—He has the largest store in the city, five stories high, running through from street to street, a distance of 300 feet.

SECOND—He has the largest Stock of Dry Goods and Fancy Goods.

THIRD—He has the largest Stock of Carpets, Rugs, Oil cloths and Mattings.

FOURTH—He has the largest Stock of Furniture, Upholstery and Curtain Draperies.

The whole making a MORE EXTENSIVE STOCK than in any three stores in the city combined. A large and increasing business makes it an inducement for this establishment to offer goods at a GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES. The only concern in Syracuse that reduced the price of FURNITURE from 50 to 100 per. cent. This house, in the future, as in the past, will continue to regulate prices.

REMEMBER

That special bargains are being offered in every department of this immense establishment.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting [that an]y liniment that can be [taken] into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

For Man & Beast

[illegible] to bed to go after a doctor for her, at the same time winking slyly at Schneider.

"She! You don't say so!" ejaculated Bliffkins as he stirred up the sugar from the bottom of his glass and crowded the lemon peel up against the side. "You will have to be careful with the old lady, Bill, especially when she gets to teething. What doctor did you get?"

"Jones."

"He's a good one. I've known him ever since he commenced practicing. He got into trouble the first thing by saving a man's life, but he don't do so any more."

"Tell us about it, Bliff!"

"You see, there was old Noxon, who used to have a row with his wife about three times a week. He got cranky, and made up his mind to shuffle off, so he filled up with laudanum and went to bed. When the old lady found him he was colder'n a wedge. She went to screaming, and as fast as the neighbors came in, sent them off after a doctor. Some of them went in on direction and some in another, and it wasn't long before the doctors began to congregate.

"Smith got there first, and looked the old man over. 'Dead,' says he and went away.

"Then Brown came in, 'Dead,' says he."

"Jones was the third man in, and he rammed a stomach pump down the old man's throat and pumped up the drug store. Then he reversed the pump and flooded the old man with water, and after sloshing him around for a good while, same as if he was rinsing out a cider barrel, he pumped the water and then flooded him again. Noxon wasn't in the habit of taking so much water in his'n, and pretty soon he began to gasp and kick. Before morning Jones had him all right, feeling dead sure that there was but one first-class doctor in the world. A few days afterwards he presented his bill."

"'What's this for?' say old Noxon."

"'For saving your life the other,' says Jones."

"'Well, I didn't ask you to. I never employed you and I will not pay it. You had no business coming in here and jambing your old pump down my neck. Brown is my family physician and I'll not pay anybody else.' says Noxon."

"So away went Jones to Brown's office and tried to get him to induce old Noxon to pay the bill."

"'Jones,' says Brown looking over the top of his spectacles, 'I never thought you was a bad sort of a fellow, but you have done a very foolish thing, and it' serves you right to lose your bill. It's a good lesson to you and I hope you'll profit by it. Didn't I say he was dead?

"'Yes,' says Jones.

"'Didn't Smith say he was dead?'

"'Yes,' says Jones.

"'Well, that settled it! The man was dead and you had no right to say that he wasn't. When two old, experienced doctors, like Smith and I say a man is dead, it is unprofessional and discourteous for a young man, a beginner in the practice, to dispute their word. I'll forgive you this time because of your youth and inexperience, and will hush the matter up for you, but be very careful in the future and make no more such mistakes.

Notwithstanding much has been said about the importance of a blood-purifying medicine, it may be possible that the matter has never seriously claimed your attention. Think of it now! If, by the use of a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla you avoid the evils of scrofula, and transmit a healthy constitution to your offspring, thank us for the suggestion.

He Scalped Her.

A young man was ushered into the parlor, where sat his adored one.

She was gazing soulfully into the fire, thinking of him, no doubt, but not dreaming of his presence.

He tiptoed his approach, and slyly seizing a straggled hair, which coyly nestled in its blonde beauty on the scruff of her rounded neck, gently twitched it and waited for the sudden start and the maidenly blush of pleased surprise.

But not a start—not a surprise.

Again he drew it toward him, and again did the fair one continue to gaze thoroughly into the fire.

"Dear girl, she knows not of my presence," he murmered softly to himself. "How glad she will be to discover her Charles so close benind her! I will end this surprise;" and gently lifting an auburn curl from the sloping shoulder, he tweaked as only a fond lover can tweak, and gentle reader, you may believe us or not, but we hope to die if he didn't scalp her. The whole business came off, and then she knew that Charles was there.

Shall we draw a veil over the dreadful picture? By no means. Charles knew that she wore false hair, and he knew that she knew that she knew it. Besides the girl was turning thirty and worth millions. Charles was poor, but madly in love. A poor young man, madly in love with a girl worth millions, is never a "kicker." [Free Press.

AYER'S

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

Domestic Disinfectants.

Undertakers in preparing the remains of people who are badly decomposed, heat an iron shovel and place coffee upon it, thus disinfecting and deodorizing the working department. An exchange suggests that if people would purchase green coffee and brown it in their houses, there would be fewer cases of diphtheria, scarlet and typhoid fever. She aroma arising from the browning berry is one of the best agents in disinfecting dwellings of impure air. It is easier to buy coffee already browned than to prepare it, but the preparation once a week saves health and doctor bills. The doors should be left open and let the aroma pervade every room.

"Ten years ago the name of Lydia E. Pinkham was scarcely known outside of her native State. To-day it is a household word all over the Continent and many who read the secular and religious journals have become familiar with the face that shines on them with a modest confidence, in which we read the truth that "Nothing ill can dwell in such a temple."

A Trapper Who Carries No Gun.

Terrell Speed, a trapper, who lives near Rome, Ga., has been on a trapping expedition all the winter down the Coosa River to the Alabama, thence to Selma. He reached Wetumka with 110 beavers, capturing 25 from there to this point. He has also the pelts of 300 coons, 75 minks, wolves and other animals, about 575 in all, from which he will realize about $475. He has been studying trapping for fifteen years, and has not been sick ten minutes during the time. He says the country he has passed over is fine hunting ground—game in abundance from the deer down. He carries no gun or pistol with him, his only weapon being a hatchet, which he has chained around his waist.

"GRTNT IT OUT."

The above is an old saw as savage as it is senseless. You can't grunt out dyspepsia nor liver complaint, nor nervousness if they once get a good hold. They don't remove themselves in that way. The taking a few doses of Burdock Blood Bitters is better than "grunting it out." What we can cure let's not endure.

Perhaps Not.

When the cashier of a Michigan bank skipped some years ago, and his accounts were found to be about $7,000 short, one of the directors expressed his belief that the money had gone into silver stock. This was shown to be untrue as was also his suppositions that the cashier had speculated in grain, cotton or tobacco.

"Then he must have gambled," said the director.

No; no one had ever known of his touching a card.

"Probably owned a fast horse or bought suburban real estate."

That was far from the case as the first supposition, but the director hung on.

"I presume he may have paid a mortgage for his father, or lent money to relatives."

"No; he was an orphan and unmarried."

"Might have been temporarily insane, you know."

"But he has been taking sums for months."

"Oh, well!" testly cried the director, as he whirled his chair around, "if you folks are determined to call it stealing I suppose it's no use for me to tell you that Edward's mother says he had a habit of walking in his sleep. You wouldn't believe he could travel from Detroit to Montreal before he woke up—of course you wouldn't! All you think of is to convict him!"

WHAT WE WANT.

The Use of Wealth.

There are thousands of rich men who are not skinflints, who have the reputation of being so, because they never have been known to have done any special good with their money. A man who is worth $50,000 can do more to make himself respected and loved by all with whom he comes in contact, by the judicious expenditure of a thousand dollars in charity, than by giving the whole fifty thousand after he is dead. It seems as though it would be mighty small consolation to a millionare to leave money to some charitable purpose after death, and be so confounded dead that he couldn't see the smiles of happiness that his generosity had created.

Suppose a millionare who has never had a kind word said to him except by fawning hypocrites, who hope to get some of his money, should lay out a beautiful park worth a million dollars, and throw it open free to all, with walks, drives, lakes, shade and everything. Don't you suppose, if he took a drive through it himself and saw thousands of people having a good time and all looking their love and respect for him, that his heart would be warmed up and that his day would be lengthened. Sarsaparilla

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage of real property situated within the state of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the 13th day of May 1876, and recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego at Oswego, N. Y., on the 18th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Liber 109 of mortgages, page 210, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Auringer, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage as follows: Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86.) The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4) block number twenty-eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 2d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.
Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 7th day of March 1883. ORLANDO HOWELL,
HOWE & RICE, Att'ys, Assignee.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagor Nathan Rowlee mortgagee Harmon J. Ransom, mortgage dated March 3d, 1870, to secure four hundred and eighty dollars ($480) part of the purchase price, and recorded in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego May 2d 1870 in book 94 of mortgages at page [illegible]. Said mortgage has been duly assigned to James H. Langdon of Oswego Falls N. Y., who is the owner thereof. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York, and being five acres to be laid off in a "square form as near as may be on the south west "corner of forty acres on lot seventy-one in the old "military township of Hannibal, now Granby, and "bounded as follows: East and north by the original "line of said lot No seventy one. South by the road "leading from Oswego Falls to Hannibalville, and "west by a line to run from said road leading as "aforesaid to the north line of said lot and parallel "with the east line of said lot 71, and at such a distance therefrom as shall enclude the said five acres "of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the 1st publication of this notice the sum of one hundred dollars principal and interest thereon from October 1st 1881, which is the whole sum unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding in law or equity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid and notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction, to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 6th day of July 1883 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.
Dated, April 3d 1883. JAMES H. LANGDON,
Assignee and owner of said mortgage.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagors Louis LeFevre and Margaret LeFevre, his wife. Mortgagee James H. Langdon. Mortgage dated August [illegible] 1879, to secure the payment of $149.44 and recorded in the clerk's office, of Oswego county, December 2d 1879, in book 123 of mortgages at page 346. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:—

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York; and being a part of lot No. 74, and "bounded as follows.—Commencing at the southeast corner of land on said lot No. 74, formerly "owned by Dorliska A. Northrup; thence northerly along the east line of said Northrup's land to a "point from which a line drawn westerly at right "angles with the east line of said lot, shall pass "thirty-seven feet from the south end of said Northrup's house (now owned by Andrew B. Simons) on "said lot, and to extend west far enough that a line "drawn southerly and parallel to the east line of "said lot and extending to the south line and thence "east to the place of beginning, shall contain three "acres of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the first publication of this notice the sum of $149.44 and interest on the whole mortgage debt from the date of said mortgage, and there is yet to become due the further sum of $200, and no suit or proceeding at law or inequity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid, and notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 9th day of Aug. 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day. Dated, May 9th, 1883.

Administrator's Sale of Real Estate.

In pursuance of an order of Hon. T. W. Skinner, surrogate of the county of Oswego, bearing date of April 19th 1883, the undersigned the administratrix of Philetta P. Briggs, late of the town of Volney, deceased, will sell at public vendue, on the 9th day of June 1883, at the law office of C. H. David in the village of Fulton, Oswego county, and State of New York, the following described real estate to wit:

All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and State of New York being in the north-east corner of lot No. 5 on block twenty-seven (27) according to the printed map of said village and specifically bounded and described as follows to wit: Commencing at the north-east corner of said lot No. 5 and running thence southerly along the east line of said lot, one-half the distance to the south line of said lot; thence westerly on a line equidistant from the south line of said lot; thence northerly on a line parallel with the east line of said lot to the north line thereof; thence easterly along the said north line to the place of beginning, together with the right of way in common with the owner and occupant of the premises next west of the premises above described, the passage or alley leading from Oneida street to the rear of the premises on each side of said alley, said right of way or passage to be taken one-half from the premises above described and the other half from the premises adjoining on the west and to extend seventy-four feet from the south bounds of Oneida street; and there is excepted and reserved the said right of way, the one-half thereof from the premises above described, to be used in common as aforesaid, by the persons owning and occupying on each side of said alley or passage. Also all that other tract or parcel of land situate in the town of Volney, county and state aforesaid, being part of lot No 6 of the 18th township of Scriba's patent and described as an undivided one-half of lands; Beginning in the W. line of said lot 19 chains and 30 1-2 links from the N. W. corner of the same and running thence easterly and parallel with the north line of said lot 19 chains [illegible] links to a stake in the original center division line of said lot, four and one-half links [illegible] maple tree. Thence south [illegible] along said center division line [illegible] links to a stake standing [illegible] a beech tree. Thence westerly [illegible] the south line of said lot [illegible] to the south east corner of the [illegible] thence westerly in a line with [illegible] said lot. I'm Wanting to See.

"A pinsion claim agint? Will, thin, sor,
You're the mon that I'm wanting to see,
I've a claim for pinsion that's due, sor,
An' I want yez to get for me.
Will, no sor, I niver was wounded,
For the fact is I didn't enlisht;
Though I would have been off in the army
Had I not had a boil on me fist.

"But me b'y me poor Mickie, was kilt, sor!
An' whin poets the story shall till,
Sure the country will then be erecting
A monument there where he fill!
He was not cut in two wid a saber,
Nor struck wid a big cannon ball,
But he leaped from a four-story windy,
An', bedad, he got kilt by the fall!"

"Yis, it was a rash lep to be making;
But, in faith, thin, he he had to, I'm sure,
For he h'ard thim a slamming an' banging,
An' a thrying to break in his dure;
They were going to capture poor Mickey,
An to kape from their clutches, poor b'y
He had to lep out of the windy,
An' indade, it was four stories high!"

"No, it wasn't the fall sor, that kilt him;
It was stopping so suddent, you see,
Whin he got to the bottom it jarred him,
An' that kilt him as dead as could be.
Och! he loved the old flag did bravo Mickey!
And he died for his country, although
He was not kilt in battle exactly—
He was lepping the bounties you know!"

"'Twas the marshal was after him! yis, sor,
An' in fact, he was right at the dure,
Whin he made the lep out of the windy;
An' he niver lepped bounties no more!
So, of course, I'm entitled to pinsion;
An' the owld woman, too, is, because
We were both, sor, depindent on Mickey,
The darling brave b'y that he was.

"Af course, you'll not have anny throuble,
So go on wid yez now, sor, and fill
Out a lot of thim blank affydavits,
An' I'll swear to thim all so I will.
It is swate, yis, to die for wan's counthry;
But, bedad, I can't hilp but abhor
Thim battles where people git buried,
Since Mickey got kilt in the war."

HELPED HER OUT.

"For years have been a severe sufferer from pains in the back. Tried various applications. One bottle of Thomas Electric Oil entirely cured me. Cured others equally quick." Mrs Benn of 14th street, Buffalo, wrote this.

A MISCHIEVOUS BOY.

Helping His Pa to Move—And Then Getting the Old Man Into a Disagreeable Scrape.

"What in the name of the seven-sleeping sisters have you got on your hands and face?" said the grocery man, as he took the bad boy by the ear and turned him around. "You would pass in a colored prayer meeting, and no one would think you were galvanized. What you got up in such an outlandish rig for?"

"Well, I'll tell you if you keep watch at the door. If you see a bald headed colored man coming along down the street with a club, you whistle and I'll fall down cellar. The bald headed colored man will be pa. You see, we moved yesterday, Pa told me to get a vacation from the livery stable, and we would have fun moving. But I don't want any more fun. Pa carried all the light things, and when it came to lifting he had a crick in the back. Gosh, I never was so tired as I was last night, and I hope we have got settled, only some of the goods haven't turned up yet. A drayman took one load over to the west side, and delivered them to a house that seemed to be expecting a load of household furniture. He thought it was all right if everybody that was moving got a load of goods. Well, after we got moved pa said we must make our garden, and he said we would go out and spade up the ground and sow peas and radishes and beets. There was some neighbors lived in the next house to our new one that was all wimmin, and pa didn't like to have them think we had to work, so he said it would be a good joke to disguise ourselves as tramps, and the neighbors would think we had hired some tramps to dig in the garden. I told pa of a bully scheme to fool them. I suggested that we take some of this shoe blacking that is put on with a sponge, and black our faces, and the neighbors would think we had hired an old colored man and his boy to work in the garden. Pa said it was immense, and he told me to go and black up, and if it worked he would black hisself. So I went and put this burnt cork on my face, 'cause it would wash off, and pa looked at me and said it was a whack, and for me to fix him up too. So I got the bottle of shoe blacking and painted pa so he looked [illegible]. Actually when ma [illegible] she ordered him off the premises [illegible] when he laffed at her and acted [illegible] she was going to throw boiling [illegible] but I told her the scheme [illegible] a "slide" to [illegible]. Pa looked [illegible] and I looked like Topsy, [illegible] of a colored person [illegible] boy [illegible] [illegible] his [illegible] alley fence and saw pa trying to wash off the blacking. You see that blacking won't wash off. You have to wear it off. Pa would wash his face with soap suds and then look in a glass, and he was blacker every time he washed, and when ma laffed at him he said the offulest words, something like 'Sweet spirit hear my prayer,' then he washed himself again. I am going to leave my burnt cork on, cause if I washed it off pa would know there had been smouging somewhere. I asked the shoestore man how long it would take the backing to wear off, and he said it ought to wear off in a week. I guess pa won't go out doors much, unless it is in the night. I am going to ask him to take me go off in the country fishing, till mine wears off, and when I get out of town I will wash up. Say, you don't think a little blacking hurts any man's complexion, do you, and you don't think a man ought to get mad because it won't wash off, do you?"

"Oh, probably it don't hurt the complexion," said the grocery man, as he sprinkled some fresh water on the wilted lettuce, so it would look fresh while the hired girl was buying some, "and yet it it is mighty unpleasant when a man has got an engagement to go to a card party, as I know your pa has tonight. As to getting mad about it, if I was your pa I would take a barrel stave and shatter your castle scandalous. What kind of a fate awaits you when you die, anyway?"

"Well, I am mixed up on the fate that awaits me when I die. If I should go off sudden, with all my sins on my head and this burnt cork on my face I should probably be a neighbor to you way down below; and they would give me a job as firemen, and I should feel bad for you every time I chucked in a nuther chunk of brimstone, and thought of you trying to swim dog fashion into the lake of fire, and straining your eyes to find an iceberg that you could crawl up on to cool your parched hind legs. If I don't die slow, so I will have time to repent, and be saved, I shall be toasted brown. That's what the minister says, and they wouldn't pay him two thousand dollars a year and give him a vacation to tell anything that was not so. I tell you it is painful to think of that place that so many pretty fair average people here are going to when they die. But I am going to be good or bust a suspender. Hereafter you can point to me as a boy who has seen the folly of an ill spent life, and if there is such a thing as a fifteen year old boy, who has been a terror, getting to Heaven, I am the hairpin. I tell you when I listen to the minister tell about the angels flying around there and I see pictures of them purtier than any girl in this town, with chubby arms with dimples in the elbows and shoulders, and long golden hair, and think of myself here cleaning off horses in a livery stable and smelling like an old harness, it makes me tired, and I wouldn't miss going there for ten dollars. Say you would make a healthy angel, for a back seat of the new Jerusalem, but you would give the whole crowd away unless you washed up, and sent that shirt to the Chinese laundry. Yes, sir, hereafter you will find me as good as I know how to be. Now I am going to wash up and help the minister move."

As the boy went out the grocery man sat for several minutes thinking of the change that had come over the bad boy, and wondered what had brought it about, and then he went to the door to watch him as he wended his way across the street with his head down, as though in deep thought, and the grocery man said to himself, "that boy is not as bad as some folks think," and then he looked around and saw a sign hanging up in front of the store written on a box cover, with blue pencil, "Spoiled canned ham and tongue, good enough for church picnics," and he looked after the boy who was slipping down into into an alley and said, "The condemned little whelp. Wait till I catch him."

Fashion Notes.

Cigar color is a fashionable tint.

The poke bonnet continues a favorite.

Gold braid is very stylish and much worn.

Tortoise shell ornaments are again in vogue.

Black silk stockings will be much worn with white dresses.

Talmas of jet beaded grenadine appear among midsummer wraps.

Tucks on skirts, draperies, sleeves and corsages are very fashionable.

Flower necklets or dog collars are a pretty novelty for evening wear.

Neck ribbons an inch wide are worn again but mostly with linen collars.

Large black lace fichus will be worn in place of mantles with midsummer dresses.

Jackets for riding and walking will be short and either braided or covered with buttons.

The fashion of mingling stripes and checks in one costume prevails, but it is commended.

Satin marveilleux remains the favorite silk for the foundation of black suits intended for serviceable wear.

Large shawls of white mull embroidered on the edges and in the corners will be much worn with midsummer toilets.

The latest thing in walking suits is a combination of fine black cashmere and [illegible]

Or twirled the spindle, sitting, with a quick
Light motion, like the aspen's glancing leaves.
The well-wrought tissues glistened as with oil,
As far as the Phœnician men excel
In guiding their swift galleys o'er the deep,
So far the women in their woven work

In handiwork and beautiful design."

[Odyssey of Homer.

I forgot to mention in my previous letter that for the past year I had been in the weave room in the race building, and my shining shuttle does not click so rapidly, as my web is nearly four yards wide, for the longer distance takes the longer time. In crossing the narrow foot bridge over the race to my room I have abundant opportunity to see other operatives that are going or coming to the mill, as well as the passers on the long river bridge.

It is quite evident that satin goods and satin finished goods of various colors were manufactured three thousand years ago. (see book of Kings.) Homer some six hundred years before the Christian era very definitely describes the goods that we are weaving to-day:—

"The well wrought tissues glistened as with oil."

But the earliest account of manufactured wearing apparel is given by Moses in the third chapter of Genesis, 4004 years before the Chaldean Shepherds saw the star in the East, about 5887 years ago:—"They sewed fig leaves together and made themselves aprons;" from which by annexes and a mansard roof we have the modern ulster. The wants as well as the population of the earth have greatly increased since then, and the discovery and inventive genius of man has sought out and made practical many kinds of appliances and cunningly wrought machinery by which the race may be clothed and the "Flora McFlimsey's have something to wear. Ned says that several of the beer and whisky sellers have asked him to go on their bond, guaranteeing that no pool tables, gambling devices or gambling shall be permitted in their houses when licenses have been granted; and billiard playing shall not cost him a cent in their inns. Ned says I guess not. That is first cousin to whisky drinking, and silent partner all the time. I'll dye first! I am honorably employed in one dye house and do not wish to engage in coloring human faces and character with a mordant that fixes the color so permanent that only by the most prayerful endeavor and the faith that comes from the firm belief in the omnipotent power of truth and goodness can remove the stain and bring back cleanness and nobleness of character. Analine and whisky are pretty sure to leave some evidence upon the person that handles them. Josephine who at one time had a corner in the egg market and was about to buy herself a new breastpin, has been disappointed, for while she was assisting in "house cleaning" the hens shut down on laying and in a very conceited manner went to "setting" night and day upon a pair of China nest eggs. She has reversed those hens and shook them up many times a day, but with the most stupid and disgusting indifference to her wish they kept right on "setting." Josephine is now using some diplomacy and teasing her father—yes, importuning him to buy her a billiard or pool table. Says Ned to her "what can you do with a pool table?" you buy me one and I will show you that there is very much more money in it than a yard full of "dorcuss" hens, although there may not be any less "setting!" Ned and I are in solemn study and hope to solve the problem and query, will it in the end pay?

My mother-in-law since she returned from my daughter Jane's has built a bed quilt with 7535 pieces in it and "nary" two alike. She contemplates exhibiting it at the Oswego Falls Fair this fall. So you see—

With cunning hand and rattling tongue
Contribute we from old to young,
The sterling worth the bard has sung of a mother-in-law.

Who tends the baby, combs its hair,
Wipes its nose, hears its prayer,
Knits its socks, present everywhere?
my mother-in-law.

Mid the stars and with deathless song
Whose name and fame should art prolong
And make our faith in goodness strong
my mother-in-law.

As we pull for the other shore,
When our "life's fitful dream is o'er,"
Who so cheerfully seize the oar as my mother-in law.

House cleaning is about over and every one has a cold in the 'ead and the odor of lime fills the air and we are anointing the "waste places" on our hands and arms with glycerine and arnica, and the bed has not been in the same locality for the past ten days; but now things are settling!

Spring with its exuberant gush is upon us and the swallows are again twittering under the eaves of the barn and the frolicking lambs are giving their tails a continued holiday and all nature indicates a revival and resurrection from the dead past and is budding into newness of life. Even Ned has caught the inspiration and by a close clip of his hair has reduced weight and moves about with a more cheerful and elastic step. My own wants are not many for with a new spring hat adorned by the artistic hand of the Goddess Calypso with tropic bird and flower, [illegible] I go with a light [illegible] loom and day [illegible] up [illegible]

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

A Recipe to Make Pretty Women.

A celebrated beauty, whose complexion at sixty was fresher than that of our women at thirty, told me her secret this summer, and it was divided into two parts: First—She never used washrag or towel on her face, but washed it with her hands, rinsing it off with a soft sponge. She used clear water in the morning, but white castile soap or very warm water at night, and, after drying it on a soft towel, she would take a flesh brush and rub her cheeks, chin and forehead. Second—If she was going to be up late at night, she always slept as many hours in the day as she expected to be awake beyond the usual time. She finished her little sermon on beauty preservation by saying soft water and sound sleep keep off wrinkles and spots, and girls should give more attention to this than they do, for

"'With the coming of the crows' feet
Is the going of the beaux feet.'"

The Strongest Argument

after all, the best test of acceptable service on the part of any merchant is the number of permanent customers he secures. Some clothing houses assume that "A bird in the hand is worth two in tha bush," and take chances of their customers' return after they had once been stuck "stuck." But alas! The supply of new customers finally runs out, and it is only a question of time when the artiful dodger is left no more lambs to shear. We have a strong and growing constituency to whom we refer with pride. Many of our customers have dealt with and sent their friends to be clothed by us. The verdict is that our Men's and Boy's Clothing is reliable, and we lay more stress upon that than upon any other feature of our business. Downright honesty is what we insist upon, both in process or satisfaction and treatment of our customers. Of course we make mistakes; who don't? But the person does not live who can truthfully assert when informed of a fault in our merchandise, we have ever refused to make it good. The Christian Advocate says: "Beware of unworthy evangelists, temperance lecturers, reformed men of all description who want to 'tell the story of their lives,' and give you half the proceeds."

The [illegible] Democracy of New York has [illegible] resolutions denouncing the Tammany Hall Senators for refusing to confirm or reject Governor Cleveland's nominees for Harbor Masters and Commissioners of Emigration.

That monument of nineteenth century enterprise the Brooklyn Bridge will be formally opened to the public to-morrow. President Arthur, Governor Cleveland and hundreds of distinguished guests will be present. Business will be practically suspended for the day in New York and Brooklyn.

Congressman Phil. Thompson of Kentucky, was tried at Harrodsburg last week for murdering John Davis whom he accused of drugging and debauching his wife. He was acquitted and is now in Washington. Davis is the fifth man Mr. Congressman Thompson has killed within the past six years.

Mrs. Scoville, the sister of Guiteau, is evidently desirous of obliterating her connection with the families of her brother and her late husband. She has filed an application for a change of name, and not desiring to retain her maiden name she asks that it be changed to Howe, her mother's name.

Missouri was the first state to adopt high licenses for liquor sellers and so successful was the scheme that other states were not slow to emulate her example. Gambling is now made a felony in that state. Missouri is classified among the outlaw states yet many laws she has enacted would be creditable to civilized states. Missouri acts while moralists theorize and talk.

In the case of the U. S. Senator Fair, of Novada, who was sued by his wife for divorce, no answer was filed to the complaint and on the 13th inst, at Virginia City, a decree of divorce was granted as prayed for. Mrs Fair was allowed four million two hundred and fifty thousand dollars and the family residence at San Francisco. Also the custody of three minor children.

The steamer Granite State, running between Hartford, Conn. and New York was burned Friday morning, about forty miles from Hartford, while on her way to New York. She had on board seventy-five passengers beside a crew of forty-six and nearly seventy-thousand dollars worth of freight which was burned. Fives lives were lost. The boat was insured for $40,000 which is said to be far below her value.

Convict labor has found a new employment. Heretofore the only trades seriously affected have been the hatters and shoemakers. Four hundred and fifty convicts in Clinton State Prison have been leased to a New York clothing manufacturer at thirty-five cents per day. In assuring customers that a garment "Fits shust like the paper mit de wa-ul" nothing is likely to be said as to whom they were manufactured by.

J. Proctor Knott has been nominated by the Democrats of Kentucky for Governor. The convention passed resolutions that the tariff act of the last Republican Congress as a monster piece of inequality, injustice and wrong, and they demand of the next Democratic House of Representatives a measure of relief and reform based upon the organic law of the Democratic party declared at St. Louis in 1876, and reaffirmed at Cincinnati in 1880, which requires that all custom house taxation shall be for revenue only.

Cyclones and tornadoes are the order of the day in the West. Following closely upon the destruction of property in Kansas City by the elements comes the news of a destructive storm sweeping through the city of Racine, Wis. The cyclone was preceded by a sharp electric storm. The path of the storm was little over half a mile long and about a quarter of a mile wide. One hundred and fifty dwellings and barns were wrecked, twenty people killed by flying timbers and falling buildings and over a hundred seriously injured. At many places in Illinois a severe storm prevailed the same day. A cyclone is one of the most dangerous expressions of the elements and little or no knowledge is possessed by people in seeking refuge from its fury. In many towns in Nebraska neighbors clubbed together and dug a cave or "dugout" in the side of a hill and seek it as a place of safety during the visitations of cyclones and tornadoes.

The City of Elizabeth, New Jersey, which has a debt of $7.000,000 hanging over it and taxable property of $12,500,000 is in a bad way. A mandamus now issued ordering the city authorities to place a part of the debt held by some of the creditors on the tax list will increase the taxes to fifteen per cent. The real estate owners do not much care. Their property will be sold, the city will buy it in, on tax titles, which are worthless, and the owners will retain possession. But the owners of personal property will suffer. The grocers are preparing to ship their stocks to New York and serve their customers by orders. The dry goods stores will close, and the smaller shops shut up. Business has already declined. If the mandamus is served, the street lamps will be put out, the schools closed, the policemen retired, [illegible] the city hall into the [illegible] the Singer Sewing Machine [illegible] the Pennsylvania Railroad [illegible]

[illegible] The census of 1880 gave the place, in round numbers, 50,000 inhabitants. From that time until the present there has been one continual boom in building and real estate, new additions being platted every day and the city reaching out in every direction to make room for the fast increasing population and to-day there are over 100,000 inhabitants in this city.

The Syndicate block on Nicolet Avenue is over four hundred feet long by 200 deep and is six stories high, and is the largest single block in the United States. Every room and store is heated with steam, and all floors above the ground are reached by elevators, so that one one floor is just as valuable as another for offices. The land on which the block stands was bought for $200 per front foot two years ago and now it is worth $1200 per front foot without the building.

Passing from Nicolet into Hennepin avenue we find a large hotel in course of erection which is to cost over $1,000,000 dollars. It is being built by John West who is proprietor of the Nicolini house. There are several other large blocks in course of erection in different parts of the city, but the most noticeable indication of the growth of the city is the large number of dwelling houses which are being erected. Those which are being erected by the laboring class, or, in other words the "dinner pail brigade," are, as a general thing, about a six or seven room two story house with a moderate amount of outside ornament. These are mostly built on outlying additions on the "motor" line or one of the many street car lines. But the Simon-pure, unadulterated "gingerbread" work is being lavished on the houses which are being erected by well to do men who do not care for expense; providing they can outdo someone else in queer and unique designs. The roofs of some of these houses are made up of valleys, hips and gables with several decks and cozy little porches sandwiched in here and there. There are a number of houses here which were built in the years gone by after the plan of the houses there owners left in the east, viz: "an upright with a wing" with twelve lighted windows which look quite odd in comparison with the average modern house

THE STREET RAIL ROADS

They have developed wonderfully within the past three years. At that time there was one line running from the State University on the east side across the suspension bridge, thence out Hennepin avenue, being about two miles in length. Now there are about ten separate routes, running out from the central portion of the city, like the arms of an octopus, making between forty-five and fifty miles of track over which are run about one hundred cars, carrying an average of from sixteen to eighteen thousand passengers daily. In addition to the street car system we have a motor line running from here to lakes Calhoun, Harriet and Minnetonka: the first named lake being four, the second five and the third fifteen miles from the heart of the city, the two first being now included in the city limits. Lake Calhoun is one and one-fourth miles long by three-fourths miles wide, and has nice banks which are being platted into lots and sold for lake shore residences. The lake is about eighty feet deep and is a beautiful sheet of water. There are a large number of mammoth hotels at these lakes for the accommodation of guests of which there are an immense number during the summer, a large percentage being from the south. There are a number of fleets of sail and row boats for the use of guests.

LAKE WOOD CEMETERY

is situated on the south west side of lake Calhoun and is to Minneapolis what Greenwood is to New York, Spring Grove to Cincinnati or Mt. Adnah to Fulton. To give you an idea of how real estate is going up, I will cite two or three instances. I bought a residence lot about one and one third miles from the post office last fall for sixteen hundred dollars and to-day I could get twenty-five hundred dollars for it in a minute; and an acre near hear I could have bought for $2400 two years ago, now is worth and will bring $6000. A friend of mine owned four lots which he begged me to buy of him at $500 each, one year ago, and he sold them the other for $3050. The city is full of such chances and eastern capitalists are taking advantage of them.

I will not take time to speak of the vast water power which St. Anthony's falls furnishes and the immense amount of flour and lumber manufactured here—as every one knows that Minneapolis is the leading flour city of the world.

Every man, woman and child in the United States has heard of but few, comparatively have seen it. I have been a resident of this city over two years and never took time to go four miles to see it until last Sunday. I had imagined that it was a nice little fall, but a person who has not seen them cannot imagine their beauty and loveliness. The stream is about ten inches deep and fifty feet wide above the falls. One can step down to the very edge of the stream where it breaks over the rock, and by reaching out can look down to the level below, seventy feet, the space in back of the sheet of falling water is about ten feet wide and ten feet above the lower level and one can pass clear round back of the fall. There is a platform about six rods below the fall where one can sit and have his picture taken with falls for a background. The stream goes dancing away after its fall, over a gravelly bed tumbling along a heavy "down grade" for about one-half a mile when it joins the majestic Mississippi. Chas.

MINNEHAHA FALLS

CONDUCTOR FROST.

Of the Mt. McGregor Railroad, Saratoga —The Best Fellow that Ever Lived.

"Well, sir, I've been up the Mt. McGregor railroad," were the first words your reporter heard when he passed through the gate of the Saratoga depot. "Mt. McGregor Railroad! Where is that? I thought." I looked about me and saw the hurrying crowd—saw the United States Hotel looking as of old. But the Mt. McGregor Railroad was a new feature. The top of this mountain is graced with two charming lakes. Looking about us from the one point we catch a glimpse of the Catskills. There of the Hudson. Here of Lake George. There of the Green Mountains. "Charming spot," was the one opinion.

The road is finely equipped. "That's conductor Frost, the best fellow that ever lived," said a man, pointing to a jolly full faced individual collecting tickets. I was introduced. "Where do you get all this glow of health, Conductor?" "Well, sir, I'm looking hearty and feeling hearty because I've formed an attachment for Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Honestly I think it's the best medicine ever given to a man. I have recommended it again and again; every time with the same results. Why, there's Ed Welsh of the Adelphi Hotel (his home is 136 W. 34th street, N. Y.) he came up here and the change of air and water had a fearful effect upon him. His face broke out in blotches and pimples. I had seen the FAVORITE REMEDY used. I told him to get a bottle. He did so, and in three days's time the rash and fever entirely disappeared. It seemed to cleanse the blood with such rapidity. I have recommended Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY to a great many persons who were bilious and troubled with stagnant blood. FAVORITE REMEDY never fails to purify and strengthen. I know this to be a fact."

WITHOUT A SUMMER.

Cold Weather in the Year 1816—The Oldest Inhabitant Tells a Story.

During a cold spring, like that which is just drawing to an end, people generally console themselves with the reflection that the sun will eventually get the victory, and that summer will certainly come at last, though its coming may be delayed. Uncertain as the weather is, the general features of the seasons recur with a regularity which warrants the confidence thus reposed in the annual return of seed time and harvest; but there are instances on record in which even the seasons seem to have lost their characteristic features, as if the ordinary laws of meteorology had been temporarily suspended.

In the year 1816 the months of January and February were mild: March was cold; April began warm, but ended in snow and ice. Ice formed an inch thick in May, and fields were planted over and over again till it was too late to replant. June was the coldest ever known in this latitude: frost and ice were common. Almost every green thing was killed; fruit nearly all destroyed. Snow fell to the depth of ten inches in Vermont, seven in Maine, three in the interior of New York, and also in Massachusetts. There were a few warm days. It was called a dry season. But little rain fell. The wind blew steadily from the north, cold and fierce. Mothers knit extra socks and mittens for their children in the spring, and woodpiles that usually disappeared during the warm spell in front of the houses were speedily built up again. Planting and shivering were done together, and the farmers who worked out their taxes on the country roads wore overcoats and mittens. In a town in Vermont a flock of sheep belonging to a farmer had been sent as usual to their pasture. On the 17th of June a heavy snow fell in New England. The cold was intense.

A farmer who had a large field of corn in Tewksbury, Mass., built fires around it at night to ward off the frost; many an evening he and his neighbors took turns watching them. He was rewarded by the only crop of corn in the neighborhood. Considerable damage was done in New Orleans in consequence of the rapid rise of the Mississippi river. Fears were entertained that the sun was cooling off, and throughout New England all picnics were strictly prohibited.

July was accompanied with frost and ice. Indian corn was nearly all destroyed; some favorably situated fields escaped. August was more cheerless, if possible, than the summer months which preceded it. Ice was formed half an inch in thickness. Indian corn was so frozen that the greater part was cut down and dried for fodder. Almost every green thing was destroyed in this country and in Europe. On the 30th snow fell at Barnet, forty miles from London. Very little corn ripened in New England and the middle States. Farmers supplied themselves from corn produced in 1815 for seed in the spring of 1817. It sold at from $4 to $5 per bushel.

September furnished about two weeks of the pleasantest weather of the season, but in the latter part of the month ice formed an inch thick. October had more than its share of cold weather. November was cold and snowy. December was comfortable, and the winter following was mild. Very little vegetation was matured in the Eastern and middle States. The sun's rays seemed to be destitute of heat during the summer; all nature was clad in a sable hue: and men exhibited no little anxiety concerning the future of this life.

Lydia Pinkham, whose fair features has adorned the columns of every journal in the country, is dead. She commenced the manufacture of "Yours for health," in a teakettle in Lynn, Mass., forty years ago and developed its manufacture into a business of $300,000 a year.

The census shows the black race is multiplying more rapidly than the white. In three states it outnumbers the white, and in four others nearly equals it. In [illegible]

Killed in Palermo.

John Keller, one of the most industrious and respected citizens of the town of Palermo met his death Saturday while working in his stave mill near North Volney. He was oiling the bearings of a line shaft, that runs in a narrow place closed on either side by a stone wall, when his coat sleeve caught upon a set screw and drew him around the shaft beating his body against the wall and mangling him in a terrible manner. He was whirled around the shaft some fifty times. His right limb was broken in two places, his ribs crushed and his scalp cut. Drs. Loomis and Phelps were summoned. Mr. Keller lived about two hours from the time of the accident. He died from internal hemorrhage. He was 56 years of age. His funeral was held from the M. E. church at Clifford yesterday at 2 p. m., Rev. J. H. Buck officiating.

It is said that a cheese factory in this county has been caught at a trick of stuffing dishonest substances in its cheese. The cheese appeared to be good and went into market with that reputation, but in forty of them were masses of filty, offensive stuff, called "floating curd." The offense will probably be quietly settled but the public wants to know the name of the factory and its manager. [Watertown Times.

Mr. Eber Rice met with an accident Friday while working on the new Clark & Moyer building. He was assisting to raise plank to the top of the building, he standing on the ground steadying them. It was a painful and ugly wound. He continued work the next day.

Learned a Lesson.

A gentleman stepped into Amdursky's new clothing house Saturday and looked around at the mammoth stock. Mr. Amdursky approached him and asked if he wished to buy a suit of clothes.

"No, sir," he replied, "I buy my clothes in Syracuse. There I find them cheaper I think."

Mr Amdursky asked him to take a seat and proved conclusively to him that he was in error; that suits he was selling for $15 were being sold in Syracuse for $22 and so on, and gave his reasons as follows:

FIRST—Rents in Syracuse are fabulous; some stores paying as high as six thousand dollars per annum.

SECOND—Clerk hire and advertising is another enormous drainage.

THIRD—Living in the city costs twice what it does in Fulton.

"Now, my friend," said Mr Amdursky "where does the profits come from? Country people pay the expenses. They are attracted thither by blow and bluster only to be fleeced." I will sell you a fine fitting, all wool, stylish and well made suit for $15. I buy at the same [illegible] Syracuse dealers do and have in [illegible] a much better stock. My [illegible]

DENVER, Colo, May 18—This is a busy and wide-awake city, [illegible] magnificent business and dwelling houses. The most imposing public building is the union railroad depot. The trains and travel of nine roads centre here, and in and out travelers are going like bees around a hive. The depot is a fine stone structure containing large and handsome dining halls; fine waiting rooms and good offices, the whole being lighted by electricity. The streets and principal stores are also illuminated by the same means. Denver has for some time borne the reputation of being a great place for saloons, bowie knives, ruffians and cut throats. It is a quiet, orderly city and is free from that border ruffian element that eastern people are led to believe have the freedom of all western towns.

Ten years ago Denver was a typical frontier town with but a few thousand inhabitants; to-day it is prosperous and growing city of nearly 75,000 inhabitants. Here is the finest opera house in the world, with the one exception of the Grand Opera House in Paris, France.

It was built by Mr. Tabor at a cost of about one million dollars. Mr. Tabor, (or I should say ex-Senator Tabor) was a poor man five years ago but is now worth about twelve million dollars, but with all his wealth he is not regarded as much of a man. The Colorado exhibition building which opens in July is an elegant building and is about two miles out of the city. The Circle railroad runs out to the building every half hour and a mile further on is the new park containing a great many acres. Some 250,000 trees have just been set out. A company was formed a short time ago which manufacture steam and at a certain amount per annum heat hotels, public buildings and even private houses in any part of the city. Denver has nine newspapers and four of them are dailies. Beef is worth 20cts. per pound, oranges 10cts. each, and board from $7 to $15 per week and about $5 for a fair room. Car fare is as high as 15c. per mile on one road which takes you to one of the highest railroad points in the world.

As some of your Fulton readers are interested in "Brick" Pomeroy's Atlantic and Pacific tunnel Co., I will say that the stockholders have commenced suit for the recovery of $100,000 which they claim he (Brick) has pocketed and made no showing. Following are a few of the charges:—

First—Because the property is in the hands of Mark M. Pomeroy and those colluding with him to cheat and defraud the company and its stockholders.

Second—Because Mark M. Pomeroy is insolvent and execution proof.

Third—That because the stock of said company has become worthless on account of the mismanagement of Mark M. Pomeroy and others colluding with him.

And so on for some eight charges.

I expect to start for Utah in a few days and will tell you what I think of Salt Lake City and the Mormons.

Malicious Witnesses.

Last fall two ladies of this village compiled a book of valuable and practicable household recipes and had five hundred printed by Morrill Brothers. When final settlement was demanded the ladies demurred, claiming the books were imperfect in many respects. A satisfactory adjustment was impossible and Morrill Bros. commenced suit for recovery as per contract. THE TIMES knows nothing of the merits of the case only of the part taken by "Dolph" and Fred Bennett.

These two mischief makers assured the ladies that they had a sure case—the Morrill Bros. were illegitimate and amateur printers, possessed no knowledge of the business and they freely offered and obtruded their services to testify the printing and binding of the books were wretched. They did so.

S. B. Mead was counsel for the plaintiffs and G. S. Piper for defendants. The trial commenced last Tuesday before Justice Rice and a jury and continued until Wednesday at 4 p. m.

So anxious were the Bennetts to beat Morrill Bros that they suspended work during the trial and Fred Bennett took a seat close to the defendants' counsel and acted as assistant. "Dolph" was perched on a cracker barrel or wood box until called to the witness stand. Mr. Mead wrung from him an admission that he had often lied about the Morrill Bros. and after twisting him up and ridiculing him ordered him off the stand.

Fred was called to the stand. Mr. Mead toyed with this great man until he swore the book was well printed and as good a job as the Patriot was capable of executing. After making a few foolish admissions that plainly indicated to the jury his wicked maliciousness he was given a reprieve.

The jury was composed of the following well known gentlemen: George Emeny, D. E. Mason, James F. Herrick, Adelbert Tucker, George S. Hanna and Jerome Moyer. They rendered a verdict in favor of Morrill Bros.

The Bennetts were not entire strangers to the jury. They were known to some of them as filthy and miserable loafers and not above the level of perjuring themselves if by so doing it would work to the injury of these boys.

It must begin to dawn upon "Dolph" and Fred that they are of little consequence in this community and especially when testifying before a jury composed of their neighbors.

Morrill Bros. started in business with a hand stamp and by diligence and honesty now have one of the best equipped printing offices in this section. In "Dolph" and Fred Bennett they have always encountered bitter and unscrupulous opposition, but have flourished in spite of them. A new postal instruction just received by postmasters is that "all letters upon which one full rate of postage has been prepaid, and all postal cards, shall be forwarded from the post-office to which they are addressed, without additional charge for postage. Such forwarding must be continued until the party addressed is reached.

There is not much prospect of the construction of the Syracuse, Phœnix & Oswego railroad. The citizens of the northern part of the city of Syracuse have petitioned the authorities to revoke their grant to the Syracuse & Phœnix railroad company, on the grounds that the company has not complied with the stipulations entered into at the time the privilege of a right of was granted.

Observer—The manufacture of brick in Oswego Falls is an important industry as there will be four yards in operation this season. Probably no where in the state can a better organized yard be found than W. D. Edgarton's. He employs 18 hands and turns out 16,000 brick per day, and will burn about two millions this season. His first kiln will be ready for the fire before the first of the month.

The Board of Excise met Thursday evening and granted the following licenses:—

Drug store—R. E. Phillips, M. M. Williams, and W. J. Watson,

Hotels—Henry Boardman, Dexter house, and Jas T. Pratt, Lewis house.

The whole number of licenes granted is 26. The amount received for such licence is $1,025. The board will meet again Monday June 4.

Going to Adams.

Rev. E. Moyses, who has been Rector of Zion Episcopal church in Fulton since May, 1872, eleven years, has accepted a call from Adams, Jefferson Co., N. Y., and will take his final departure from this village Friday. Although the news of his departure will be a surprise to many he has nevertheless been contemplating a change for several months. Mr. Moyses is an able and scholarly minister; a true Christian gentleman and leaves Fulton with the kindliest wishes of hundreds of friends for a pleasant future.

Is He a Fulton Man.

An associated press despatch from Cuero, Texas, dated the 21st inst, reads:

John Coggins, who registered in San Antonio as from New York city was murdered about two miles from here a few days ago, and his body thrown into the river He had been engaged in giving stereopticon exhibitions.

This is supposed to be John Coggins a former resident of Fulton, and whose parents reside in Stony Robbie, Granby. He is about 30 years of age and has been absent from Fulton for several years. Mr. Coggins is a subscriber to THE TIMES and the paper is sent to San Antonio, Texas. Cuero is a small village of twelve hundred inhabitants in De Witt county. His friends will take immediate steps to ascertain whether the murdered man was from Fulton.

An effort will be made to celebrate the Fourth of July in Fulton this year. Hundreds of people who flock to neighboring towns to enjoy the "Fourth" will stay at home if any attempt is made to entertain them.

Miss Essie Martin returned Monday from an extended visit among friends in Poughkeepsie and New York. She was accompanied home by Mr. Wm. Scanlan of Poughkeepsie who will visit with his friends in town.

John B. Thurston died suddenly at the residence of his son John in Granby Thursday, the 17th, aged 88 years. He was one of the pioneers of this locality and was universally respected. He was born March 3, 1795, at Johnstown, N. Y.

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees last evening the question of the removal of Clerk L. H. Patterson was brought up. Mr. Patterson pleaded "Not Guilty', and asked that he be given a trial. He asked that a further time be given him as his counsel H. C. Howe, Esq., was indisposed and unable to appear. On motion of Trustee VanWagenen he was granted another week and will appear for trial next Tuesday evening with counsel.

The Oswego Palladium of Monday makes public the fact of the escape of W. C. Nichols from the county jail who had been absent a week. Tuesday morning the 15th inst, Jailor Hubbard unlocked the door of Nichols' cell. Nichols stepped out, and seeing the door open separating the jail hall and kitchen and observing the key in the lock; passed through, locked the jailor in and made his escape. Nichols was confined on a charge of burglary and was to await the action of the grand jury. It will be remembered that Neville and Cavanaugh, two desperate characters, walked out of the same institution a few weeks ago. There is evidently something wrong in the management of the Oswego jail.

NATURE'S TOUCHES.

"One Touch of Nature Makes the Whole World Kin.

[Troilus and Cressida.

The kinship of suffering is more intimate than that even of joy, and of course, than any other of the experiences of life which draw mankind together; and this is shown by the tenderness of sympathy which is evoked by the mere recital of a pathetic incident. It illustrates the kinship which pure Nature's touch creates, drawing aside as it were for the moment the fictitious barriers which materialism has set up, and revealing a momentary glimpse of the unknown To Be. In a lesser degree Nature's touch has a similar material effect The physical sensations, no less than those of the soul, respond to the sentiment, and although the experiences are grosser though none the less real. The sensation of cold is a touch of nature that makes the whole world kin, in that the whole world kin, in that the whole world is led to adopt similar methods of resisting the effects of its disagreeable sensation; so likewise of undue heat; and it is in recognition of this kinship of need that Kent & Miller, the wellknown dealers in Ready Made Clothing have been led to supply seasonable garments to counteract the sometimes rude touches of nature that makes the whole kin. Particularly adapted to the present changeable season of prolonged cold is the stock now displayed of Spring goods, light in color but of various patterns; light in weight but assuredly comfortable; elegant in fit, and reasonable in price. One has but to accept their invitation to call and examine and compare to be convinced that in all respects the best place to purchase is at Kent & Miller's, 18 & 20 South Salina Street.

[illegible] by Post D. F. [illegible] to be followed in the observance of Decoration or Memorial day, which occurs on the 30th day of May. The Post will meet promptly at their headquarters at 1:30 p. m., and at 2 p. m. sharp, the line will form on First street in front of G. A. R. Headquarters, and the Fire department and civic societies in front of the Engine House. The procession will be headed by the Fulton band. A delegation from the Oswego Fire department have been invited and will parade.

The line of march will be down First street to Oneida, up Oneida to Third, down Third to the Park where services will commence at 2:30. Following is the order:

Music,
Prayer by Rev. Mr. Markham,
Music, Post Quartette,
Oration by Hon Wm H Kenyon, of Oswego,
Music,
Benediction by Rev Mr Kinmouth,

The procession will then form and march to the cemetery where short services will then be performed by the soldiers' lot, after which the graves of the soldiers will be decorated with flowers.

The following named persons are the officers of the day. President, W J Pentelow, commander Post Schenck; Marshal, S B Mead; Assistant Marshals, G S Piper, Fred A Gage; Committee to mark graves, Mt Adnah, A W Laws, Catholic cemetery, M F Crahan; Martial music and band, Robt McCully Vocal music, J F Cooper; Flowers, Charles Hewitt, D M Perine, G V Emens; Flags, Wm Ellis, Amos Youmans and John Howe; General committee, W J Pentelow, D M Perine and H H Kendrick:

General Commander Vandevoort respectfully requests in the name and in behalf of the G A R that business be suspended during the few hours while the exercises are taking place. Citizens are also respectfully requested to decorate their residences especially along the line of march.

There will be a memorial sermon preached in the Presbyterian church Sunday evening May 26 by Rev J S Riggs. Post Schenck will meet in their rooms at 7 o'clock and repair in a body to the church. Music will be furnished by the post quartette composed of J F Cooper, M C Highriter, N H Gilbert and James Hoff. The public are respectfully invited to attend the memorial services.

The committee on flowers have selected the following persons to assist them and they are requested to meet at the G A R hall, in the Kenyon block, at 9 o'clock a. m. on Memorial day. They also request all persons having flowers to contribute to send them to some member of the committee or to the hall by 9 o'clock on that day:

Miss Helen Miller, Mrs Henry Salmon, Mrs Henry Gardner, Mrs A Emerick, Mrs R B O'Dell Mrs A C Livingston Misses Salmon, Mrs W A Palmer, Mrs C W Streeter, Mrs J W Distin Mrs E. Bonner, Miss Maggie Vant, Miss Eunice Sisson. Miss Minnie More, Fred Schenck, Lewis Hewitt, Mr and Mrs F. E. Goodjon.

The following young ladies have been selected to solicit flowers:

Miss Rebecca Stewart, Miss Fannie Lake, Miss Edith Emens, Miss Bertha Lee, Miss Nellie Royce, Miss Hattie Dada.

A dearth of flowers seems possible, and the committee hope that every one who may have flowers to spare will place them at their disposal.

Suicide in Hannibal.

On Saturday evening about 8 o'clock says the Oswego Times and Express, Coroner Barnes received a telegram from Dr. D. F. Acker of Hannibal stating that Ervin Sheldon had committed suicide by hanging. Coroner Barnes drove out there Sunday morning to enquire into the cause of the suicide. Ervin Sheldon kept a cigar store, news-room and tobacco store and was apparently doing a good business. He was first found by a man named Benjamin Hulin. The store had three rooms, the one occupied by the store itself, a small back room and a small store room. Some time Saturday afternoon, between the hours of 1:30 and 5:30, Mr. Sheldon went into the store room, leaving the front door of the store open, but closing the other two doors after him. He had a rope with him about the size of an ordinary clothes-line, and cut off a piece about five feet in length, formed a slip noose, and mounting on a soap box on the counter, fastened the other end of the rope to a rafter and jumped off. He dropped about three feet and his feet were about two-and-a-half feet from the floor, but against the counter and there were marks made by his boot heels on the front of the counter in his death struggles. He strangled to death. Mr. Sheldon had been well known and liked in the neighborhood but there was insanity in the family. His mother hung herself while laboring under its influence, and another member of the family died insane. Deceased was about 35 years old and had a wife who had been sick nearly all the time since they were married. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict that deceased came to his death by suicide, while laboring under temporary aberration of the mind.

SCROFULA.

What it is, and How to Overcome It.

Scrofula is a constitutional disease, in which there is a deposit, or a tendency to a deposit, of tubercle in various tissues and organs of the body.

Scrofula, which in modern times is almost without exception an hereditary disease, undoubtedly had its origin among the poorer classes in new countries where water was bad, miasmas parvalent food with little variety, clothing insufficient, and exposure to the cold and wet, common and frequent. Scrofula is the cause of nearly all the chronic diseases. It impairs the sense of smell, and enlarges the glands of the throat, or breaks into consuming ulcers on the neck. It destroys the lungs, or fills them with tuberculous secretions. It eats away the coating of the stomach, enlarges the liver, clogs the kidneys, creates constipation and induces piles. The muscles it contracts and renders powerless with Rheumatism, while the secretions of the joints contaminated by it cause the painful gout. The hereditary blood poison of Scrofula, develops in the delicate tissues of the brain, and mental weaknesses and infirmities idiocy and insanity. It slowly undermines the constitution, and we believe it to be as above stated, the cause of nearly all the chronic diseases. We all know what this disease is, and we know too that medical science is very much at sea as to the best mode of treating it. What we need is, a remedy that will build up the blood and destroy the acrid character, and this we have in Rheumatic Syrup. A remedy absolutely free from mineral or vegetable poisons and may be prescribed for any species of skin or blood disease, with the certainty of speedy relief and a permanent cure when all other remedies fail.

Rheumatic Syrup is not a patent medicine, but is a proprietary article, compounded and skillfully prepared by a process peculiar to itself, of the active medicinal properties of the most approved alterative, tonic and blood puriying remedies of the vegetable kingdom known to medical science; but we do not advertise to cure Scrofula, Salt Rheum or Rheumatism, with one bottle nor with two or three, as most of the venders of quack nostrums do. We have, it is true cured many cases of inflammatory and sciatic rheumatism with two and three bottles of the Syrup, but in chronic cases of years' standing, to effect a permanent cure, it has been found necessary to use the medicine from three to six months, and in one extreme case the patient continued its use for fourteen months; but was entirely cured of Scrofula in its worst form. He says it did not cost him one-tenth what he had paid before for various treatments from which he received no benefit.

Rheumatic Syrup the Great Blood Purifier, prevents the deposit and dissemination of the tubercle in and through the blood, and protects the system from scrofulous affections.

Being resolvent and detergent, it disorganizes accumulations tubercle and eliminates them from the system, thus becoming the most potent and efficient cure for scrofula known at the present time.

By its action upon the stomach, liver and blood, it cures strumous dyspepsia, and renders its occurrence impossible.

In Rheumatic cases, the patience after using the second or third bottle, feels darting pains where he never before felt them, and many times he feels that he is growing worse from its use; but this is a favorable symptom, and by a continued use of the Rheumatic Syrup, the patient finds himself entirely freed from all pain or soreness, and his whole system invigorated and strengthened by it.

Rheumatic Syrup is manufactured by Rheumatic Syrup Co., at No 1 Plymouth avenue, Rochester N. Y., and sold by druggists generally. Send for pamphlet of testimonials.

"A BLESSING IN DISGUISE."

484 Adelphi St, BROOKLYN, N. Y.,
MARCH 29, 1881.

No family should be without Allcock's porous plasters; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficiency far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and know them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint, bronchitis, neuralgia, lumbago, inflammation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness, and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weakness, they have no equal. I have never yet found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much [illegible]

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

The new dairymen's board of trade in Syracuse met Monday. Five hundred boxes of cheese were offered and nearly two thousand pounds of butter. The Standard says it is expected that about fifty factories will register at the next sales day. There are several factories about Cazenovia which were not ready to sell yesterday, but which will be on hand next week. The same is also true of those factories which have sold heretofore upon the Fulton market. The highest price paid yesterday was 11⅝ cents for 55 boxes of cheese from the Loomis factory at Ingells crossing.

UTICA, May 21—Salesmen were plentiful to-day, and the number of lots taken ran up to considerably over one hundred. They were, however, very small, but the present stock is being shipped as fast as its age will permit. The make is now acknowledged to be equal to last year's, and it would not be surprising if it should surpass that. Five thousand two hundred boxes of cheese were sold at 11 to 11 ¾c., 1,200 were consigned. The bulk of sales were made at 11½ cents per pound.

LITTLE FALLS, May 21—Most of the cheese sold to-day, having the night's mess of milk slightly skimmed, brought 11½c., and the whole milk stock went at 11¾c: The one lot at 12c was smal fancy white cheese for a special market. Another week probably all of the everyday cheese will be closed out. Following are the sales:

Lots	Boxes	Price.

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and effecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address, The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams.

Board and Tuition (short week)..........20
Other branches at Moderate Rates.

Boarding and Day School for Ladies and Gentlemen.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday March 26th. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to

TRADE DR MARK

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty-five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Flocking to the Cities.

The tendency of population to towns and cities has been made the subject of much study and comment of late years. It has been often deprecated as inimical to the general welfare of society. Fruitgrowing and gardening is to be commended because of its independence, its healthfulness and its almost invariable remunerativeness.

Very few farmers ever "fail in business; while in mercantile pursuits ninety-five out of every hundred fail. Despite these startling figures, there is a tendency, that verges upon a mania, to seek business and social life in cities and villages. There are many legitimate and natural farmer mechanics who will succeed better as artisans than agriculturists. Men with the appetite for merchandise will not hardly be content with the culture of the soil. And so with all callings and professions: men should follow the line of business for which they are naturally qualified.

Social, educational, religious and esthetic reasons also obtain. The advantages of the city, in all these requisitions, are apparent, and not to be denied. It is true that, in their enjoyment, we lose many advantages that pertain to rural life; but, with a large number of people, the attractions of city life outweigh all country attractions. It is well that it should be so. The country without villages and cities would be a very desirable one to emigrate from; and the city without its rural surroundings would indeed be very helpless, as well as undesirable place of abode,—in fact, an impossibility. It is obviously in the economy of nature that these two conditions of society should always exist.

The Invention of Matches.

"Did I ever tell you what Charles Sumner once said to me about the manufacture of matches?" queried Lucius C. Allin, the veteran armory foreman. "It was about fifty years ago now, when I was in doubt whether it would pay to go into the business, and asked Mr. Sumner what he thought about it. He turned around quick as a flash and said: 'Mr. Allin, how many pins do you suppose are made in a year?' I thought there must be a good many millions. "And how many times,' he continued, 'is a pin used?' 'Perhaps twenty on an average,' I replied. 'Then at least twenty times as many matches will be needed as pins,' he concluded, 'and of course it will pay.' Now did ever Charles Sumner ever size up anything neater than that. I made matches several years, and, not only that, but I invented them. It was away back in the '30s, when I was a boy. I was always fooling with the ingredients, brimstone and the like, till finally I struck an idea. Then I went to work and made a few matches, rather crude, of course, and showed them to a few friends, but they didn't think it would amount to anything, and I didn't either, at first, so I minded nothing about it till 1834, I think it was, when a friend persuaded me to apply for a patent. It was quite a trip to Washington in those days, but in a few days I got word that a Chicopee man had filed a similar application a short time before mine arrived. I was satisfied that I could get the patent by fighting for it, but I didn't think then it would pay, and so I made an arrangement with the Chicopee man by which I was to offer no opposition to his getting the patent, but could have the privilege of manufacturing matches on my own hook. He got the patent and I went into the business. I had quite an establishment on Walnut street hiring about thirty hands, mostly girls, and kept it till '37, the time of the great panic. The Chicopee man was a drunken peddler, and he went to Boston on a spree, and gambled the patent away to men who have made their fortunes out of it. I had sold matches all through the country, but there was a good deal of opposition to their manufacture. The papers said it was a bid for incendiarism, and many shopkeepers wouldn't sell them. The railroad had got as far as Worcester then, but they wouldn't carry matches, and I had to hire men to drive them through to Boston. There were some other matches in the market that would crack like a pistol when you lit them, and when we put some in a box and set them afire it sounded like a small canonade. But my matches were like what we have now, and were the first ever made that I know of." [Springfield Republican.

THE FLY AND THE HORNET.

The fly is a domestic animal, he is generally found near the molasses can, the fly is a harmless animal, not being furnished with as good weapons of defense as the hornet. They say that flys drink. I have never seen flys that were worse off for liquors, but I have seen liquors worse off for flys. The hornet is a red hot child of natur. He is always ready for action at any time of the day or night. My advice is to keep clear of the hornet as he is too sociable.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 2, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in Hood's SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,

A Milkman who was off His Bearings.

When the milkman drove up to a house on Thirty-fourth street the other day to deliver the usual quart of mixture the gentleman of the house kindly inquired:

"Thomas, how many quarts of milk do you deliver now?"

"Ninety-one, sir.

"How many cows have you?"

"Nine, sir."

The gentleman made some remarks about the early spring, state of the roads, &c., and then asked: "Say, Thomas, how much milk per day do your cows average?"

"Seven, sir."

"Ah—um," said the gentleman as he moved off.

Thomas looked after him, scratched his head, and all at once grew pale as he pulled a short pencil and began to figure on the wagon cover: "Nine cows is nine, and I set seven quarts down under the cows and multiply. That's sixty-three quarts of milk. I told him I sold ninety-one quarts per day. Sixty-three from ninety-one leaves twenty-eight and none to carry. Now, where do I get the rest of the milk? I'll be hanged if I haven't given myself dead away to one of my best customers by leaving a darned big cavity in these figures to be filled with water!"

WOULD HAVE BEEN-SET UPON.

Had not Burdock Blood Bitters been a remedy of unquestionable merit they would have been set down upon by the public as thousands of medicines have been when their worthlessness was discovered. Burdock Blood Bitters have received unbounded praises from the sick, thus establishing their merit beyond dispute.

"Higher" Education.

"Class in geography stand up. Now who can tell me who was King of the Cannibal Islands 400 years ago? What can no one answer this gravely important query?" Is it possible that you have knowingly kept yourselves in the dark on a point which may one day decide the fate of the nation? Very, well the entire class will stay an hour after school as a punishment.

The "B" class in geography will please arise and come forward for trial and sentence. Now, then, in what direction from San Francisco are the Mangrove Islands? What! can no one answer? And you boys expect to grow up and become business men, and girls to become wives, and yet don't know whether the Mangrove Islands are north-east or south-west of San Francisco! I shall send these boys to the principal to be thrashed, and the girls will have no recess.

"The class in history will now take the prisoner's box, and tell the jury whether sunflower seeds are among the exports of Afghanistan. No answer? None of you posted on this momentous question? Two-thirds of you on the point of leaving school to mingle in the busy scenes of life, and yet you do not know whether Afghanistan exports sunflower seeds or grindstones! For five years I have labored here as a teacher, and now I find that my work is thrown away. Go to your seats and I will think up some mode of punishment befitting your crime.

The advanced class in mathematics will now step forward. One of you please step to the blackboard and illustrate the angular rectangle north-east corner of a quadrangle. What! No one in all this class able to make that simple illustration? James and John and Joseph and Henry, you expect to become merchants, and Mary and Kate and Nancy and Sarah, you are all old enough to get married, and yet you confess your ignorance of angular rectangular quadrangulers before the whole school! John suppose you become a wholesale grocer. Do you expect to buy tea and sugar and coffee and spices, and sell the same again without reference to quanrangles? Mary, suppose you go to the store to buy four yards of factory at ten cents a yard. How are you going to be certain that you have not been cheated if you cannot figure the right angle of a triangle? Ah, me! I might as well resign my position and go home and die, for the next generation will be so ignorant that all educated persons will feel themselves strangers and outcasts.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen: Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

A Laugh.

A. A. WHITMAN.

Behold how good it is to laugh,
A rousing big side-splitting laugh!
It snaps the bands of care in half,
And breaks ennui's fetter;
It stirs the winter of the mind;
It makes the heart's waste song inclined;
It frees the blossoms there confined,
And leaves man truly better.

I mean a laugh that is a laugh—
A roaring good old-fashioned laugh,
That can of round good-nature quaff
A foaming over bumper.
It clears the heart of troubles rife,
Roots up the thistle weeds of strife,
And lengthens out the thread of life,
And strikes disease a thumper.

I pity him who cannot laugh,
For his poor manhood needs its staff,
I dread—I shun who will not laugh,
For he is more a beast by half
Than any four-foot creature.
And though the wise shall frown at this
A bishop shake his gown at this;
I set a good laugh down at this—
And though the prude look down at this;
The wine of human nature.

MAY'S FORTUNE.

"What am I to do with her, Arnold? The child will be a woman soon—what am I to do with her?"

A shade of perplexity was in the speaker's tone, and his gaze rested not on the man beside him—a man his junior by too short a cycle of time for the difference to have left its outward impress—but beyond the room, and out through the open window on the lawn, where stood a girl caressing a superb stag-hound.

Unconsciously she made a picture lovely enough to arrest any gaze; but the perplexity on Frederick Fabian's handsome face vanished in amaze, as his companion gave a short, quick answer to his half involuntary question, in these words:

"Give her to me."

For a moment astonishment rendered him dumb.

"Give her to you?" he gasped, at last. "Why, Dick, old fellow, what would an old bachelor like you do with a girl like that! If you'd really like to adopt one of the children, I might turn one of the boys over to you; but, somehow, I don't quite think that I could spare May. And I'm not sure she'd accept another father, notwithstanding the manifold advantages which might accrue to her. Fortune's illy divided in this world, is it not? Here you are, a bachelor, with a clear income of five thousand a year; and here am I, the father of an interesting family of six and your income divided by just about that number. No wonder I never can make both ends meet."

"I don't think you quite understand my proposition, Fred," responded the other, though a flush had risen to his usually pale face, and a scarcely perceptible tremor of excitement was in his voice. "It was natural, perhaps, that you should accept my meaning from a paternal standpoint; and I am well aware—believe me of the slight difference in our respective ages. But I didn't wish to adopt May as my daughter. I love her, and would win her for my wife."

"Your wife, man?" ejaculated Fabian, starting back in amaze. "Why, the child is scarcely out of the nursery, and you—you—Why, we were college chums together, Arnold!"

"I told you a moment since I was not forgetful of my age; but remember you married Fred, when you were twenty. May is eighteen and I am thirty-six—just double her age, but not too old to love her with a fervor a younger man might envy me. Fred, if I can gain her consent, I may have yours?"

Mr. Fabian outstretched his hand and grasped that of his friend.

"I can't realize it all in a minute, my dear boy, but I know no man to whom I would as soon intrust my darling. But can it be that she loves you, and I have been so blind as never to suspect?"

"I dare not believe she loves me, but I hope to win her love," answered Mr. Arnold, quietly, and then stepped out through the window on to the lawn.

A vivid blush overspread the girl's face as he approached.

"Down Carlo—down!" she commanded the dog, and advanced to meet him on the green velvety sward.

Was she unprepared for the earnest words which told her of his hope, and [illegible] the verdict rested with her?

[illegible] she evidenced no surprise, save [illegible] color deepened in her cheek [illegible] low "Yes!" which fell like a [illegible] heaven on his ear trembled [illegible]

[illegible] lovers were rarely alone, and Mr. Arnold's footing had always been so close and intimate—as one of the household—that there was little change.

True, he never came now without some rare and beautiful gift for May, but latterly she received these with a sort of petulance and tossed them the next moment carelessly aside.

Once, just before her wedding day, she burst into a passion of tears; but she would give him no explanation of their cause.

He remembered them, later, in connection with the arrival, that same afternoon, of a young soldier-cousin, who had been invited to the wedding and had obtained special leave to be present.

After dinner May and this cousin—a tall, splendid-looking fellow—strolled together out on the lawn.

As once before, Arnold and her father stood watching her.

"They look well together, do they not?" said the latter. "I used to fancy Will had a preference for May, but I don't think my acumen in such matters has proved itself very acute."

And with a light laugh he turned away.

But Arnold stood motionless, his eyes fixed on the two figures on the lawn. Standing there, he felt an old man. In that moment, May's acceptance of him appeared a sacrifice, but to give her up now—

He could not even carry out the thought.

Pshaw! What brightness could this penniless subaltern throw into her life? And her father had fancied only his preference for her, not hers for him.

He made a gesture, as if throwing off a burden, and walked out toward them. As he approached, the young soldier was speaking.

"It's driving me to desperation, May," were the words borne to his ear.

And as May turned to greet him, glistening tears were in the azure eyes.

Three days after she became his wife, and when the solemn vows were spoken her voice was clearer and more distinct than his.

Lieutenant Crosby bore his share in the ceremonies well, too. But never did Dick Arnold's glance fall on him without a shuddering recollection of the words he had heard him utter on the lawn.

But at last all was over, and May was his. How should he treat this beautiful, new found treasure? No sorrow, he swore to himself, should ever cast its shadow on her path. She should be always what she was now, a beautiful child.

Once, a few months after their marriage, a letter reached him at the breakfast table. He broke the seal, to find it a communication from his business manager, with detailed account of the failure of a large firm, and their own heavy loss thereby. It would be necessary for him to give the matter at once his own personal attention. It looked, too, the letter said, as though a panic was imminent.

Unconsciously he sighed deeply. In a moment May had sprung from her chair and was by his side.

"What is it Dick?" she asked.

"Nothing, darling!" he answered, cheerily.

The lovely lips pouted.

"Show me the letter," she said, and outstretched her hand.

He shook his head.

"It's business, dear," he explained.

"But it troubles you, Dick?"

"Your imagination, May."

All day the young wife was left alone and at night, when Dick returned from town, a worn, tired look, quite new to it, was on his face; but May asked him no more concerning it.

The next morning the single letter which the post-bag had was addressed to her. She glanced up from its perusal with flushed cheeks.

"Will Crosby has a six weeks' furlough!" she said, eagerly: "He writes that he is coming to spend part of it with us. You remember we invited him when we were married."

"Ah, I remember," assented her husband—he had almost forgotten this old suspicion during these happy months—"I am glad, dear, that his visit is timed just now, for though I had intended to take a long summer holiday, business, I find, will demand my attention in the city."

"Is anything wrong, Dick?"

"Wrong? Nonsense, child! Don't get such ideas in your pretty little head. What could be wrong?"

And rising, and kissing her as he passed, he went out of the room.

A few days later the expected guest arrived. When Arnold returned from London one evening, the two were standing together on the lawn, and, as a flash of lightning, his memory recalled to him the first time he had looked upon a similar picture.

A new brightness, a new gladness, was in May's face, too, as she came eagerly forward to greet him. A sudden sense of pain and loneliness crept about his heart. The day in town had been an unusually perplexing one. A crisis was pending in the near business future—a crisis which bid fair to be a commercial whirlwind—but he could disclose his anxieties to none, and least of all must his child-wife suspect them.

Yet, the effort to conceal them caused a strange constraint in all that he said or did. He no longer sought to be alone with May, until one day it came upon him like an inspiration that she, too, no longer sought him.

Lieutenant Crosby [illegible] weeks their guest [illegible] storm burst [illegible]

[illegible] the tide—a bankrupt.

Just the sum which [illegible] represented his wife's private fortune, but to touch that never entered his mind.

At least May was secured from future want, and he must leave to build up his shattered fortune in a new land. She had never loved him? He was sure of that; and latterly he had begun to realize that he had no right to tie her young life to his.

Worn and weary with these many thoughts he returned to his home. May greeted him almost indifferently, only the next moment to turn to young Crosby with her most radiant smile.

Arnold's face paled.

Yet what right had he to murmur? he told himself. Had he not sworn to possess her at at any cost? And was he not a ruined man! Crosby, the penniless subaltern, as he had called him, would have done better for her than that!

When dinner was ended he went into his library and closed the door. For a time he sat wrapped in thought. Perhaps an hour passed, when solitude grew unbearable.

He would rejoin his wife and their guest, he determined. To-morrow night—only to-morrow night—and May must know all. For the first time in his life he felt himself a coward! But to-night was yet his. To-night May neither knew or suspected the truth!

He rose and passed out into the drawing room, whose windows opened on the lawn. His footsteps made no sound on the carpeted floor, and he had reached the window, when something like a sob arrested his steps.

"May, I must speak!" said a voice he recognized as belonging to his guest. "Do you think I have been three weeks under this roof without discovering your secret? You are not happy. Your laughter, your gaiety, is forced. What is wrong? Do you fear to confide in me?"

"Wrong?" she answered, with tears in her eyes. "All is wrong, Will. What am I to my husband but a spoiled and petted child? Look at him! Do you fail to see the change these last few weeks have wrought in him? Yet, each time that I have striven to gain his confidence, he has shut me out from it and his heart. He has sent me from him as he would send a child to his dolls. He showers gifts upon me and fancies thus he buys my happiness. Am I, indeed, so little a woman that thus he satisfies my woman's hunger, my woman's heart? And I love him so madly, Will, that to know I have no part or portion in his real life is killing me! Always he has been my ideal, my hero! Do you think I could have sympathized in your trouble, Will, if I had none of my own? Often—often I have wished that all this splendor in which I live might be wiped away, and that Dick and I shared a cottage, that I might prove to him I was not a child, with new toys ever needed to comfort me."

Arnold waited to hear no more. The scales had fallen from his eyes. Conscience-stricken, he crept back to his library, while only two words burst from his lips. They were at once a thanksgiving and a prayer.

"Thank God!" he murmured; and now the morrow mattered naught to him

A few moments later, he stepped out on the porch.

"May," he said, "will your cousin pardon us if I ask you to stroll down to the lake with me? I have something of importance to say to you."

Instantly she rose, and slipped her hand within his arm.

"My darling," he began—and then the history of all these weeks was poured out before her. "To-morrow may see me a ruined man, little wife," he concluded; "but I have no fear of the future now, May, for I realize the word 'wife' holds a hitherto unknown definition. It means helpmeet and comforter."

The tears ran freely now from the azure eyes, but they were tears of happiness, and her heart sang for very joy.

"And has my money gone, Dick?" she asked, at last, when all was clear to her.

"No, dear; of course not. That is a sacred fund, and must have no risk in its investment."

"Yet to-morrow it will pay this debt," she said, and the man started at the clear decision and determination in her tone.

"We will sink or swim together, Dick—you and I. Dick, darling," she added, you owe me some reparation; let this be your penance."

And she gained her way.

"Then, after all, May, Crosby could not have won you from me in an equal fight?" he asked, as they drew near the house. "Do you know, darling, my confession is not complete until I acknowledge the jealousy he has caused me?"

"Will?" She laughed merrily now, and the laugh was nowise forced. "He has been in love with my dearest friend, and I have been the confidant of both. Her parents have opposed it, because he is in the army, but I think they are becoming gradually converted to the cause."

And so the last cloud vanished from the [illegible] and the commercial atmosphere [illegible] simultaneously. [illegible] the day and Dick Arnold [illegible] stronger and better for [illegible]

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, in which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

The Strongest Argument

after all, the best test of acceptable service on the part of any merchant is the number of permanent customers he secures. Some clothing houses assume that "A bird in the hand is worth two in tha bush," and take chances of their customers' return after they had once been stuck "stuck." But alas! The supply of new customers finally runs out, and it is only a question of time when the artiful dodger is left no more lambs to shear. We have a strong and growing constituency to whom we refer with pride. Many of our customers have dealt with and sent their friends to be clothed by us. The verdict is that our Men's and Boy's Clothing is reliable, and we lay more stress upon that than upon any other feature of our business. Downright honesty is what we insist upon, both in process or satisfaction and treatment of our customers. Of course we make mistakes; who don't? But the person does not live who can truthfully assert when informed of a fault in our merchandise, we have ever refused to make it good. We solicit your patronage for Mens' and Boys' Reliable Clothing, upon the basis of square dealing throughout price and guaranteed, at

But a million stamps are a great many, you know, and it is hardly likely that she will reach the goal.

THE people of Paris are thoroughly aroused regarding the Tonquin trouble. It is felt that the time for reflection is past, and the only course for France is to act vigorously and swiftly. The latest news from China is that 6,000 troops, armed in the manner of European troops, have already arrived at the Tonquin frontier, and the feeling throughout China is intensely hostile to the French

IT is estimated that 150,000 people passed over the new East river bridge between New York and Brooklyn during the first twenty-four hours. In the afternoon 5000 persons crossed the bridge hourly. Of course in the early morning and between the hours of five and seven in the evening the rush was greater. Many people loitered about the bridge, viewing the harbor. The receipts of the first twenty-four hours were upwards of $1700.

THE loss of the steamer on the Connecticut river and the confusion and to the uncertainty as to the names of her passengers emphasize anew the demand that the officers of every steamboat carrying passengers shall leave a duplicate list ashore. On the ocean steamer this rule is followed invariably, and it should be on every steamer. It would occasion passengers no inconvenience if they were required to register their names before boarding a steamboat.

CONGRESSMEN MILLER, the forwarding agent of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, determined yesterday to test the right of the company to seek immigrant patronage at Castle Garden. He secured the immigrants who arrived by the steamships from Havre, from Hamburg, and from Glasgow, and personally supervised their transfer to his road, in order that the agents of the other trunk lines might not get them away from him. The company filed an application for privileges in Castle Garden last Thursday.

A TELEGRAM announces the death of Gen Crook and his party. The information, which is claimed came from good sources, is to the effect that the scouts with Gen. Crook's party mutinied when in the heart of the Sierra Madres and massacred nearly the entire command, the General himself being among the victims. Army officers on this side of the line discredit the report. Later reports say that he is not only alive but making it hot for the red skins. Rumors are current that a second engagement between General Crook's command and the Apaches took place Friday and Friday night on the western borders of Chihuahua and that the Indians were routed with severe loss.

THE tendency is, when the Chinese once enter any trade or manufacture, is to monopolize it. More than ten years ago the Celestials in San Francisco had secured control of the pork trade, and now every pound of fresh pork in the city passes through their hands, and they frequently impose heavy fines on hog growers who attempt to sell direct to white butchers. In the same way they have a practical monopoly of the washing throughout the state, while in that city they have now control of the manufacture of cigars, and are rapidly gaining control of the manufacture of boots and shoes, brooms, underwear, jumpers and overalls.

Mexico has called a special school meeting to consider the question of establishing a Union Free School. The village is now divided into three school districts.

Judge Huntington is understood to say that he will work for Gifford as he labored for Greenfield. He believes the old man ought not to be hung, and feels assured he shall be able to obtain a new trial.

Robert Adams who was employed on Hunter's new building in Oswego fell from the ceiling to the ground, Thursday, a distance of forty feet. His skull was fractured and his back and arms broken. He died soon after the workmen reached him. He leaves a wife and two children.

Death of Jacob Amos in Syracuse.

Last Saturday morning Jacob Amos died at his home in Syracuse. For some days he had been lying in a critical condition, owing to injuries sustained from one of his horses. Soon after the accident arrangements were made for a visit to Germany which were frustrated by the attack of sickness which ended fatally. Mr. Amos was born near Durmetz-Muehlacker April 18, 1818, in the kingdom of Wurtemburg. At the age of seventeen he left his home for the province of Alsace, where he learned the trade of a butcher. When 21 years old he sailed for America from a port in Holland and arrived in New York city friendless and all but penniless. Gradually he made his way to Rochester viewing on his route, from a packet boat's deck, the village of Syracuse, in which a future prosperity beyond his brightest dreams awaited him. Prevailing depressions in the commercial world made it difficult for Mr. Amos to eke out even a scanty existence. For a time he found employment as a common laborer on canal work near Rochester. In the winter he turned his hand to his trade and made sausage which he carried around in a basket, the capacity of which was ample to meet the demand of his trade. Returning during the following summer to Syracuse, Mr. Amos obtained employment during the two seasons as a salt boiler, and thereafter hired out to Robert Allen in whose market he spent seven years. At the close of this engagement he married and, with his wife, took possession of a little hotel which stood where Anderson's packing house now stands on North Salina street. In 1863, he purchased four stores on West Water street and converted them into a mill having a daily capacity of 125 barrels of flour and 30 kegs of farina. Not long afterwards he purchased a flour mill in Baldwinsville. In 1876 Mr. Amos took into partnership with himself his two sons, C. L. Amos and Jacob Amos jr. The business soon became too large for the mills owned by the firm, whose members purchased, in 1878, the Barker mill on West Water street. In the revolution in the manufacture of flour, about two years ago, Amos & Sons were among the first to introduce the Hungarian roller system, with which the two mills of the firm were equipped at an expense of nearly $75,000. Since that time the mill in this city and that of Baldwinsville have been running with a daily capacity of 800 barrels of flour. The new process, it is said, proved so profitable that the enormous expense of fitting both mills was earned in less than six months. To the details of this vast business, Mr. Amos gave closest attention until ill health brought with it enforced retirement.

Mr. Amos was well known in this community and for a long time past has purchased his barrels of W. S. Nelson & Co. in this village. He was a generous man, never forgetting the day of small things, always lending a helping hand to those in need. He was a most devoted husband and father, always studying the happiness and prosperity of his family. His children are Charles L. Amos, Jacob Amos jr., Mrs. Jacob Miller, Mrs. Henry Peters and Miss Amelia Amos, all of whom were residents of Syracuse.

THE Hop Bitters company of Rochester which has made many efforts to bring Hanlon & Courtney together in a square race, has again come to the front. The officers of the company yesterday assured a representative of Edward Hanlon and Charles E. Courtney that the company would give a prize of $5000 for a single scull race between the two oarsmen, providing that Courtney would give bonds in the sum of $10,000 to row the race honestly and to the best of his ability. It is evident that the company has little faith in the honesty of Courtney.

CONDUCTOR FROST.

Of the Mt. McGregor Railroad, Saratoga —The Best Fellow that Ever Lived.

"Well, sir, I've been up the Mt. McGregor railroad," were the first words your reporter heard when he passed through the gate of the Saratoga depot. "Mt. McGregor Railroad! Where is that? I thought." I looked about me and saw the hurrying crowd—saw the United States Hotel looking as of old. But the Mt. McGregor Railroad was a new feature. The top of this mountain is graced with two charming lakes. Looking about us from the one point we catch a glimpse of the Catskills. There of the Hudson. Here of Lake George. There of the Green Mountains. "Charming spot," was the one opinion.

The road is finely equipped. "That's conductor Frost, the best fellow that ever lived," said a man, pointing to a jolly full faced individual collecting tickets. I was introduced. "Where do you get all this glow of health, Conductor?" "Well, sir, I'm looking hearty and feeling hearty because I've formed an attachment for Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Honestly I think it's the best medicine ever given to a man. I have recommended it again and again, every time with the same results. Why, there's Ed Welsh of the Adelphi Hotel (his home is 156 W. 34th street, N. Y.) he came up here and the change of air and water had a fearful effect upon him. His face broke out in blotches and pimples. I had seen the FAVORITE REMEDY used. I told him to get a bottle. He did so, and in three days's time the rash and fever entirely disappeared. It seemed to cleanse the blood with such rapidity. I have recommended Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY to a great many persons who were billious and troubled with stagnant blood. FAVORITE REMEDY never fails to purify and strengthen. I know this to be a fact."

PARISH—Last Tuesday evening the school district in which the village is situated, was organized into a Union Free School District. Four fifths of the voters present voted in favor of the organization. The Board of Education consists of five persons, J. S. Ludington, was elected for one year; C. S. Talcott and Hosea Pickens for two years; H. A. Mosher and Edwin Palmer for three years. The Board have organized and have chosen W. H. Baker treasurer and W. H. Marsh collector.—The April make of our cheese made at our factory was sold to R. H. Baker of Mexico last Monday for 12¼cts per pound.

OCCASIONAL.

John R. Walters, who was tried for the murder of Henry Moerck, and who was found guilty of manslaughter in the third degree, was brought for sentence before Justice Merwin at the opening of Court in Syracuse Monday afternoon. The proceedings in the court room were witnessed by a crowd of spectators. In making answer to the usual questions put by the Clerk, Walters said that he was 57 years old and a farmer by occupation. Replying to Justice Merwin's question, the prisoner stated that he had nothing to say before the sentence of the Court was pronounced. Walters was then sentenced to a term of four years at hard labor in Auburn prison.

Granby Centre.

EDITOR FULTON TIMES:

Mr. D. L. Simmons, special agent for Johnsburg Granite Company made a contract with me March last to erect monument no. 533. On Wednesday last Mr. Simmons came on with the monument and placed in Granby Center cemetery. The contract was executed fully in all respects and as to material and workmanship from base to crown, I regard it not only as an ornament but an honor to the company by whom it was manufactured. J. A SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

A New and Most Iportant Theory on One of the Most Vital Questions of the Day.

If anyone had informed Queen Elizabeth in her palmiest days that she could have been seated in her palace in London and coverse with Sir Walter Raleigh in his North Carolina home; receiving a reply from him in an hours time, she would have declared it to be a miracle. And yet, had they lived to the present day, this apparent miracle would have most readily have been witnessed and not seem at all strange or unnatural. The truth is, new principles are coming into existence, and the operation of many laws unknown in the past is being fully understood in the present. In no way does this fact come more forcibly to the mind than in the care and treatment of the human body. Millions of people have died in the past ages from some insignificant or easily controlled cause, which is thoroughly understood now and readily handled. Consumption during the entire past has been considered an incurable disease. And yet it is demonstrated that it has been and can be cured, even after it has had a long run. Dr Felix Oswald has just contributed a notable article on the subject to the Popular Science Monthly. He regards consumption as pulmonary scrofula. The impurities of the blood produce a constant irritation in the lungs, thus destroying their delicate tissues and causing death. His theory shows conclusively that consumption is a blood disease. It has its origin primilary in a deranged condition of the kidneys or liver, and the only two organs of the body, aside from the lungs that purify the blood. When the kidneys or liver are diseased they are in a sore or lacerated state which communicates poison to every ounce of blood that passes through them. This poisonous blood circulates through the system and comes to the lungs, where the poison is deposited, causing decomposition in the finely formed cells of the lungs. Any diseased part of the body has contaminating power, and yet the blood which is the life of the system is brought into direct contact with these poisoned organs, thus carrying contagion to all parts of the body. Bishop Jesse T. Peck, D. D., L. L. D., whose death has been so recently regretted, is reported to have died of pnuemonia, which medical authorities affirm indicates a diseased condition of the kidneys. It is well-known, moreover, that for several years he has been the victim of severe kidney trouble, and the pneumonia which finally terminated his life was only the last result of the previous blood poisoning. The deadly matter which is left in the lungs by the impure blood clogs up and finally chokes the patient. When this is accomplished rapidly it is called pneumonia or quick consumption; when slowly, consumption, but in any event it is the result of impure blood, caused by diseased kidneys and liver.

These are facts of science and vouched for by all the leading physicians of the day. They show the desirability—nay the necessity, of keeping the important organs in perfect condition, not only to to insure health but also to escape death. It has been fully shown, to the satisfaction of nearly every unprejudice mind, that Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure is the noly known remedy that can cure and keep in health the great blood-puryfying organs of the body. It acts directly upon these members, healing all ulcers which may have formed in them and placing them in a condition to purify and not poison the blood. This is no idle statement nor false theory. Mr W. C. Beach, foreman of the Buffalo, N. Y., Rubber Type foundry, was given up to die by both physicians and friends. For four years he had a terrible cough, night sweats, chills and all the well known symptoms. He spent a season south and found no relief. He says: "I finally concluded to try Warner's Safe Cure and in three months [illegible] health can be restored.

A very interesting and impartial discussion of both sides of the Mormon question may be found in our letter from "J. T. S." in another column.

The social given by the ladies of the M. E. church last Friday evening was well attended and a pleasant time enjoyed by all present. Receipts about thirty dollars.

The S. S. Teachers' Meeting of the M. E. church will be held for the present at the close of the prayer meeting, Thursday evenings. Prof. Boothby has charge of the class and explains the lesson in a very instructive and interesting manner.

The Presbyterian church was filled to its utmost capacity by an appreciative audience to listen to the memoriam sermon rendered by Rev. J. S. Riggs. The G. A. R. attended in a body. There were many who tried to obtain admittance but were unable to do so.

Miles W. Cheney of Granby Centre was married to Miss Lida E. Eastman on the 14th inst. in Buffalo by the Rev. E. E. Clevers. Mr. Cheney is well known in Fulton and has a host of friends. The Times wishes them a prolonged life of happiness.

The pupils of Mrs. F. D. VanWagenen are preparing for a musical entertainment to be given at the close of the commencement of Falley Seminary next month. Mrs. VanWagenen is an instructor of much ability, and there is no doubt the event will be very interesting.

E. F. Johnson, of Elgin, Ill., was in town Saturday viewing the water privileges. He says the water power is the best in the State, and if he could receive sufficient encouragement, he would build an agricultural implement factory. Rome has offered him a building site. Where are our capitalists now who wish to improve the town?

The wheat in W. S. Nelson & Co's. mill has been purchased by W. G. Gage & Co. It is said that the mill will be closed, and if it be a fact, it will be regretted by every Fultonian. The site is one of the best for manufacturing purposes, and affords as good water power as there is in the State. Mr. Nelson will probably go to Chicago.

Rev. W. F. Markham was called to Oswego last Sabbath to attend the funeral of the mother of Supt. VanHorne of the R. W. & O. RR. He will occupy his pulpit as usual next Sunday. Dr. C. W. Bennett of Syracuse University supplied the pulpit in the morning and preached a very able and scholarly sermon. The Dr. is a very effective pulpit orator.

Prof. F. K. Jones and some of his lady students broke the monotony of the daily routine of studies and recitations at Dist. No. 2 last Thursday afternoon by giving a complimentary musicale to the faculty and students of the school in the chapel of the building. The different parts of the program were rendered in a manner creditable to both teacher and pupils. The entertainment closed with a grand concert march by F. K. Jones entitled "Union School, No. 2," and dedicated to Prof. Boothby.

THE PEOPLE ASTONISHED.

Many people are astonished when [illegible] the wide circulation of [illegible] Oil. There is hardly [illegible] in the country that does [illegible] remedy upon its shelves. [illegible] found it is a good thing [illegible]

[illegible] Joseph Francis [illegible] local editor of The Fulton [illegible] since December 15th, 1881, [illegible] his connection with The Times last Wednesday. During his stay with us he has made an excellent editor, and worked faithfully in that capacity. The discharge of Mr. Francis from The Times created considerable excitement [illegible] for the reason that Mr. Francis [illegible] story that we were paid $200 by Willard Johnson to discharge him. That statement is false, as we have never received one cent from Mr. Johnson and will not. Mr. Francis also says that Mr. Johnson will dictate The Times as to its politics, and we wish to say to the public that we run our own business and will not be dictated by any living person. The Times will still continue to be a brief chronicler of the happenings of the day.

"The world moves on" (in the language of Francis) and so does The Times notwithstanding Francis is no longer connected with the paper.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES

under which Francis was discharged are as follows:—

A trustee asked us why the proceedings of the Board was not published as furnished, and who changed them. We informed him that Mr. Francis changed them. The next day (Wednesday) Mr. Frances asked Mr. Wheeler if he told the trustee so and so; he replied that he did, at that moment Francis got angry and indulged in profane and indecent epithets, calling Mr. Wheeler names, and especially a name that reflects upon the character of his mother. The indecent language used by Francis was in the presence of the employees in the office, and Mr. Wheeler's sister, which was more than Miss Wheeler could bear.

These are positively the facts under which Francis was discharged.

It has also been the rumor on the streets that hundreds of persons were stopping The Times. There have only twelve persons discontinued the paper, and we have received nine new subscribers.

Now we have stated the facts in the case, and would like to ask the public if we are compelled to stand such abuse?

Organ Concert.

The organ concert given last Wednesday evening, at the Presbyterian church under the direction of Prof. Flagler, proved to be one of the finest musical entertainments ever given in Fulton. The evening was unfavorable, but, notwithstanding the rain a fair sized audience gathered to listen for the first time to the new organ, one of the best make of Steer & Turner, Massachusetts. The wide reputation, as an organist, which preceded Professor Flagler was fully sustained in the fine execution he gave on this occasion. Twice he was compelled to respond to the hearty applause of an appreciative audience and under his hands the organ gave forth its richest harmonies.

Miss Kopp and Mr. Baldwin were warmly welcomed and at each appearance enthusiastically encored. "Hear ye, Israel," from Elijah, by Miss Kopp, was received with delight by her listeners and seemed to be the favorite selection which she sang. "Come unto me," a solo by Mr. Baldwin, elicited another hearty encore. The programme was a fine one and so finished in its presentation that it is impossible to make any special mention of the selections. It is to be regretted that more were not present. Miss Kopp is a great favorite wherever she appears and it is to be hoped she will soon favor Fulton with another visit. "Music and Drama" announce her appearance in concert at an early date in Utica under the direction of Prof. Lombard.

Ingratitude.

"Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal I serv'd my King, he would not in my age have left me naked to my enemies."
Henry VIII.

The history of ingratitude is as ancient as the world itself. It was one of the Devil's emisaries to conquer a place in the human heart, and will doubtless be one of the last of the brood to be dislodged. A man possessed of this evil trait, has a conveniently treacherous memory, or a very hateful disposition; he is regardful neither of the ties of friendship or of blood; he is pitiless, cruel, cowardly, faithless—altogether despicable. The ingrate is found everywhere; in walks of life, among all conditions of men; in politics and in trade. Everywhere he is known—every where despised. The following rhyme was received yesterday on a postal card by a Fultonian, as a receipe for a bad cold:—

Rock and rye
You must try
For a cold,
Or you will die,
But if this should surely fail,
And your face begin to pale,
Take yourself into your bed,
Put cold water on your head,
Wrap yourself up very warm
So that you'll receive no harm,
Mustard plaster upon your chest,
"Manson's" mustard is the best,
Eating everything you like,
Quail on toast, roasted pike.
For the addage says, of old,
Starve a fever, stuff a cold.

BROOKLYN BRIDGE OPENED.

The Trustees Resign Control and Turn It Over to the Cities—Completion of a Work Begun Fourteen Years Ago.

The great Brooklyn bridge has been building for the past fourteen years was opened last Thursday. The day was perfect and great crowds were attracted to both cities from all over the state. Crowds of men and boys began gathering in City Hall Park in New York and about the entrance to the bridge as early as nine o'clock.

The occasion was made a universal holiday in Brooklyn; business was given up and all the principal buildings and many houses were elaborately decorated. In New York there was less enthusiasm but still a good deal of the holiday spirit prevailed. Large numbers of people flocked around the termini of the bridge all the afternoon. The President, Governor Cleveland and other guests were escorted by the 7th Regiment to the bridge, on which they were met by the Brooklyn city officials and the 23d regiment. Salutes were fired while was crossing the river. The formal exercises were held in the Brooklyn terminal station. Vice-President Kingsley of the bridge trustees, presented the structure, and it was received by the mayors of Brooklyn and New York. Orations were delivered by Congressman Abram S. Hewitt and the Rev. Dr. Richard S. Storrs. A fine display of fireworks was given on the bridge in the evening. The President and Governor after dining with Mayor Low, held a reception at the Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Dinah John Dead.

A large number of the residents of this village will remember an aged squaw, named "Aunt Dinah," who made periodical trips to this village from the Onondaga reservation. She sold beads and other fancy articles and had many friends in this and neighboring villages. She died in Syracuse on Saturday and was supposed to be about 109 years of age. Her funeral took place Sunday. She never learned to speak English very fluently, but always succeeded in getting along. She was of pure Onondaga blood and as straight as a rod and very active, always making her trips on foot. For the last few years she has not been out much and for two years past has been blind. Every Indian of the Reservation loved her and at her funeral many of the men shed tears.

Presented With a Purse.

The Rev. Mr. Moyses who has been chaplain of the Fulton Fire Department for the past four years was invited to call at the engine house last Thursday evening. About half past eight the members assembled, and were called to order, after which Mr. S B Mead arose, made a few remarks, and presented Mr. Moyses with a purse of $25 in behalf of the members as a token of love and friendship. The reverend gentleman immediately responded with tears in his eyes, saying he was completely surprised, and spoke of the many pleasant happenings which had occurred during the time he had been connected with the department and of the ties which bound him to Fulton. He then bade them good-bye and wished them prosperity in the future. Mr. Moyses left for Adams Friday morning. We congratulate the people of Adams on having such an accession to their midst, while at the same time we regret to lose him.

Learned a Lesson.

A gentleman stepped into Amdursky's new clothing house Saturday and looked around at the mammoth stock. Mr. Amdursky approached him and asked if he wished to buy a suit of clothes.

"No, sir," he replied, "I buy my clothes in Syracuse. There I find them cheaper I think."

Mr Amdursky asked him to take a seat and proved conclusively to him that he was in error; that suits he was selling for $15 were being sold in Syracuse for $22 and so on, and gave his reasons as follows:

First—Rents in Syracuse are fabulous; some stores paying as high as six thousand dollars per annum.

Second—Clerk hire and advertising is another enormous drainage.

Third—Living in the city costs twice what it does in Fulton.

"Now, my friend," said Mr Amdursky "where does the profits come from? Country people pay the expenses. They are attracted thither by blow and bluster only to be fleeced." I will sell you a fine fitting, all wool, stylish and wel made suit for $15. I buy at the same market Syracuse dealers do and have in many respects a much better stock. My rents are reasonable, clerk hire reasonable and goods first class."

I believe you," said the stranger, "and from henceforth will buy my clothing at home."

The dedication of the Presbyterian church will take place June 15. The Rev. J. Upson, D. D., L. L. D., will be the officiating clergyman.

A new time table will go into effect on the N. Y. O. & W. next Monday, which will be more accommodating to the people of this community.

Father Kierney was summoned to Cortland this morning by telegraph consequently the high mass to which the G. A. R. was invited was postponed.

The Van Doren hose of Phœnix gives a grand hop at Howard Opera House in that village this evening. The companies from this place have been invited to attend.

A new trial has been ordered by the general term for Sam Williams the murderer of Hall at Sodus Point. The trial will take place at Lyons, commencing next Monday.

The post office will be open to-day from 4 to 5:30 p. m. The banks and many places of business are closed, and with the usual display of flags our streets have a holiday appeauance.

Lyman H. Patterson, clerk of the village board of this village appeared before the board of trustees with counsel last evening to show cause why he should not be removed for misconduct. Mr. Howe, his attorney made a few remarks upholding Mr. Patterson in what he had done, but it seemed to be determined on the part of three trustees and the president to remove Mr. Patterson. Mr. Howe presented each of the men who were opposed to Patterson with an injunction signed by the county judge to prohibit them from taking action in regard to it. Notwithstanding the injunction Patterson was removed just the same. If we are informed correctly, these members are liable to be arrested, and a heavy fine imposed for contempt of court.

[illegible] object of special attention to those who feel interested in the correction of abuses in our social system. That the error into which the ardent faith of the Mormon people have led them is a grievous one will probably be conceded by all; however as to the best means necessary to wipe this foul blot from the otherwise fair land of Utah before her admission into the sisterhood of states there are many conflicting opinions. As the question has been made one of special legislation, and clergymen and politicians both high and low have delivered themselves exhaustively thereon, it might not be out of order if some of the little fishes and the small fry should have their say. I have been thrown among this people not a little, traveled in their company, conversed with them upon Mormonism in all its phases, attended their meetings and listened to an exposition of their doctrines, and have arrived at certain conclusions. No other sect accepts scripture as literally as they do; none other are willing to stand so unequivocally upon every sentence of holy writ as they are; but few if any others are willing to attest their devotion to their church to the extent of yielding up cheerfully and smilingly the one-tenth of their earnings every year as they do. It will probably be acknowledged by most of those who have considered the question carefully that if there is one sect that has more bibles upon which to base their faith than any or every other, it is unquestionably the Latter Day Saints. But as to whether the book refered to may be accepted as an infallable standard of appeal upon all questions of a religious or moral character, is one that does not fall within the province of this article. Does the organic law of this country authorize Congress, as long as Utah remains a territory to set aside all of the privileges inseperably belonging to territorial government, to appoint a commission to pass upon the eligibility of voters, the manner of conducting elections, and in short to usurp every one of the reserved and guaranteed rights of a people to local self government? If such a right exists with regard to Utah it certainly does with every other territory. I think any fair minded person upon careful consideration will recognize legislation of this kind as tending to establish a very dangerous precedent. It will be a sad day for the government when it disfranchises whole sects because some of the members indulge in criminal practices. The founders of the Republic made religious liberty one of the chief corner stones of the American Union; they prohibited all religious tests and placed every creed on the broad platform of universal tolerance. To disfranchise a Mormon to-day because he is a Mormon means that to-morrow you disfranchise a Catholic because he is one, and a Methodist the next day because he refuses to become a Presbyterian and so on to the end of the chapter. But should Congress devise no means to disabuse Utah of the disgrace that tends to give the whole nation a bad smell. Necessarily it becomes its duty to afford some relief. Suppose it should disorganize Utah altogether, take away all territorial questions, legalize all marriages up to a certain date for it will be readily seen that the complication likely to arise would render it unwise to annul those already contracted, and punish all plural ones after that time by the most severe penalties that follow the crime of bigamy anywhere. I believe that such a law would be secretly welcomed with pleasure by nine-tenths of the Mormon people themselves including many in authority. It has been preached there for nearly forty years, it has concerned the whole people directly or indirectly, and the leaders think they cannot abandon the position now without stulification. But they could all submit to the inevitable; and I am well satisfied that nearly the whole of them would be secretly delighted by the enactment of a law that it would be impossible to resist. In fact I have heard many of them say as much. Ask any intelligent Mormon if he thinks polygamy will survive fifty years and he will answer, No. It stands to reason men can bear almost anything better than that their children should be dishonored and in future years look back upon them as the cause and with good and sufficient reason. It is this feeling that causes so many boys and girls in Utah to wonder why they have been born to be pitied and their mothers scorned.

There are certain instincts of the human heart that cannot be uprooted. Not only are the births of the sexes equal but in every true womans soul, the feeling that is stronger than every other is to have the undivided affection of the man she loves best. No sophistry and no vice can uproot this desire. It is seen manifesting itself every day even among those who have abandoned all hope of ever again being considered reputable. This state of things exists notwithstanding the brutal teachings of the priests who rule them and from whose influence it is so difficult to break away. By all means let something be done to redeem the people of Utah, as brave and generous a class as ever lived. But in the attempt we should not in obedience to fanatical religionists or designing demagogues, many of whom might apply with credit to themselves the advice given to the heathen Saints pursue a course in violence to constitutional law or that does discredit to our own understanding.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

There was a very large attendance at the second meeting of the Syracuse Dairymen's Board of Trade Monday afternoon. Twenty-nine cheese factories were registered, offering 1,288 boxes of cheese. Sales were light, ruling price about 11½ cents.

AT UTICA.

It seemed to be the expectation among salesmen that the market would be somewhat better Monday than it was a week ago. But buyers argued that the New York quotations was the same with a posibility that it would go lower during the week, and they were not disposed to take much risk. Dispatches received from New York during the afternoon claimed that the ruling price ought not to go above 11¼ cents, the cable being off one shilling and the prospect being for a lower price the last of the week. Such advices did not tend to stimulate the market much, and at the close quite a number of salesmen were disappointed, who calculated on ⅝ being the ruling price.

Transactions were as follows: "Thirteen lots, 690 boxes, at 11¼ cents; 87 lots 4,810 boxes, 11½; 7 lots, 542 boxes, at 11⅝ cents; 3 lots small cheese, 305 boxes, at 11¾ cents; 7 lots, also small, 155 boxes, at 11⅞ cents; and 2 lots 202 boxes, at private terms. Sales 6,704 boxes; commissions, 1,106 boxes; Total, 7,810 boxes.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

Salesmen come to market Monday with the expections of securing an advance over last week's prices, knowing that cheese went out in New York so nicely last week, and the morning's market here of farm dairy and a few home trade factories strengthened their belief. But buyers received the telegrams during the middle of the day which chilled the hopes of elated salesmen and prices finally settled to about the same rates paid last week. The market is, however, stronger at these figures. Quality of stock is improving, the most of the skims being gone. The sales in the list were, we believe white cheese, the leading price for colored stock being 11¾ cents. Following were the transactions:

"A BLESSING IN DISGUISE,"

484 Adelphi St, Brooklyn, N. Y.,
March 29, 1881.

No family should be without Allcock's porous plasters; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficiency far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and know them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint, bronchitis, neuralgia, lumbago, inflammation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness, and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weaknesses, they have no equal. I have never yet found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with Brandreth universal life-giving and life-healing Pills, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good sound health.

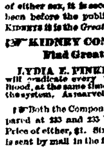
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a For Man & Beast thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

How the Affair was Conducted—Story of an old Sailor now Living on a boat on the Shore of New Jersey.

An old man who has been a Comanche chief, who has eaten poi and drank rum on familiar terms with King Kamehameha, of the Sandwich Islands, and who took a prominent part in a South American revolution, is now living alone in a small dismasted schooner that lies on the shore of Communipaw, Jersey City. He is between 65 and 70 years of age but is erect and powerful. His features are regular and handsome, his hair hangs in long curls over his shoulders, and a fierce-looking mustache gives him a foreign appearance. A reporter of the New York Sun found him in the cabin of his boat preparing his midday meal. He consented to give an account of his extraordinary career, but requested that his name should not be published.

"I was born," he said, "in Rhode Island, but the date of that event has never been fixed to my satisfaction. I have been told that it was August 22d 1815, but I think it was earlier than that. At all events I lost both my parents while a child, and in my seventh year was sent to the poorhouse. I remained there two years, when I was indentured to Dr Homes. At fourteen I ran away from him, and spent the next four years in tramping around the country. At the end of that period, while at St Louis, I found an English scientific party who were about to set out on an exploring expedition in the west. They were led by two middle aged gentlemen, who were known to me as the doctor and the professor. I never learned their names. We wandered over the country in quest of curiosities until we had reached what is now Arizona. After we had pitched our camp one night on the prairie by the shores of a river, two strangers rode in and asked for shelter. We harbored them. Before daylight the next morning the camp was aroused by a shrill war-hoop that was caught up and repeated by a hundred voices. We sprang to our feet and grasped our fire arms. We could see nothing in the darkness, and for a moment everything was still. Then the cries of the Indians broke out again, they fired a volley of arrows and a few shots at us, and then charged down upon us. We resisted as well as we could, but were speedily overpowered. The savages bound those of us who were not killed, and rode off with us to their village. There they had a grand war dance, and burned the doctor and professor at the stakes.

I, too, was bound to the stake, and the dry brushwood was piled about to be set on fire. The warriors gathered about me to witness my death. The son of a chief was among the spectators. He had been wounded by one of our rifles and was supposed to be dying. The braves carried him on a litter into the circle of red-skins around me, so that his death might be rendered pleasant by the sight of my tortures. I perceived that he had been wounded and that he was clumsily bandaged. Now, while with the doctor, I had picked up a little knowledge of surgery and bone-setting, and the idea struck me that I might now put my knowledge to account. I therefore made such signs as I could, for I did not understand the Indian language, to indicate that I could benefit the wounded young prince. Some of the warriors guessed my meaning, and, after conferring with the head men they released me. Then I went to work. Kneeling on the grass by the suffering man's litter and surrounded by a group of savages, I began my examination. I found a shoulder dislocated and a bullet wound that was rapidly becoming inflamed for want of proper attention. With trembling hands and a beating heart—for any false or suspicious movement would have been the signal for my immediate death—I probed for the bullet and extracted it. Then I cleaned and dressed the wound and re-set the shoulder bone. When this was done the wounded man showed that he was much relieved. The warriors about him grunted their approval of the operation, and I was led off to a lodge, which they made me understand was to be my abode for the present. Every day I was taken to the wounded man to wash and dress his wound. When he had recovered sufficiently to be about again there was great rejoicing in the tribe.

A few days later I was the principal actor in a ceremony the nature of which I did not understand at the time. The ceremony was my marriage to a sister of the young prince. The old chief had taken a fancy to me, and had determined to adopt me and give me his daughter for a wife. On the morning of the day fixed for the marriage there was a great stir in camp. The braves put on all thair finery in honor of the event. When I was awakened at an early hour. I saw that something important was going on, but I hadn't the faintest idea what it was. I was conducted to the old Chief's lodge by a procession of warriors. When we reached it the Chief came out and pounded me on the top of the head with his fists. When he got through his squaw slipped up behind me and went through the same performance. Then each member of the family repeated the same operation. I was ignorant of what it all meant, and supposed that it was preparatory to burning me to death at the stake. When the girl that was to be my wife had finished beating me she kissed me, and then all hands danced around us in the wildest style. For two days the festivities were kept up, and thus I was married without knowing anything about it. I received a full set of Indian clothes and weapons, which I still have, and was named Mushum Koptaka. That means "prickly grass of the mountains." That name was selected for me because when I was captured, I had in my belt a specimen of thistle, which was a rare plant in that country. The Indians, having no name for it, called it prickly grass of the mountains. I lived with the tribe for four years, being treated as if I was the chief's son. The savages were then a very different race from what they are to-day. They were [illegible], honest and sober. [illegible] When [illegible] I was the medicine man [illegible]

WALPOLE, N. H., Jan. [illegible]

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass. Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in Hood's SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,
SARAH C. WHITTIER.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.
W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

[illegible] destined to play a great part in the [illegible] of the [illegible] and will [illegible] reach dimensions equal to those of New York. In California nature presents itself in grander forms, and the works which man has undertaken, are, for boldness and design, equal to those of nature. Both city and state left upon the minds of all strong impressions of wonder and delight. The Mormon Tabernacle in Salt Lake City is by far the largest building that I have ever seen designed for the meeting of public assemblages. We were told that 12,000 people could be seated in it. The Temple is a small building for one of such pretensions, and has no architectural character worthy of attention. I was somewhat amused to learn that the Mormons had had the usual fortune of communities which undertake the construction of public buildings, and that their temple had cost in proportion to its size as much as the Albany capitol. We found a very sharp conflict going on between the Mormon and Gentile populations. We met the Governor of the territory and General McCook, the commander of the United States forces. Both of them told us that they had no association, and not only no association but no communication with the Mormons.

"What sort of a travelling companion did you find Mr. Dana?"

"He and myself are old friends and I have always found him an agreeable companion. He is a capital traveller, of unfailing good spirits, full of energy and with the lively appreciation of the pleasures of travel."

"Did you find the time hang heavily on your hands on the train?"

"No, I don't think we had a monotonous hour. You must remember that there were three ladies in the party. Mr. Dana and myself passed a large part of the time in playing the very difficult and complicated game of poker, a game of cards which we hold the best ever devised for two persons to play. Between March 27 and May 11 we played 313 games of which I won 149, and Mr Dana, 164.

The magical cure of colds and coughs, by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, is indisputable.

The Squatter Caught.

The descendant of the old squatter can be very accommodating at times, but the time must be favorable. His evasion, even of the simplest questions, illustrates a peculiar humor, repaints a fancy handed down to him. The other day, while the proprietor of a very retired piece of badly improved property was standing at his gate, a gentleman rode up and pleasantly bid the farmer good morning.

"Wait'll I fix this yoke bow," he replied, taking up a piece of steer harness and beginning to whittle upon it, "an' I'll yo' interrogation pints. After whittling awhile longer, he added, "How are ye?"

"I'd like to get some information—"

"Ain't got none. Never went to school a day of my life, but my son Nick, is a snorter. He kin gin yer all the information ye want. He 'lows to teach school next fall."

"You evidently do not catch my meaning. I want to know—"

"Tell ye I ain't eddycated. Reckon I could tell a man like you anything he don't know?"

The gentleman more amused than annoyed, said: "You are a prominent man in the community, I suppose?"

"Now you're hitten me."

"Take your drink regularly and attend church when you please, I suppose?"

"I'm a little shaky on the church question, but act mighty natchul when drinkin' time comes. The old woman makes the soap and 'tends church, an' we boys run the whisky. But I aint got a drop now."

"Are there any blind tigers in this community?"

"Cap,n, it ain't wuth while to fool with me. If thar's a blind tiger anywhar near here I never have hearn him howl."

"How far is it to town?"

"Thar aint any town in this country."

"I mean the court house. I am the judge of this circuit."

"Oh, Lord!" exclaimed the squatter. "Hole on, I'll tell you anything you want to. But I'm the biggest fool in this country. Come back and get some licker," and turning, run into the house and said to his wife, "Give me another shirt and a jug o' the stuff. I'm the blamest fool in this section. Talkin' to the judge and didn't know it. Got to lay to the woods now til court's over. Take care of the blind tiger," and leaping over the fence he disappeared in the woods.

Rev. Father Wilds' EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.
MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:
Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.
Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

Days Gone By.

BY EUGENE C. FERGUSON.

Sometime when the light is fading
From the glorious sunset sky,
Will you think my schoolmates, parents,
Of the days that have gone by ?

When we were together,
And the world seemed bright and fair,
When we had no grief or sorrow,
And no thought of future care.

I remember well an evening
In the days of long ago,
When the sky was bright and radient.
With a beauteous sunset glow.

On the old house-steps I waited,
I remember what was said,
While the shadows fell around us,
As the stars came out o'er head.

Sometimes in some other sunset,
Will you think of me as then ?
Till the time shall come if ever,
When we'll sometime meet again.

I remember well the morning
When the sunlight brightly fell,
Around the little old white cottage,
On the desolated hill.
And the sun shown down on sorrow,
For we parted there that Morn ;
On the old porch steps I left you,
Lonely heartsick and forlorn.

Sometime on some other morning,
When the sunlight floods the earth,
Will thou turn form scenes of pleasure,
Scenes of gaiety and mirth.

And remember for an instant
How we parted on that day,
Lovers sighs and tears and kisses
On the morn I went away,

Loved and lovingly we parted,
By the stearn decree of fate,
We must call the parting final,
Or in patience work and wait.

I am working, I am waiting,
And we hope to meet again,
Somewhere, sometime in the future,
We shall be so happy then.

But if fate should be so cruel,
If on earth we meet no more,
Sometime in the future
We shall meet on the other shore.

THE RIGHTFUL HEIR.

For some weeks past the engagement between the Earl of Beauvray and Miss Millicent Moyle had been chronicled in the fashionable intelligence of newspapers, and the marriage was appointed to take place in July. There were many who considered Miss Moyle a lucky girl, for Lord Beauvray was not only of ancient family, young, immensely wealthy and well-looking, but he was popular everywhere, owing to his sunny temper and uprightness of character. Lord Beauvray had been merry without being dissolute He was the most irreproachable of gentlemen, just as his betrothed, Miss Moyle, was the fairest flower among that bouquet of pretty girls who had been presented at court in the same season as herself. Millicent Moyle was a rich heiress as well as a pretty girl, but this was all that could be said of her. Her father, Josiah Moyle, a bill-discounter of Lombard street, was a "new man" of the city plutocracy. It was said that the peer's relatives had been much scandalized on hearing of his lordship's intention to marry the daughter of a man whose antecedents were just a little misty.

One sunny afternoon, just a fortnight before the date fixed for the marriage, a brougham with a coronet on the panels clattered up to Mr. Moyle's business house and Lord Beauvray alighted, ghastly pale. The hall porter was startled by his appearance, not less than by the broken voice in which he inquired if Mr. Moyle had left. Just then Mr. Moyle himself strutted out, all glorious with a geranium in his coat and a white hat perched a-cock on his pointed gray head.

"Ah, Beauvray!" cried he, with cheerful welcome, but perceiving the look on the peer's face he exclaimed. "Why what's the matter? Not ill, I hope?"

"No, not ill, but I want to speak to you in private," said Beauvray, hoarsely.

"Shall we go off in the phaeton?" stammered Mr. Moyle, full of uneasiness.

"No, into your room ; but let us be quite alone," repeated the earl, and he himself led the way to the office.

Plumping down into the arm-chair at the writing table, Mr. Moyle started in bewilderment, while the peer sat down opposite and produced a blue envelope, with several black seals. Laying this on on the table Beauvray placed his hand on it and looked into the financier's eyes.

"Mr. Moyle," said he, sadly, "I have a painful communication to make, but I will not beat about the bush. I find that I have no legal right to the title which I bear, or to the fortune which I am using."

"Eh! what!" exclaimed Mr. Moyle, with a gasp.

"I made the discovery this morning, rummaging through a box of deeds," said Lord Beauvray, whose voice [illegible]. "You know that I inherited the title from my uncle. He [illegible] brother. My [illegible] [illegible] way, for I have seen him in your house. His name is Timburel."

"Timburel!" echoed Mr. Moyle, with a start. "Young Timburel, who used to be a clerk in our firm, and whom I dismissed for presuming to make love to Millie!"

"I was not aware of those particulars, said Lord Beauvray; "but young Timburel is the man ; he bears his mother's name, (she was an actress), and we used to think he was the natural son of my second uncle; but his parents were lawfully married.

"And do you mean to say that Timburel—a vulgar, conceited upstart, who is living on his wits at this moment, with not a shilling in his pockets, I'll be bound—do you mean to say he has become Earl of Beauvray?"

"Not only that, but he become absolute owner of all my estates and property. My poor father left me a mere pittance. When I put Timburel in possession of his own, I shall have nothing but my commission in the Guards and about £300 a year."

"Come, come, don't say such bosh," blurted out old Moyle, grasping his nose again. It had just occurred to him that Lord Beauvray was hoaxing.

"He wants to find out whether our Millie loves himself or his title," reflected the moneyed man. But in a moment this idea was dispelled by Lord Beauvray displaying the contents of his envelope —a marriage certificate and a number of letters which substantiated the story. Then he entered into explanations. It seems that his uncle, the Honorable Colonel de Vray, being in garrison at Malta, had privately married an Italian actress named Timbrelli. After a year's union this fickle person deserted him, leaving her child to his care, and soon afterwards she died. Under the circumstances the Colonel, although he provided for the boy's maintenance, deemed it convenient to conceal his marriage, and eventually he died suddenly, without having acknowledged it. Apparently, however, his conscience had tormented him, so that while lacking the moral courage to speak the truth during his lifetime, he had left evidence by which it might be known after his death. Unfortunately the envelope containing his marriage certificate had lain mixed up with some other documents in a box which Lord Beauvray (who inherited the papers of the deceased) had never thought of examining till that morning, when he had begun to sort his family papers in view of his marriage.

Suddenly the bill-discounter crumpled all the papers in his hand with a feverish grasp, and looked at Lord Beauvray. There was an expression in his dull eyes as of a light behind an uncleansed pane of glass.

"I say," he whispered, "have you told anybody besides me of this secret ?"

"No ; I came to you first, as in duty bound."

"Then what prevents us from destroying the papers. That young Timburel is a skunk and a snob ; it will be ridiculous to see him a lord, and he'll ruin himself or become mad with conceit—so foolish is he. I say, Beauvray, if I throw this envelope in the fire, who will know anything about it ?"

"I shall," answered Lord Beauvray, and he held out his hand for the paper.

The shifty glance of the moneyed man quailed in the light of unimpeachable honesty in that of one who happened to be a nobleman in something more than the name.

There was a pretty hubbub in society when it became known that the Earl of Beauvray—or George de Vray, as he now simply called himself—was going to abandon his title and estates to a man who had been a city clerk.

Of course George de Vray's marriage was postponed. The turn in his fortune had thrown so much business on his hands that it was impossible he could devote a month to honeymooning until it was all disposed of ; besides which he felt bound to make Mr. Moyle the offer of releasing his daughter from her engagement. At first this proposal was pooh-poohed equally by the bill-discounter and Miss Moyle herself. Millie, who was not quite so sensible as she was pretty, wept a good deal at not becoming a countess ; then she wept at the nobility of George's action, which everybody was praising.

Now, there was staying in the house of Moyle's a poor little cousin of Millie's named Gertrude Brown. She was a soft eyed brunette of eighteen, very quiet and lovable, who acted as a companion to Millie and had to bear much from the whimsical humors of this spoiled child. Gertie had always received marked kindness from Lord Beauvray, who treated her as if she had been his sister, and she looked upon him with admiration as the most notable being she had ever seen. His renunciation of rank and wealth had struck her as an act of surprising heroism, and she could not so much as allude to it without the tears gushing from her eyes. A shrewd, merry little thing, too, in her way, she was capable of discerning the difference that existed between the genuine man of honor like Lord Beauvray and a mere man of money like her Uncle Moyle.

It was this enthusiasm of poor Gertie Brown's on poor George de Vray's behalf that began to make the cup of Mr. Moyle's bitterness overflow. That worthy gentleman had taken to musing that there was an end now to his chances of sitting in Parliament, getting a baronetcy and all that.

Poor Gertie held her tongue, although her heart throbbed woefully. She had heard that the new Lord Beauvray, the ex-Mr. Timburel, had been invited to dinner on a certain evening, and she began to suspect that her precious uncle was forming a plan for making of this former clerk of his a suitor for Millie's hand. [illegible] care never to come at times when he was likely to meet George. His visits displeased Gertie Brown, but she easily succeeded in winning the favor of the discounter's daughter, who correspondingly lessened her liking for George. and one day when she made an asperson upon him, which Gertie could not help resenting, she screamed, "If you are so fond of Mr. de Vray, why don't you get him to marry you? That would be two beggars together."

Naturally Gertie went to her room to have a good cry, but from that day she ceased speaking about George, and became very circumspect in her demeanor towards him ; when he called to see Millie she left the room. George soon noticed these tactics, for his interviews with Mr. Moyle's daughter were growing more irksome by reason of Millie's coldness and irritability. At the least thing she would snap and sulk, and one afternoon when George innocently made some inquiry about Miss Brown she fired up in a jealous pet. "You seem very anxious about Miss Brown. I am not obliged to show her off in the drawing-room whenever visitors come. She is only a pauper cousin whom we have taken in from charity."

"It's queer charity, dear, if you talk of it in that way," laughed George. "I don't consider poverty a disgrace either."

"No, but it's very inconvenient," said Millie, still querulously, "and that reminds me, if we marry I suppose you don't mean to live on my money. Papa says his banks might break and if that should be so I suppose you will do something to get an independent income?"

"Yes," answered George, coloring deeply. "I have applied for an exchange into the line, and think of going out to the war on the Indian frontier. I shall have a lieutenant-colonel's rank—so, if you wait for me two years, Millie, I will return with a new career and perhaps an income before me."

"Oh, wait two years to become a soldier's wife and go out to live in baking Indian heat!" exclaimed Millie, pouting, "I never bargained for that!"

Just at that moment Gertie Brown came in. She had a message to deliver to Millie from Mr. Moyle, and blushed as she crossed the room where the pair of quarreling lovers sat.

"Miss Brown," said George, rising to shake hands with her. "I wish you goodby, for I have just been telling Miss Moyle that I am going to war in India—"

"You are going to the war! Oh, Mr. de Vray—if anything should happen to you!" exclaimed Gertie, and the tears started to her eyes.

"Thank you for those tears," said George, gratefully. "I shall know that one person here, at least, will feel interested. Now give me as a keepsake that red book-marker you are holding in your hand. I will bring back the ribbon with something hanging to it."

"The Victoria Cross, perhaps," tittered Millie, rather uncomfortably. "I declare that's quite poetical. Well, goodby, Mr. we part as friends, don't we ?"

"Excellent friends," exclaimed George as he lifted both of her hands to his lips and kissed them playfully.

One year passed. There had been a triumph of the British arms in India, and the name of Col. de Vray was associated with it. His name was in everybody's mouth. He had received promotion and other honors, and was returning to England after the termination of the campaign as Maj-Gen. Sir George de Vray.

As for Millie Moyle, she was betrothed to the Earl of Beauvray, and when Sir George arrived in London one of the first things he read in the paper was that the marriage between this young lady and his cousin was to take place in a week.

He no longer cared now. He went to Mr. Moyle's house on the very day of his return in the afternoon and was ushered into the dining-room where luncheon was taking place. He was received like a hero, for Mr. Moyle liked to be on good terms with successful men and Millie was anxious to obtain something like forgiveness for her jilting. She received it fully and freely, so far as could be judged from the young general's manner, for he was frank and pleasant, but after the first greetings were over he addressed himself principally to little Gertie Brown, who sat radiant and trembling.

At last, when a toast had been drunk to George's honor and Millie's happiness —honest Mr. Moyle acting as toast-master—the general drew a parcel from his pocket and extracted from it Gertie's book-marker. There was hanging from it the cross of the Bath, a Victoria Cross and something else—a wedding ring.

"Will you take all three, Gertie ?" said George, approaching Millie's little cousin.

"Bravo, Sir George!" exclaimed Millie, clapping her hands, though she turned a little pale. "I always said that Gertie and you were intended for each other."

"So did I," said worthy Mr. Moyle, "but I say—hullo! what's that."

There had been a loud knock on the door and a footman entered with a telegram on a tray. Mr. Moyle opened the missive and uttered an exclamation of horror and dismay. "Great heavens, my lord, read this!" he faltered.

The telegram announced that the new Lord Beauvray had been killed in a railway accident. So the Indian hero got his titles and estates again.

Old Moyle had sunk into a chair helpless. His face was a thing to see.

John A. Roebling, the first engineer of the East river bridge, had his foot crushed, and died of lockjaw before the bridge was begun. His son, who was acquainted with all the plans, took up his father's work and carried it on with tireless energy. In overseeing the building of the pier foundations he was so exposed to the dampness that he contracted a disease which three years after his father's death rendered him almost helpless. His mind has been clear, however, and he has continued to direct the great work with the assistance of his wife. He removed to Brooklyn Heights and from a window surveyed the entire structure and directed operations, although unable to walk or stand erect.

THERE is no American humorist that can be compared, as a literary artist, to Mark Twain. His books delight and please the million. They instruct and amuse age and youth alike. The cultured and uneducated both enjoy them. The issue of a new book is therefore an event of almost universal interest. Then the public look for a wave of happiness that will spread throughout the English speaking and reading world. The last effort of the great humorist is entitled "Life on the Mississippi." We notice Mr. Watson Gill, of Syracuse, has called for agents. We should judge it would be a pleasure to a canvasser to offer such a work as this to a willing public. The book will be even better illustrated than any other of the Twain series, all well noted for spirited and effective illustrations.

As Mark was once a pilot on the Father of Waters and recently visited the mighty river, look out for any amount of jokes, yarns, traditions' romance, with geography, history, personal reminiscence, decorated with the quaintest and most curious pictures, as mirth provoking as the ideas of the author. This is the kind of book people will read and buy, and laugh over, and they will borrow and lend to their neighbors.

Why don't some bright and active man or woman circulate a list for this in our vicinity. Canvassers have given us enough of the dry patched up old histories that no one cares for or will read. An agent for Mark Twain's new book is never a bore, and with "Life on the Mississippi," he would be a welcome visitor just now.

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm' Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reosonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, "Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

ASIDE from the appearance of bribery the custom of issuing free passes to members of law making bodies entails great loss upon the people. As a consequence our state legislatures do "good solid work" only four days in the week. The members holding free passes—except when there is a party measure before the house—go home on Saturday, and are not ready for business again until Tuesday. Since transportation costs them nothing, it is cheaper to go home than to pay board at the capital. In this way the session is prolonged, and public expenses largely increased.

LAST Saturday evening, a severe rain storm occurred at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and continued four hours, pouring in torrents. During much of the time the rain fell with such force that its effect upon those exposed to it was similar to that of a heavy shower bath. At times it would almost take a person's breath away. Seven iron bridges and two stone culverts belonging to the city were swept away. One heavy iron bridge, with a fifty-foot float was carried bodily a distance of more than two blocks, and its heavy iron girders and stringers were bent and warped as if they had been mere wire ropes. Many business buildings, dwelling houses and barns were swept away. A number of houses were dashed to pieces as they floated off. All the business houses on Main street and Broadway are flooded, in fact, the entire city lying between the Bluffs and Broadway, on the north, is inundated by rushing and boiling waters. The water in some of the streets is waist deep. Cries for help could be heard in every direction, but the swiftness of the current rendered assistance impossible. The mayor of the city has received dispatches from surrounding cities offering to render assistance. The loss is estimated at about half a million dollars.

[illegible] EAST RIVER BRIDGE.

Twelve Persons Killed and Many Wounded.

A terrible disaster occurred on Decoration Day in the afternoon, in New York on the East river bridge, by which twelve persons lost their lives and a great many others were injured more or less seriously. While there were no less than 15,000 persons on the bridge, a blockade was formed on the foot path at the head of the flight of steps nine feet high extending from the masonry above the anchorage to the first iron truss, the same place at which blockades of people have occurred heretofore. A panic followed the pushing and struggling by which men and women tried to free themselves from the crowd. In the midst of this rush, started it is thought by a gang of roughs, either thoughtlessly or with mischievous intent, several persons were carried over the edge of the steps. They fell on the landing and at the foot of the stairs others fell on them, and more than forty persons were trampled under foot by the panic stricken multitude. It was a long time before they could be extricated. The disaster originated from a little crowding that at first caused only merriment and some good humored jostling until women began to faint, men to shout and children to cry with terror. The danger of going over the steps in the midst of such a crush dawned upon those near the flight and they began frantically to push back and shout to the advancing thousands: "Stand back!" "Give us room!" and other vain expostulations. Shouts went up that people were being killed and under the transforming influence of terror the report soon spread that something was the matter with the bridge. In the midst of the excitement the crowd advancing from New York fell back a short distance and left an empty space at the foot of the stairs. At the same time a gang of thoughtless ruffians to whom the crush was either mere sport or an opportunity to ply the vocation of pocket picking, answered the command "Let's give 'em a grand shove," with a concerted rush toward the steps. An old woman who was at the head of the steps stumbled and fell forward; a younger woman followed, and the human avalanche went on their prostrate forms. Soon others tripped and fell and within a few minutes there were piles of crushed and bleeding pieces of humanity at the foot of each flight of stairs and the panic stricken crowd was trampling them to death.

The scene now became dreadful beyond description. Some men were changed into maddened brutes, some into heroes. Husbands picked up their wives, struggled to the edge of the walk and placed their burdens all limp and exhausted upon the truss. Others passed children over their heads until they were landed in a place of safety. Hats, umbrellas and canes were thrown away in order that the hands might be clear to fight with for life. Coats were torn from men's backs and skirts and sleeves were ripped out of women's dresses. Scores of willing hands were lent to the rescue of the fallen. Unfortunately there were no means of communicating with the gatemen at either end of the Bridge and the tide of travel was not checked. It was only from the side of the walk th[illegible] the persons who were piled upon the stairs could be reached.

Finally the Bridge workmen came to the rescue. They took out a section of the iron fence next to the iron truss on each side of the walk, rested planks upon the granite coping, turned the frantic people to the wagon-ways, and enabled willing hands to extricate the dead and dying. The most of the work was done by daring men, who had clamored down the iron trusses in order to escape death from suffocation.

Murder in Auburn.

One of the most thrilling and foul murders was committed last Friday in Auburn, at the residence of Andrew Froitzheim. The victim was Froitzheim's wife Paulina, and the murderer is supposed to be Joseph Pitmecky, a German who boarded with the Froitzheims two years ago. Froitzheim returned from work about five o'clock, and was surprised to find all the doors of his residence fastened on the inside. He entered the kitchen by a window. Looking around his attention was attracted by spots of blood on the floor near the back door, and also blood stains on the door near the knob. He hurried to the bed room off the kitchen, where lay the bloody implement with which the deed was committed. It was a small ax. The handle was stained with blood, and suspended from it were long hairs. It lay on the floor at the head of the bed. A small bureau with drawers found partly open revealed that they had been plundered. From the bed room he flew to the door of the sitting room; and opening it was horrified by the sight which met his gaze. His wife's body lay across the east side of the room with her face down, and her hair torn from her head, which was crushed in, evidently by the hatchet referred to. The body lay in a pool of blood. On Saturday a man was arrested in Albany giving his name as Henry Heymann but who proved to be Joseph Pitmechy. He was brought to Syracuse the same day and there he confessed the crime. German citizens in Auburn are very indignant and say they will lynch Pitmechy if opportunity affords.

THE BROOKLYN BRIDGE.

Constructed of One Hundred Thousand Yards of Silk.

The opening of the Brooklyn Bridge is being celebrated to day by Barney, West & Smith, as well as by the people of New York and Brooklyn. When the curtain of one of their show windows was raised this morning, a very unique design of the bridge was shown, spanning a bay of water surrounded by green turf. Miniature figures of people were upon the bridge, and upon the [illegible] numerous [illegible] The bridge and its [illegible]

[illegible] when he passed through the gates of the [illegible] depot. "[illegible] Where is [illegible] I thought." I looked about me and saw the hurrying crowd—saw the United States Hotel looking as of old. But the [illegible] was a new feature. The top of this mountain is graced with two charming lakes. Looking about us from the one point we catch a glimpse of the Catskills. There of the Hudson. Here of Lake George. There of the Green Mountains. "Charming spot," was the one opinion.

The road is finely equipped. "That's conductor Frost, the best fellow that ever lived," said a man, pointing to a jolly full faced individual collecting tickets. I was introduced. "Where do you get all this glow of health, Conductor?" "Well, sir, I'm looking hearty and feeling hearty because I've formed an attachment for Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY. Honestly I think it's the best medicine ever given to a man. I have recommended it again and again, every time with the same results. Why, there's Ed Welch of the Adelphi Hotel (his home is 156 W. 34th street, N. Y.) he came up here and the change of air and water had a fearful effect upon him. His face broke out in blotches and pimples. I had seen the FAVORITE REMEDY used. I told him to get a bottle. He did so, and in three days's time the rash and fever entirely disappeared. It seemed to cleanse the blood with such rapidity. I have recommended Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY to a great many persons who were bilious and troubled with stagnant blood. FAVORITE REMEDY NEVER fails to purify and strengthen. I know this to be a fact."

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

It is reported that President Sam Sloan of the D. L. & W. railroad has offered the superintendency of the Buffalo and Binghamton division to E. A. VanHorne, superintendent of the R. W. & O. railroad, and that there is a probability Mr. VanHorne will accept. The able management of Mr. Van Horne lifted the Lake Ontario Shore railroad from a pauper concern to a first class property.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Monday the attendance at the third salesday of the Syracuse Dairymen's Board of Trade was large, but the market was dull, the buyers dull and in less time than it takes to write it the salesmen were dull. Everything and everybody was dull. The sale of cheese was unusually light, at 11 cents.

AT UTICA.

The market Monday was active, notwithstanding the decline. Sellers tried hard to make the ruling price 11⅛c., and claimed that there was enough sold at that to constitute a ruling. But upon close inquiry we are satisfied that the great bulk of the offerings sold at 11c., and that only an occasional lot went above that. All the stock above 11¼c. was small full milk cheese bought especially for the home trade. Transactions were as follows: 53 boxes at 10½c.; 46 at 10⅝c.; 5,141, in 85 lots, at 11c.; 5 lots, 417 boxes, at 11⅛c.; 6 lots, 471 boxes at 11¼c.; 2 lots, 264 boxes, at 11⅜c.; 123 at 11½c., and 78 at 11¾c. Sales, 6,893 boxes; commissions, 1,287; total, 8,180 boxes. Ruling price 11c. This compares with 6,370 boxes a year ago at 10⅝c. ruling; and with 8,850 two years ago at 8⅝c. average.

The types made us quote 7 lots, 155 boxes, last week, at 11⅞c. It should have read two lots instead.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

There was a general agreement among buyers as to what the market should be Monday, and 11c. was the almost invariable bid for choice goods. Among the causes for this decline are named the hot weather which has suddenly come upon us, and the rapid growth of grass with consequent increase in flow of milk. Yet all appear to have confidence in prices not declining so rapidly as last year. Other lots than those named in the list below, were claimed to have sold at 11¼c., but we could not fully substantiate the report. Those given at 11¼c. are mostly for home trade. Upon the whole the market has not ruled as firm as it did a week ago, but as cheese is going out so nicely in New York, it is hoped there may be no further decline at present. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
5	233	10⅞
17	829	10¾
49	2,923	11
3	113	11⅛
12	723	Commission
87	4,859
Farm Dairy	815
Total	5,674

AT FULTON.

The Cheese Association registered twenty-six factories Monday, and offered seventeen hundred and twenty-five boxes of cheese. No sales were reported but it was thought that the most of the offering would be sold very close to 11 cents.

N. Y. O. & W. R. R. Co.

As the tremini of the New York Ontario and Western Railway, at New York and Weehawken, will not be entirely completed in time for the opening of the road, arrangements have been made with the Pensylvania railroad company whereby trains of the New York Ontario & Western Railroad company will arrive and depart from the depot of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Jersey City.

The New York station and ferries of the Pennsylvania railroad are at the foot of Cortland and Desbrosses streets.

Direct connection will be made with Brooklyn via the annex boats from Jewell's wharf, foot of Fulton street, Brooklyn.

New York, Ontario and Western trains will leave the Pennsylvania Railroad depot at Jersey City and run through without change of cars or transfer of baggage to all stations on this line.

A MALARIAL VICTIM.

The Trying Experience of a Prominent Minister in the Tropics and at the North.

TO THE EDITOR:

The following circumstances drawn from my own personal experience, are so important and really remarkable that I have felt called upon to make them public. Their truth can be amply verified:

In 1875 I moved from St Lawrence county, N. Y., to Florida, which state I intended to make my future residence. I purchased a home on the banks of the St John's river and settled down, as I thought for life. The summer following the first winter I was conscious of most peculiar sensations which seemed to be an accompiment of a change of climate. I felt a sinking at the pit of the stomach accompanied by occasional dizziness and nausea. My head ached, my limbs pained me and I had an oppressive sense of weariness. I had thirst for acids and my appetite was weak and uncertain. My digestion was impaired and my food did not assimilate. At first I imagined it was the effort of nature to become acclimated and so I thought little of it. But my troubles increased until I become restless and peevish and the physicians informed me that I was suffering from malarial fever. This continued in spite of all the best physicians could do and I kept growing steadily worst. In the year 1880 my physicians informed me that a change of climate was absolutely necessary—that I could not survive another summer in the south. I determined to return North but not to the extreme portion, and so I took up my residence at upper Sandusky, in Central Ohio. The change did not work the desired cure, and I again consulted my physicians. I found they were unable to effect a permanent cure, and when the extreme warm weather of summer came on I grew so much worse that I gave up all hope. At that time I was suffering terribly. How badly only those can appreciate who have contracted malarial disease in tropical regions. It seemed as if death would be a relief greater than any other blessing. But notwithstanding all this I am happy to state that I am to-day a perfectly well and healthy man. How I came to recover so remarkably can be understood from the following card voluntarialy published by me in the Sandusky, Ohio. Republican, entitled:

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN:—During my recent visit to upper Sandusky, so many inquiries were made relative to what medicine, or course of treatment had broufiht such a marked change in my system, I feel it to be due to the proprietors to state that Warne's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure accomplished for me what other medicines and physicians had failed to do. The malarial poison which had worked its way so thoroughly through my system during my five years residence in Florida had brought me to the verge of the grave, and physicians had pronounced my case incurable; but that was not to be wondered at, as it was undoubtedly one of the worst on record. Hough Brothers, of your city, called my attention to the medicine referred to, and induced me to try a few bottles. So marked was the change after four weeks' trial that I continued its use, and now, after three months, the cure is complete. This is not written for the benefit of Warner & Co., but for the public, and especially for any person troubled with malarial or bilious attacks."

Such is the statement I made, without solicitation, after my recovery, and such I stand by at the present moment. I am convinced that Warner's Safe Cure is all it is claimed to be, and as such deserves the great favor it has received. A remedy that can cure the severest case of tropica malaria of five years standing certainly cannot fail to cure those minor malarail troubles which are so prevalent and yet so serious.

ASIDE from the appearance of bribery the custom of issuing free passes to members of law making bodies entails great loss upon the people. As a consequence our state legislatures do "good solid work" only four days in the week. The members holding free passes—except when there is a party measure before the house—go home on Saturday, and are not ready for business again until Tuesday. Since transportation costs them nothing, it is cheaper to go home than to pay board at the capital. In this way the session is prolonged, and public expenses largely increased.

LAST Saturday evening, a severe rain storm occurred at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and continued four hours, pouring in torrents. During much of the time the rain fell with such force that its effect upon those exposed to it was similar to that of a heavy shower bath. At times it would almost take a person's breath away. Seven iron bridges and two stone culverts belonging to the city were swept away. One heavy iron bridge, with a fifty-foot float was carried bodily a distance of more than two blocks, and its heavy iron girders and stringers were bent and warped as if they had been mere wire ropes. Many business buildings, dwelling houses and barns were swept away. A number of houses were dashed to pieces as they floated off. All the business houses on Main street and Broadway are flooded, in fact, the entire city lying between the Bluffs and Broadway, on the north, is inundated by rushing and boiling waters. The water in some of the streets is waist deep. Cries for help could be heard in every direction, but the swiftness of the current rendered assistance impossible. The mayor of the city has received dispatches from surrounding cities offering to render assistance. The loss is estimated at about half a million dollars.

Twelve Persons Killed and Many Wounded.

A terrible disaster occurred on Decoration Day in the afternoon, in New York on the East river bridge, by which twelve persons lost their lives and a great many others were injured more or less seriously. While there were no less than 15,000 persons on the bridge, a blockade was formed on the foot path at the head of the flight of steps nine feet high extending from the masonry above the anchorage to the first iron truss, the same place at which blockades of people have occurred heretofore. A panic followed the pushing and struggling by which men and women tried to free themselves from the crowd. In the midst of this rush, started it is thought by a gang of roughs, either thoughtlessly or with mischievous intent, several persons were carried over the edge of the steps. They fell on the landing and at the foot of the stairs others fell on them, and more than forty persons were trampled under foot by the panic stricken multitude. It was a long time before they could be extricated. The disaster originated from a little crowding that at first caused only merriment and some good humored jostling until women began to faint, men to shout and children to cry with terror. The danger of going over the steps in the midst of such a crush dawned upon those near the flight and they began frantically to push back and shout to the advancing thousands: "Stand back!" "Give us room!" and other vain expostulations. Shouts went up that people were being killed and under the transforming influence of terror the report soon spread that something was the matter with the bridge. In the midst of the excitement the crowd advancing from New York fell back a short distance and left an empty space at the foot of the stairs. At the same time a gang of thoughtless ruffians to whom the crush was either mere sport or an opportunity to ply the vocation of pocket picking, answered the command "Let's give 'em a grand shove," with a concerted rush toward the steps. An old woman who was at the head of the steps stumbled and fell forward; a younger woman followed, and the human avalanche went on their prostrate forms. Soon others tripped and fell and within a few minutes there were piles of crushed and bleeding pieces of humanity at the foot of each flight of stairs and the panic stricken crowd was trampling them to death.

The scene now became dreadful beyond description. Some men were changed into maddened brutes, some into heroes. Husbands picked up their wives, struggled to the edge of the walk and placed their burdens all limp and exhausted upon the truss. Others passed children over their heads until they were landed in a place of safety. Hats, umbrellas and canes were thrown away in order that the hands might be clear to fight with for life. Coats were torn from men's backs and skirts and sleeves were ripped out of women's dresses. Scores of willing hands were lent to the rescue of the fallen. Unfortunately there were no means of communicating with the gatemen at either end of the Bridge and the tide of travel was not checked. It was only from the side of the walk that the persons who were piled upon the stairs could be reached.

Finally the Bridge workmen came to the rescue. They took out a section of the iron fence next to the iron truss on each side of the walk, rested planks upon the granite coping, turned the frantic people to the wagon-ways, and enabled willing hands to extricate the dead and dying. The most of the work was done by daring men, who had clamored down the iron trusses in order to escape death from suffocation.

Murder in Auburn.

One of the most thrilling and foul murders was committed last Friday in Auburn, at the residence of Andrew Froitzheim. The victim was Froitzheim's wife Paulina, and the murderer is supposed to be Joseph Pitmecky, a German who boarded with the Froitzheims two years ago. Froitzheim returned from work about five o'clock, and was surprised to find all the doors of his residence fastened on the inside. He entered the kitchen by a window. Looking around his attention was attracted by spots of blood on the floor near the back door, and also blood stains on the door near the knob. He hurried to the bed room off the kitchen, where lay the bloody implement with which the deed was committed. It was a small ax. The handle was stained with blood, and suspended from it were long hairs. It lay on the floor at the head of the bed. A small bureau with drawers found partly open revealed that they had been plundered. From the bed room he flew to the door of the sitting room; and opening it was horrified by the sight which met his gaze. His wife's body lay across the east side of the room with her face down, and her hair torn from her head, which was crushed in, evidently by the hatchet referred to. The body lay in a pool of blood. On Saturday a man was arrested in Albany giving his name as Henry Heymann but who proved to be Joseph Pitmechy. He was brought to Syracuse the same day and there he confessed the crime. German citizens in Auburn are very indignant and say they will lynch Pitmechy if opportunity affords.

Honestly I think it's the best medicine ever given to a man. I have recommended it again and again, every time with the same results. Why, there's Ed Welsh of the Adelphi Hotel (his house is 156 W. 24th street, N. Y.) he came up here and the change of air and water had a fearful effect upon him. His face broke out in blotches and pimples. I had seen the FAVORITE REMEDY used. I told him to get a bottle. He did so, and in three days' time the rash and fever entirely disappeared. It seemed to cleanse the blood with such rapidity. I have recommended Dr. Kennedy's FAVORITE REMEDY to a great many persons who were bilious and troubled with stagnant blood. FAVORITE REMEDY never fails to purify and strengthen. I know this to be a fact."

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Monday the attendance at the third salesday of the Syracuse Dairymen's Board of Trade was large, but the market was dull, the buyers dull and in less time than it takes to write it the salesmen were dull. Everything and everybody was dull. The sale of cheese was unusually light, at 11 cents.

AT UTICA.

The market Monday was active, notwithstanding the decline. Sellers tried hard to make the ruling price 11⅛c., and claimed that there was enough sold at that to constitute a ruling. But upon close inquiry we are satisfied that the great bulk of the offerings sold at 11c., and that only an occasional lot went above that. All the stock above 11¼c. was small full milk cheese bought especially for the home trade. Transactions were as follows: 53 boxes at 10½c.; 46 at 10⅝c.; 5,441, in 85 lots, at 11c.; 5 lots, 417 boxes, at 11⅛c.; 6 lots, 471 boxes at 11¼c.; 2 lots, 264 boxes, at 11⅜c.; 123 at 11½c., and 78 at 11¾c. Sales, 6,893 boxes; commissions, 1,287; total, 8,180 boxes. Ruling price 11c. This compares with 6,370 boxes a year ago at 10⅝c. ruling; and with 8,850 two years ago at 8⅝c. average.

The types made us quote 7 lots, 155 boxes, last week, at 11⅞c. It should have read two lots instead.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

There was a general agreement among buyers as to what the market should be Monday, and 11c. was the almost invariable bid for choice goods. Among the causes for this decline are named the hot weather which has suddenly come upon us, and the rapid growth of grass with consequent increase in flow of milk. Yet all appear to have confidence in prices not declining so rapidly as last year. Other lots than those named in the list below, were claimed to have sold at 11¼c., but we could not fully substantiate the report. Those given at 11¼c. are mostly for home trade. Upon the whole the market has not ruled as firm as it did a week ago, but as cheese is going out so nicely in New York, it is hoped there may be no further decline at present. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
1	38	10¼
5	233	10⅜
17	829	10½
49	2,923	11
3	118	11⅛
12	723	Commission
87	4,859
Farm Dairy	815
Total	5,674

AT FULTON.

The Cheese Association registered twenty-six factories Monday, and offered seventeen hundred and twenty-five boxes of cheese. No sales were reported but it was thought that the most of the offering would be sold very close to 11 cents.

A MALARIAL VICTIM.

The Trying Experience of a Prominent Minister in the Tropics and at the North.

TO THE EDITOR:

The following circumstances drawn from my own personal experience, are so important and really remarkable that I have felt called upon to make them public. Their truth can be amply verified:

In 1875 I moved from St Lawrence county, N. Y., to Florida, which state I intended to make my future residence. I purchased a home on the banks of the St John's river and settled down, as I thought for life. The summer following the first winter I was conscious of most peculiar sensations which seemed to be an accompiment of a change of climate. I felt a sinking at the pit of the stomach accompanied by occasional dizziness and nausea. My head ached, my limbs pained me and I had an oppressive sense of weariness. I had thirst for acids and my appetite was weak and uncertain. My digestion was impaired and my food did not assimilate. At first I imagined it was the effort of nature to become acclimated and so I thought little of it. But my troubles increased until I become restless and peevish and the physicians informed me that I was suffering from malarial fever. This continued in spite of all the best physicians could do and I kept growing steadily worst. In the year 1880 my physicians informed me that a change of climate was absolutely necessary—that I could not survive another summer in the south. I determined to return North but not to the extreme portion, and so I took up my residence at upper Sandusky, in Central Ohio. The change did not work the desired cure, and I again consulted my physicians. I found they were unable to effect a permanent cure, and when the extreme warm weather of summer came on I grew so much worse that I gave up all hope. At that time I was suffering terribly. How badly only those can appreciate who have contracted malarial disease in tropical regions. It seemed as if death would be a relief greater than any other blessing. But notwithstanding all this I am happy to state that I am to-day a perfectly well and healthy man. How I came to recover so remarkably can be understood from the following card voluntarialy published by me in the Sandusky, Ohio, Republican, entitled:

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN:—During my recent visit to upper Sandusky, so many inquiries were made relative to what medicine, or course of treatment had broufiht such a marked change in my system, I feel it to be due to the proprietors to state that Warne's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure accomplished for me what other medicines and physicians had failed to do. The malarial poison which had worked its way so thoroughly through my system during my five years residence in Florida had brought me to the verge of the grave, and physicians had pronounced my case incurable; but that was not to be wondered at, as it was undoubtedly one of the worst on record. Hough Brothers, of your city, called my attention to the medicine referred to, and induced me to try a few bottles. So marked was the change after four weeks' trial that I continued its use, and now, after three months, the cure is complete. This is not written for the benefit of Warner & Co., but for the public, and especially for any person troubled with malarial or bilious attacks."

Such is the statement I made, without solicitation, after my recovery, and such I stand by at the present moment. I am convinced that Warner's Safe Cure is all it is claimed to be, and as such deserves the great favor it has received. A remedy that can cure the severest case of tropica malaria of five years standing certainly cannot fail to cure those minor malarail troubles which are so prevalent and yet so serious.

Stoddard's hotel in Oswego Falls was the scene of one of the most outrageous and drunken fights known in this section for some time, Friday night, in which black eyes and disfigured countenances was the result. Affidavits are being procured and some arrests will soon be made.

A rumor has been current that legal steps were being taken to collect damages of J. W. Tutt of Boston, Mass. for the killing of C. H. Howland who met his death in Syracuse by an explosion of a soda fountain generator. The father of deceased informs THE TIMES the rumor is false, and that no action will be taken.

The owners of the lower brown stone quarry in Oswego Falls are endeavoring to gain possession. They have taken legal steps to dispossess J. J. Collins. If Mr. Collins is compelled to sever his connection with the quarry, attorney H. C. Howe will probably continue the business and pay the debts contracted last year which are numerous.

There seems to be quite a little excitement in Oswego Falls for the reason that people can obtain whisky, and there was no licenses granted. An old gentleman was arrested and locked up in jail a few days since and on being brought before Police Justice Parker he said that he obtained his liquor from Mr. Stoddard and Mr. Wilcox, and warrants have been issued for their arrest. The board of excise say they will grant [illegible] licenses this year.

The day was ushered in [illegible] bright and sunshining [illegible] which caused every heart to rejoice. That Kind Providence had bestowed upon the people of this community such a delightful day to enable them to pay their tributes to the honored dead.

The banks and schools as well as all business places were closed in the afternoon in honor of the day. Flowers were brought in great abundance of all varieties. Many flags were displayed at half mast. The windows of the Bee Hive were handsomely decorated which was the source of great attraction and comment, and many other places prepared also some tribute to the occasion.

THE PROCESSION

formed on First street, each organization forming in front of their respective quarters. The procession formed in line headed by the band and followed by Post Schenck. Wm. H. Kenyon, the orator of the occasion and three other soldiers in a carriage, all of which were crippled. After the carriages with soldiers came the Fire Department looking unusually well; after them came the Good Templars in regalia, many ladies, members of the order, marching in the procession.

The line of march was up Oneida street to Fourth and up Fourth to the Park. A large crowd had already gathered at the Park which on the arrival of the procession was very largely increased and the exercises commenced by the Commander calling upon Adjutant Harris to read the order of Commander in Chief of the G. A. R. of the United States. Commander Pentelow then read part of the service and gave the order for saluting the dead which was obeyed by the Post. A song was next sung by the Post Quartette, Rev. Mr. Markham made a prayer; more music was given by the Post Quartette and then the commander introduced Wm. H. Kenyon as the orator.

MR. KENYON

in his address traced the growth of freedom and liberty from its early days, its struggles from centuries ago with tyranny and oppression down to the present time; portrayed how every victory had been won by suffering and agony. He also showed what it had cost to establish the principles of liberty on its firm foundation and then called attention to the fact that he who for friendship, or gain or advancement, for success of party or faction was swerved one jot or tittle from his earnest convictions of duty and voted contrary to his convictions was an assassin of liberty and guilty of trying to bring to naught all the heroic sacrifice for principles of ages past. The address was able and eloquent, and was listened to by his hearers with great interest. More music followed, after which made a few remarks calling attention to the beautiful banner which was presented to Post Schenck, by Mr. G. F. Schenck of lower Oswego Falls, brother of the late D. F. Schenck, deceased, after whom the Post is named.

Rev. Mr. Kinmouth then pronounced the benediction and the procession formed and proceeded to the Cemetery. At that time rain commenced to fall and the crowd sought shelter. The Fire Department escorted the Post to the Cemetery and returned to the engine house, while the Post proceeded to decorate the graves of their dead comrades.

At the grave of D. F. Schenck special services were held and Capt. J. S. Palmer made a short, appropriate speech. The graves of the dead were then appropriately decorated and the Post returned to their quarters.

Joshua Gifford.

Judge Vann has granted sixty days stay of proceedings in the case of Joshua Gifford, who was sentenced to be hung on the 29th day of this month, to enable his counsel to appeal to the general term. A strong effort will be mane for a new trial.

Reinstated.

Last Wednesday evening President J. F. Herrick called a special meeting of the board of trustees and rescinded the action taken the evening previous declaring the office of clerk vacant, and reinstated L. H. Patterson. The members of the board who was in favor of removing Patterson saw the errors they had made, and wished to make it right by rescinding what they had done. That by no means settles it as we understand it, and as to what measures will be taken we are unable to find out.

A Question.

To the Editor of THE FULTON TIMES:—

Can you inform us why the people of Fulton go to Syracuse to purchase their goods, I for one keep a superior quality of goods, and sell them just as cheap as any one can purchase in Syracuse.

DISSATISFIED MERCHANT.

In replying to this question, we would inform the writer of the above, that if the merchants did not set the example by going to Syracuse to buy their groceries, they would probably receive more trade from this locality. We know of two merchants in this village who have done this.

SHOE STORE!

Summer has begun.

Memorial Day is over.

The season for buying potatoes is over.

Will Fulton celebrate the Fourth of July?

Mrs. Dixon of Oswego Falls leaves for England next week.

Don't fail to hear Hon. Dr. Stowe lecture next Tuesday evening.

The business in the police court has been quite brisk during the past week.

Messrs Watson, Post and Miller of Oswego came to Fulton Sunday with their bicycles.

H. D. Gray of Chicago, is visiting at the residence of Timothy Salmon in lower Oswego Falls.

Hon. Dr. T. Dwight Stowe lectures in Nichols Hall next Tuesday evening.—Subject—"Vaccination."

Mrs. Geo. Chauncey, daughter of R. Bradshaw, has so far recovered as to be able to appear on the streets.

Don't forget the Sunday afternoon prayer meeting at S. of T. rooms at 4 p. m. Mr Bartley will be the leader.

S. Parmelee, master of Hiram Lodge of this village is in New York attending the annual session of the Grand Lodge.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather the Good Templars festival last Wednesday and Thursday evenings was largely attended and about $40 realized.

Quite a number of Fultonians have offered to contribute liberally toward a celebration here on the Fourth of July. A paper will probably be put in circulation, in a few days asking for contributions.

Prof. Boothby went with his zoology class to Syracuse Saturday to view the salt works and visit the museum at the University. Mr. Boothby spares no pains to make it pleasant for his scholars and improve their minds.

Mr Dorr Andrews of Granby and Miss Nellie Decker of lower Oswego Falls will be united in marriage this evening at 8 o'clock. The bride in question is a lady of rare accomplishments and we congratulate Mr Andrews upon the selection he has made.

If the sun will only back up the work done by the rains, crops will grow finely, but until it does the farming business is at a stand still. Some potatoes in this section have been planted over four weeks, and they have not made their appearance yet.

The 23d annual meeting of the Oswego county Homeopathic society, will be held in the city of Oswego at the office of Dr McManus & Hopkins on Tuesday the 12 day of June at 1 p. m.

Dr N. H. HAVILAND,
Secretary and Treasurer.

Next Sunday will be observed as children's day at the M. E. church. The church will be tastefully decorated with flowers and evergreens. In the morning the pastor, Rev. W. F. Markham, will address the young people and in the evening appropriate exercises will be given by the children. A beautiful printed service, prepared especially for the occasion, will be used.

Fred Schenck of Granby presented Post Schenck with a beautiful flag on the evening before decoration day with the following inscription. "Post D. F. Schenck G. A. R., No. 271 Dept. S. N. Y., Fulton, N. Y." He made the presentation in an appropriate speech, to which Commander Pentelow replied in behalf of the Post accepting the banner. Rev. Riggs was called upon and responded in a few well chosen remarks and the meeting closed with music by the quartette.

T. E. Osborn, sr., died at his residence in Rochester Monday morning at 10:45, at the age of 85 years. Mr. Osborn was well known in Fulton, and had a host of friends. He moved from Fulton about three years ago and took up his residence in Rochester, where he has since lived until he died. During the time he lived in Fulton he acted in the capacity of jailor for many years. He leaves a wife and six children who survive him. His remains were brought to Fulton this afternoon and entered in Mount Adnah.

Richard Barry was arraigned before Justice Piper for assault upon James McDonald, for which a fine was imposed of $7.50 or 30 days in jail, Mr. Barry liquidated.

A warrant was issued Monday for Mrs. Robert Hanna, and brought before Justice Piper for assault upon Henry Cooter. Mrs. Hanna claims that she whipped the boy for stealing flowers. The trial was postponed until June 15th at 7:30 p. m.

Three small boys were brought before Justice Piper last evening for throwing stones. One of the youngsters was sentenced to the Western House of Refuge until 21 years old, but sentence was suspended during good behavior. The other two were reprimanded and discharged.

A peddler, named Michael Maloy while crossing the river Friday in company with John Brown, and John Kelly two quarrymen, dropped his watch over the bridge. The quarrymen recovered the watch, and the peddler invited them to have a drink which they accepted, and immediately started for a saloon and on reaching there Malloy asked them,

"What will you have?"

"Whisky straight;" after which the quarrymen returned the compliment by saying

"Have another?"

"Don't care if I do, brandy if you please," and filled the glasses brim full, and down it went, and took seats and chatted.

After a short time, Maloy, says, "Boys (hic) have another?"

"Well, I should smile was the reply.

They smiled and smiled, until they finally took rooms under Cullen's meat market, where they remained for the night, and conversed with each other through the bars.

They called on Justice Piper Saturday—it didn't cost Maloy a cent to to call in, but it cost him $7.50 to get out. Kelly and Brown were financially embarrassed, and returned to board with Patrick Cullen.

Lecture.

Hon. Dr. T. Dwight Stowe will lecture in Nichols Hall next Tuesday evening, the 12th instant at half past seven o'clock. The subject—"Vaccination" opposing it in every form. Dr. Stow is a former Fultonian and an enthusiastic speaker. The lecture will be free of charge, and every one should attend, as opposing vaccination is a subject of great importance.

GARLANDS FOR THE DEAD.

"I looked upon (them) with a soldier's eye
That lik'd, bat had a rougher task in hand.
* * * * *
But now I am return'd, and that war thoughts
Have left their places vacant, in their rooms
Come thronging soft and delicate desires."
[Much Ado About Nothing.

The comradeship of soldiers is one of the strongest ties humanity experiences. Happily not the most common, but stronger. Sharing one another's everyday life, inspired by a common, all-absorbing purpose; encountering mutual hardships and perils; rejoicing together in victories; sympathising with each other's sufferings; mourning the separations of death—surely it is no wonder that soldierly comradeships davelop such enduring strength, which neither distance, time nor death can lessen. So, to-day, the living soldiers are still honoring the memories of long dead comrades. "War thoughts have left their places vacant," delicate, holy desires to honor and crown with memory's laurel garlands the immortal spirits of the brave comrades gone before. Whatever contributes to the well-being of a community will win its favor. In providing seasonable Ready Made Clothing in latest styles, in best material, in varied pattern,—Overcoats, Suits for dress occasions, for business, for travel, for leisure, at prices which make the goods desirable, it becomes an object for every man, youth and boy, to call and examine, compare and purchase

NEW YORK, June 3d, 1883.

"Fast asleep the boys are lying, in their low and narrow tent,
And no battle-cry can wake them, and no order call you hence;
And the yearnings of the mother, and the anguish of the wife,
Cannot, with their magic presence call the soldiers back to life;
And the brother's manly sorrow, and the father's mournful pride,
Cannot give back to his country him who for his country died.
They who for the trembling Nation in its hour of trial bled,
Lie, in these its years of triumph, with our Army of the Dead."
[WILL CARLTON.

Decoration Day, where'ere it comes always brings sad recollections, at the farm house, in the village or in the busy city, the ceremonies on the 30th of May brings visions of the past dark days, desolated homes and broken hearted families. The services in a village are always the most impressive for some personal friend is found among the "grand army of the dead," and again you can stand beside the grave and see the flowers laid on with loving hands; while in the cities you see a long procession, marching to gay music, and a few flowers, more or less wilted. The day in New York was perfect and everything connected with the services moved smoothly. All business was suspended and the city was draped in crepe and bunting, all the flags were hung at half mast. At 10 o'clock a. m. the troops formed at Sixty-ninth street and marched down Broadway to Twenty-third where they were reviewed by President Arthur, Secretary's Brewster and Chandler, General Hancock, Mayor Edson, Ex-Senator Conkling and many other civil and military officers. The line then moved down Fifth avenue to Fourteenth street, around Union Square and down Broadway to Grand street, where it was dismissed. The First and Second Division of the National Guards, led the Grand Army, as an escort and following came fifteen divisions of the G. A. R. Veterans and the visiting posts. The National guards marched in the following order:—First, the Twenty-second, then came the Eleventh, Twelfth, Ninth, Seventh, Sixty-ninth, Eighth and Seventy-first regiments. The Thirteenth of Brooklyn, in new uniforms were next, and conspicuous, at the head was Henry Ward Beecher as chaplain, riding on his white charger. The marines from the men-of-war Kearsarge and Saratoga followed the thirteenth.

Cheers followed the Veterans of the Dunyea, Hawkins and the Old Fire Zouaves, also the Tibbets Veteran Corps as they marched by. The Peekskill Cadets, Italian regiment, Mexican war survivors and Sons of Veterans made up the rest of the brilliant procession. Every band in the city was in line and every Post carried its old battle flags which were cheered as they went by. The line of march was crowded with people and all the windows along the route were full. At Grand street the companies were dismissed and the flower committees adjourned to the different cemeteries and appropriately decorated the soldiers graves. Several receptions were held during the day, but the principal one was given in the evening, in which the President took part. The Old Guard acted as his escort during his stay. General Sheridan delivered the oration of the day. Up to four o'clock nothing had occurred to mar the beauty of the occasion. but at this time the news went through the city that Fourteen people had been killed on the BROOKLYN BRIDGE.

Everyone started for the bridge entrance and the scene about the gates was wild and exciting. The report at first was not believed, but when wagons carrying the bodies passed through the crowds the excitement became more intense. Just before four o'clock, thousands of people were coming over from Brooklyn, where the Soldier's graves had been decorated, and the crowd from New York was nearly as large. In some way a jam was formed in the narrowed space between the central cables at the head of the steps on the New York anchorage. The steps are in two flights, of seven each, broken by a landing eight feet across. It was here that the two bodies met and attempted to pass. Some young roughs formed a wedge of themselves and by pushing tried to break the line. This caused a greater jam and a number received internal injuries at this time. The crowds were constantly growing and every one became restless and excited. In the excitement a young girl was pushed from the head of the stairs and fell screaming, to the landing. Before she could get up she was carried with the bodies of others, pushed from above, and then the crowd was pushed, fighting, yelling and groaning over those on the platform. It was some time before the crowds could be forced back and then the gates at both ends were closed. A small space was cleared at the steps and fourteen bodies were laid out on the asphaltum walk below.

The dead and injured were taken to the Chambers Street Hospital where they were properly cared for. Until late at night, the gates of the bridge were besieged by people, rushing around wildly searching for missing friends. The recognitions of the dead were almost heartrending. One Italian found his wife's body at the morgue, and as he gazed at it, he began to cry, then laugh, and was taken away hopelesly insane. Most of the dead and injured belong to the working class and their death and injuries may be the cause of future distress. The accident is much regretted by the bridge trustees, and by some this bloody inauguration is thought to be a bad omen. One can hardly refrain a shudder as they pass over the spot where recently the crowd of yelling, praying, cursing, demented people struggled and fought for life. The stronger gained it while the weaker, as usual, went to the wall. It will be some time before the cloud caused by this event will be lifted from the "People's Bridge," and the people pray that as this is the first, it may be the last blood shed upon this wonderful structure.

"A BLESSING IN DISGUISE,"

484 Adelphi St, BROOKLYN, N. Y., }
MARCH 29, 1881. }

No family should be without Allcock's porous plasters; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficiency far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and know them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint, bronchitis, neuralgia, lumbago, inflammation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness, and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weakness, they have no equal. I have never yet found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with Brandreth universal life-giving and life-healing Pills, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good sound health.

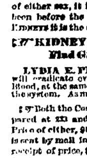
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty-five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Another Account of the Custer Massacre.

Since General Custer and his command of 300 were massacred by the braves of Sitting Bull, two or three accounts have been given, each of which purported to be a correct history of the fight. The St. Paul Pioneer Press publishes an interview between a correspondent at Standing Rock Agency and the wife of Tatatukahegleski, or Spotted Horn Bull. This women is first cousin of Sitting Bull, and the story is vouched for as being a true account of the battle. After describing the advance and retreat of the Major Reno—whom she declared to to be either drunk or crazy, and his men thoroughly panic-stricken—the women stated that the retreat and its consequent slaughter was scarcely ended when the blare of of Custer's trumpets told the Sioux of his approach; but they were prepared for him. The men quietly crossed the river, and hundreds galloped to the rear out of range at first but soon hemmed him in constantly narrowing circles. The woman mounted her pony and rode behind the camp, where she could get a good view of the hills beyond. She saw the troops come up and dismount. Each fourth man seized the bridles of three horses besides his own. The rest deployed and advanced on the run toward the river. She saw the terrible effect of the withering fire which greeted the approach of the willows on the the Indian's of the stream, and laughed as she said: "Our people, boys and all had plenty of guns and ammunition to kill the new soldiers. Those who had run away left them behind." Slowly trotting north along the outskirts of the encampments, she noted the Indians who had crossed getting closer to the troops. She watched the latter, those who were left of them retreat to their horses and mount. She heard the yells of her kindred and the shouts of the whites; but soon as the former grew plentier and the latter fewer, she could distinguish little save here and there an animated cluster of men and horses.

Slowly her pony jogged down the stream. When she reached the Minneconjo camp, on the extreme left, not an hour's ride, she said not one white soldier was visible on the field. Of horses there were plenty; those the Indians spared. The Custer men were soon stripped and the Indians knew they had killed the long-haired chief by his buckskin coat trimmed with beaver which they found upon him. The Sioux lost thirty killed and more than twice as many wounded, the Indians numbering 5,000 in all.

Try Ayer's Cathartic Pills! They are mild and pleasand in action, but thorough and searching in effect.

Seeing the Superintendant.

In the office of a certain Western railroad superintendent it was understood that when a common-looking stranger entered the outer office and asked for the Great Mogul, one of the young men therein employed should claim to be the official wanted and thus turn the bore away. The other day a web-footed stranger with a business squint in his eyes, asked to see the superintendent, and the chief clerk promptly replied:

"Yes, sir, what can I do for you?"

"Are you the man?"

"No mistake?"

"None at all."

"Then its all right. Six months ago one of your trains killed a cow for me, and you have been just mean enough not to answer any of my letters. Old hoss, I'm going to lick $35 out of you!"

"But, sir, you see—"

"I see nothing but you!" Prepare to be licked!"

And the proxy superintendent was not only mopped around the room and flung into the wood-box as limp as a a clothes-line, but the cow owner kicked the others out doors and upset the desks and tables with the remark:

"The next time I do business with this corporation I want you not only to reply to my letters, but to put 'in haste' on your envelope!"

On stage or platform, in society or at home, must not only possess brains but a clear strong voice. But these complaints may be completely eradicated with a few applications of Thomas' Eclectric Oil, unrivaled in its specialties.

Topnoody.

Mr. Topnoody and his wife were warmly discussing the woman question Wednesday evening after tea, and Mr. Topnoody was defending the men.

"Don't you think, my dear, men have some rights?" he asked.

"They have about all there are in the market, I think.

"You talk as though women should have every thing and were perfect. Can't they make mistakes the same as men do?"

"Oh, yes; they can even make fools of themselves sometimes."

"You don't mean it? I'm surprised that you should acknowledge it, my dear, after what you have said."

"Well, I do acknowledge it, and will go further and say that I have done as much myself."

"Ha, ha" laughed Topnoody, "you of all women to say that! I'd like to ask, my dear, wherein you ever made such a fool of yourself as to own up to it?"

"You needn't laugh Topnoody. I did it when I married you, and I have had it thrown at me forty times, and I ain't in a position to deny it very successfully either."

Topnoody stopped laughing.

[illegible] of those of middle age and late in life, as illustrated by our printed testimonials, prove Hood's Sarsaparilla to be a valuable remedy, containing remedial agents which do positively cure scrofula and eradicate it from the blood.

WARNER, N. H., Jan. 21, 1879.

MESSRS. C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.: Gentlemen—For ten years previous to the early part of 1877 I had been a constant sufferer from scrofulous ulcers or sores, which had finally reduced me to a helpless condition, as described in my letter to you in September of that year. The continued excellent health which enables me to keep house for my aged father and to enjoy life, keeps alive my intense personal interest in Hood's SARSAPARILLA, and I cannot refrain from expressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours,
SARAH C. WHITTIER.

[illegible] wheeled around and said:

"See here, sir, you are following me?"

"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply.

"What for?"

"Because I want that umbrella. You will leave it somewhere within half an hour, and I might as well have it as some one perfectly able to buy a dozen of them!"

"Don't you worry about my leaving it," observed the citizen as he moved off.

He entered two offices on Griswold street, took a shy up the stairs of the Walker block, and made a call at telephone headquarters. When he came out of the latter place he started for the postoffice, and had just entered the building when he threw up his hands and exclaimed: "Hang me! if I havn't lef that umbrella!"

He rushed back to the telephone office like a man going to a fire, and when he gazed around the room in search of the lost article one of the clerks remarked: "Oh! was that your umbrella? It was carried off by a man with red chin whiskers." [Detroit Free Press.

THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS of dollars have been spent in advertising the celebrated Burdock Blood Bitters, but this fact accounts only in part for their enormous sale. Their merit has made them what they are—the best blood medicine ever devised by man.

Fashion Notes.

Black velvet necklets are worn high about the throat and fastened by diamond studs.

Pinked-out flounces of silk are used as a trimming for mantles, bonnets, gowns and parasols.

Pointed bonnet fronts, the large tournures, and high shouldered sleeves are three features of spring toilets.

New over-skirts have a gathered puff at the top and side instead of being flat there, and are worn with very short basques that rest on this puff but do not conceal its fullness.

Fans are to be worn suspended from the waist and en suite with the costume. They are made of figured satine, foulard or Chinese pongee, and are mounted on bamboos or colored wood.

The traveling cloak for young ladies' summer journeys is a cheviot Newmarket closely fitted from neck to foot, with checks of mingled ecru, garnet, brown, and olive. There is a pointed hood with garnet silk lining.

White mull morning dresses are made with a Watteau plait from the shoulders and are trimmed across the front with alternate frills and of lace and embroidery. Salmon or dark-blue changeable satin ribbons are tied in front in many bows.

A tucker of plain white lawn, shirred across with two soft puffs around the neck, fills the pointed or square openings of dress waists; Two puffs also edge the sleeves. If embroidery is preferred it is flat inside the open space, and there are two standing frills around the neck.

Morning growns for the house are made in Mother Hubbard style of pink, buff or blue percale with the yoke, round collar and square cuffs of cream-white Irish-point embroidery. The straight skirt has a deep hem with a bunch of tucks above it, and is buttoned down the front with linen thread buttons.

Dressy basques are cut open in oval shape below the throat and finished off with a standing net collar embroidered with gold, silver or steel beads, and made to project with fine thread-like wires, and fastened by a diamond broach that represent buttons. The sleeves are of lace to the elbow with beaded ruffles, and there are satin creves for epaulets. [N. Y. Tribune.

LET US TELL YOU.

Let us tell you that a person who is bilious or constipated is not a well person who is bilious or constipated is not a well person, and further, that nearly every one is subject to these irregularities. Let us tell you also that Burdock Blood Bitters are one of the finest diuretics and aperients ever yet devised.

Making Beef Tea of a Live Bullock.

"You fellows may talk of hard hands, but I saw Yankee Sullivan in his prime and he used a kind of acid that hardened his hands, so that if you shook hands with him in the dark you'd think you were grasping a blacksmith's anvil. I onct seed him at a country butcherin' down south doin' a thing with that right hand of his that made a lasting impression on me."

"What did he do?" asked the man in the perfumed garments.

"Well, sir, they were about to kill a beef on the farm and they couldn't find an ax with a stiff 'nuff handle for the job, when 'long comes Yank and seein' the quandary they was in 'greed to slay the bullock with his naked fist. All 'greed, and he hauled off and let the bullock have it right 'tween the two eyes. What became of the bullock, do you think?"

"He made for Yank," said one.

"No, sir."

"Dropped," suggested a second.

"More 'an that."

"Was killed?" from a third.

"Well, gents, that bullock was turned right into beef tea, and before they could get 'nuff buckets the ground had soaked it all up." N. Y. World.

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."
148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

[illegible] on his heart a shadow—
Leaving on our lives a stain.

If we knew the clouds above us,
Held by gentle blessings there,
Would we turn away all trembling,
In our blind and weak despair?
Would we shrink from life's shadows
Flitting o'er the dewey grass
If we knew that birds of Eden
Were in mercy flying past.

If we knew the silent story,
Quivering through the heart of pain,
Would we drive it by our coldness,
Back to haunts of guilt again?
Life hath many a tangled crossing,
Joy hath many a break of woe;
But the cheeks, tear-washed, are whitest,
And kept in life are flowers by snow.

Let us reach into our bosoms
For the key to other lives,
And with love toward erring nature,
Cherish good that still survives;
So that when our disrobed spirits
Soar to realms of light above,
We may say "Dear Father, love us,
Even as we have shown our love."

[illegible] MINISTER AT SCRAGG END.

[Sc]ragg End suddenly awoke to the [kno]wledge that it was a village. Hith[erto i]t had clung to the skirts of Ponka[paw]ket and had never thought of a pos[sibi]lity of a separate existence. The [illegible] was poor in that part of the town, [and i]t had been a hard struggle to wring [a liv]ing from it; the place was unhealthy and "as spindlin' as a Scragg End-[illegible]" was a household saying at Ponka[paw]ket.

[Th]ey had a school at Scragg End at [certa]in seasons of the year, because [Ponk]apawket built them a school house [and] appropriated to their use a certain [par]t of the school money, but they did [all] their shopping at Ponkapawket and [depend]ed on that village for those servants [which so]ciety generally regarded as indis[pen]sable, the doctor, the lawyer, and [the] minister. Rather strangely, it was [the] want of the last mentioned of these [serv]ants that awoke Scragg End to a [sen]se of its rights.

[Old] Mis' Critchett, who had been in [ill] health for several months, suddenly [disc]overed that she had a spine in her [back] and was not long for this world, [and] wanted gospel privileges before she [died]. Miss Angelia Lawton, who was [held] in high esteem because her father [had] been the minister of Ponkapawket, [decl]ared that she didn't think the minis[ter] of Ponkapawket, Mr. Ericson, who [now] and then preached in the Scragg [End] school house on a Sunday afternoon [or eve]ning, was "spiritual," because [he w]ore a ring on his finger and she ["did]n't feel to sit under" him any more. [And g]ood old Mrs. Simmons, who walk[ed a]ll the way to Ponkapawket to [chur]ch every pleasant Sunday, said [that] she had always known that "until [it wa]s watered by the droppings of the [sanct]uary Scragg End would never [illegible]."

[So] Scragg End suddenly decided [that in]stead of occasional preaching by [the Ponk]apawket minister it was entitl[ed to a] "stated supply." No longer [illegible] without regular gospel priv[ileges. A]doniram Hewitt, whose father [had been] a deacon, was deputed to [make appl]ication to the proper authori[ties of] that denomination to which [illegible] almost universally belong[ed, for a] minister to supply the Scragg [illegible], or rather a school desk un[til a ch]urch should be built.

[illegible] Hewitt received an encour[aging ans]wer to his application. A very [illegible] talented young preacher, [illegible] from a theological sem[inary] [illegible] be sent to Scragg [End]. [illegible] the older people demur[red] [illegible] much of [illegible] people gener[ally] [illegible] minister much [illegible]

[illegible] were at their [illegible] day when [illegible] son drove [illegible] to bring [illegible]

[illegible] necessary for [illegible] farm. However [illegible] "hired girl" [illegible] Scragg End, and [illegible] Mrs. Hewitt and Roxy, the girl, were famous cooks, and ministers were but men in the manner of eating, however spiritually minded they might be; indeed Miss Hepsy Jackson, who was greatly given to attending county conferences, had declared that "the piouser they were the more they ate." But this was generally regarded as sacrilegious, and it was remembered that Miss Hepsy was not a "professor," though she had such zeal in the matter of county conferences.

Adoniram Hewitt's house presented a holiday appearance on that summer afternoon when Lysander drove over to Ponkapawket station after the minister. [illegible] were flowers everywhere. Mrs. Hewitt had on her best cap, and the pantry shelves were lined with good things to eat, in such quantities that lend one to the belief that Miss Hepsy Jackson's words had their weight. All Scragg End was at its windows and doors. Mrs. Hewitt stood on her doorstep, her cap strings fluttering in the breeze.

"I do hope Lysander hasn't forgotten to get a new box of blacking. Of course the minister will want his boots very shiny," she said to herself.

Just at that moment Lysander drove up with only a girl beside him. What could be the reason the minister had not come? The young lady was a stranger. She had probably come to visit some one at Scragg End, and as there was nobody to meet her at the station, Lysander had brought her over. But he was helping her to alight at their own gate. She was walking up the path. Mrs. Hewitt adjusted her glasses and satisfied herself that the face was unfamiliar. She was a grave and dignified young woman, with a self possessed manner, but with a bright flush upon her face. Why didn't Lysander come up and introduce her, instead of attending to the horse?

"I suppose you were expecting me," said the young lady, extending her hand in a friendly way. "I am the new minister—Miss Barton."

As Mrs. Hewitt afterward declared "you could have knocked her down with a feather." And her overwhelming astonishment was so plainly shown that the new minister became very much embarrassed.

"Of course you knew—certainly you ought to have been told that—that I was a woman," she said.

"We didn't know. Why we never thought of such a thing. They didn't say a word about it," said Mrs. Hewitt, and in her astonishment and dismay she utterly ignored the outstretched hand.

The young lady had a strong and resolute face, but Mrs. Hewitt suddenly became aware that the corners of her mouth were drooping, and there was a hurt as well as weary look in her eyes, and all her motherly compassion was aroused.

"But it don't make any difference, child—I mean ma'am. I've no doubt you can preach as well as half the men We know what is going on in the world, if we do live a good ways out of it; only there never did happen to be a woman preacher anywhere about here, so it took me by surprise. We believe in giving women a fair chance, here in Scragg End, I can tell you."

"I was afraid you might have objection," said the young lady, a smile chasing the weariness out of his face.

"Oh, we shall think everything of you, I've no doubt—after a while. You don't know what it is to be without regular preaching as long as we have. Come right in and get rested and have a cup of tea, for I expect you've had a hard journey."

Before escorting her guest to her room Mrs. Hewitt managed to slip up stairs and slyly abstract Lysander's new shaving set from the toilet table, where she had placed it for the convenience of the new minister.

It is undeniable that at the first receipt of the of the news a general dismay spread through Scragg. End. The older people were disposed to consider that a trick had been played upon them and were angry accordingly, some even going so far as to wish to have Miss Barton told that her services could be dispensed with. But nobody seemed willing to tell her, and there was a great curiosity to hear her preach. There were a few courageous spirits who openly avowed that they saw no reason why a woman should not preach, and they were glad to have one for a minister, and others thought that since she set herself up to be looked at, it was a pity she was not handsomer; some who thought women ought not to preach at all, and others who thought some women might be allowed, but that Miss Barton was not of the right kind. It was tacitly agreed that she should be given a hearing, but a woman minister as a stated supply was not what was wanted.

But in two Sundays Miss Barton conquered Scragg End, except a few of the most prejudiced, who would never own themselves conquered. She was so simple [illegible] so sympathetic. There [illegible]

[illegible] Nobody could [illegible] town's people [illegible] body who [illegible] smarter'n most folks, [illegible] way she seemed just like own folks. And she knew just how folks felt without being told."

Ponkapawket was scandalised. It was a disgrace to the whole town to have a woman preacher holding forth every Sunday, and drawing such crowds—drawing half the congregation away from the Ponkapawket church, too! The deacons requested Mr. Ericson to preach a sermon from [illegible] es." Mr. Ericson was known to hold the women's rights movement in contempt: but he had been twice to hear Miss Barton preach, when there had been no services in his own church, and he had also called upon her several times, and when the deacons conferred with him in regard to the sermon they found it impossible to obtain any satisfaction; he was very polite, and he did not say that he would not, but "he, smiling, put the question by."

One day he surprised Miss Barton by inviting her to an exchange of pulpits for the following Sunday, but that was in harvest time, and she had come to Scragg End in June. Even Ponkapawket had become accustomed to the idea of a woman preacher, if it did not approve of it.

He had found her sitting on the piazza in late September. She had a large basketful of stockings beside her, and was darning them diligently. Some were her own, some were Adoniram Hewitt's and Lysander's, for Roxy had gone away on a visit, and Mrs Hewitt's hands were more than full. She looked as housewifely as if she had never aimed at another sphere. The shadow of a smile flickered about Mr. Ericson's mouth as he observed her employment. Although Miss Barton looked up only as much as politeness required she saw the smile, and it brought a flush to her cheek. Though she looked so strong and resolute, it was evident that Miss Barton was extremely sensitive. He sat down beside her and immediately proffered his request, perhaps as an antidote for the smile.

"Your people would be shocked. They don't approve of me," said Miss Barton, "and I shouldn't have the courage."

"I never suspected you of any want of courage," said Mr. Ericson.

"I am a dreadful coward. I don't think I fully realized it when I began. If I had been sent anywhere but to Scragg End I don't know what I should have done. Here they are humble minded people, without strong predjudices, and I do seem to have found the way to their hearts. But I am afraid I should never dare enter another pulpit—certainly not yours at Ponkapawket."

"You would soon conquer there as you have conquered here," said Mr. Ericson.

"I couldn't endure their unfriendly gaze. I should display all my womanishness. I should blush. I should tremble. I might faint. I should be a stumbling block to the women who are following in the same pathway, I don't mean to be that. My work in Scragg End suffices and I am so thankful for that."

"I am sorry you feel so about Ponkapawket because I have another proposition in my mind much more audacious than the one I made," said Mr. Ericson.

Miss Barton raised her eyes inquiringly and dropped them again under the minister's gaze.

"I thought we might unite the churches." Mr. Ericson's [illegible] trembled a little as if he were afraid.

"I don't see how it could be done," said Miss Barton frigidly.

"Of course there is but one way," said Mr. Ericson quietly. "I dared not ask you to be my wife without suggesting to you that your work need not be given up."

The girl rose to her feet. Lysander's stocking fell from her hand and was blown away unheeded. "I don't know what I have done to deserve this—this insult. I thought that at least you respected me, and I thought my calling made me safe from such attacks altogether.

"I am sorry that you think it an insult. I can hardly see how a man can give you a better proof of his respect than to ask you to become his wife, and as to your calling making you sacred, we don't believe in the celibacy of the clergy you know." In spite of his evident mortification and distress there was a slight twinkle in Mr. Ericson's eye as he said that.

"But I—I am a woman," said Miss Barton, sitting down with her face in her hands.

"The more reason why you should be married," said Mr. Ericson calmly. "You need a protector."

"I am perfectly sufficient for myself. And I shall never care for anybody—anybody—but my work."

Mr. Ericson [illegible]. "I am sorry I troubled you," he said quietly. "I [illegible] back. As she did so she caught sight of Lysander. He was gathering squashes and pumpkins on the little south hill; she saw his figure in silhouette against the sky. He started to come toward the house, and she waited for him—waited until a sudden thought sent a flame of color over her face.

"It can't be," she said half aloud, inquiringly. I will keep that out of my life. I won't be a failure! I won't be! And she rushed up to her room and locked herself in.

She came down as calm and grave as ever when the tea bell rang, and after tea she and Lysander read their daily quantity of Greek, for Lysander was pursuing his studies with renewed avidity since [illegible] had companion to help him, and had not given up his long cherished hope of studying for the ministry, though there seemed no prospect of his being able to leave the farm.

After that day Miss Barton devoted herself more zealously than ever to her work. She darned no more stockings. When she was not writing her sermons, she was visiting the sick, and inducing others to make improvements, sanitary and moral as well as religious.

"She was as practical and efficient as if she was not a woman," many people said; and old Jeremy Grimes, who had wished to tell her when she came that they didn't want a woman preacher, said, "they couldn't have had such women in St. Paul's time, or he never would have written what he did.'

But Mrs. Hewitt had a grievance. Miss Barton didn't seem to make herself one of the family as she used to. She was shut up in her own room almost all the time now, and she and Lysander didn't seem to get along together as they used to. She never came into the kitchen and wanted to help make cake now, or sit with them around the fire in the evening while Lysander read aloud. She "didn't seem to have anything against them, but she wasn't free and sociable any more."

Lysander was teaching school this winter and attending to the farm work in his leisure time. His habit of studying with Miss Barton had gradually died out. To his mother's persistent questionings Lysander replied that neither of them had any time for it now.

Mrs. Hewitt could not make it out. "Pa," who prided himself upon being long-headed, hinted that he could, but he would not say outright what he thought, and his wife regarded his hints with lofty scorn.

One afternoon, after school hours, Lysander went down to the woods back of the house to superintend the operations of some men who were cutting timber. Just at dusk Miss Barton, coming home from a visit to a sick parishioner, encountered four men carrying on an improvised stretcher Lysander's apparently lifeless body. He was lying white and rigid, and there were scarlet spots upon the snow all the way that he had come. Down on her knees in the snow fell Miss Barton and threw her arms around him.

"Oh, my love! my love! have you gone so far away that you cannot hear me say I do love you?" she cried. "I was cold and hard because I thought it was my duty, but if you could only come back——"

And then they had to raise Miss Barton and carry her into the house, for she had fainted.

"That's just what I could have told you a good while ago if I had a mind to," said "Pa," as he whispered the scene to his wife [illegible] "She's a [illegible] if she is a [illegible]

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm. Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

There are only 81 vessels in commission in the United States navy, while there are 1,817 naval officers, nearly sixty to each vessel, and one to every five seamen. This foolishness should be abolished, the sooner the better. Our navy has five times the officers necessary to its management.

Barnum's circus caught fire at Chicago recently. The main tent, dresses and paraphernalia were destroyed. The blaze caught from a lamp and the canvas was consumed like a flash. There was no loss of life. The animals were in another tent and were not injured. The loss is $16,000.

Several of the highest dignitaries of the mormon church arrived at Denver, Col., last Friday. Jos. F. Smith, Brigham Young and August Cannon are in the party. Young says that reports from their laborers in this country and Europe warrant the expectation of 20,000 converts this year.

Information has been received here by the English officers to the effect that war between China and France is beyond question unless France consults China before proceeding further with her harsh policy in Annam. The Imperial Mandarin council has overruled Li Hung Chang in his policy of conciliation and will enforce all of China's rights at once.

Missouri prohibits the sale and manufacture of oleamargerine, and the United States has patented the compound as an article of food. A person arrested for selling this ungracious substitute for butter has appealed to the federal courts for protection, and sets up the plea that as he holds a national patent, he is unlawfully in custody. Hon. Roscoe Conkling is expected to set the court right for the oleamargerine man.

At a meeting of free religious thinkers in Boston the other day, Frederick Douglas was among the speakers. Referring to the rule of the occasion which limited the time of speeches he said he never made a short speech that he was satisfied with and never a long one that anybody else was satisfied with. "I came here" said he "not to speak but to listen, to learn, not to teach; in fact," he added, "I came here merely to give color to the occasion."

The remains of John Howard Payne were on last Friday interred in Oak Hall Cemetery in Washington, D. C., in the beautiful spot provided by W. W. Corcoran, his early friend. The funeral procession included several military companies, the pall bearers, the hearse by four white horses, and fifty carriages containing the relatives and poet of the day, the President, members of the cabinet, and many other officials and prominent citizens who assisted in doing honor to the author of "Home Sweet Home."

J. H. Haverly the well known theatrical manager, has become financially embarrassed. His Brooklyn theatre has been closed by the sheriff, and several others have been run under his name will probably be closed in a similar way. Mr. McConnell who has been Haverly's backer in his New York and Chicago enterprise is trying to settle the matter. Mr. Haverly has been leading a life of dissipation for many years, and it is thought that he has paid more attention to a whisky bottle than he did to his business.

John L. Sullivan, of Boston, the pugilist, has been arrested by his wife on a charge of assault and battery and drunkenness. Last Thursday night he came home intoxicated and damaged furniture to the amount of about $500, and knocked her about the house. It was not until Friday night that she was [illegible]

[illegible] Leslie, with [illegible] Hines. He fired at her twice, the first ball entered her lower jaw and the second the right temple and penetrated the brain, causing death in one hour and a half. Dr. Mercer, who was called, removed the first ball from the back part of the mouth.

The woman died at 11 o'clock. Immediately after Morley shot Mrs. Hine, he placed the revolver behind his right ear and sent a bullet into his brain. He fell dead on the floor. Morley has been an invalid for a number of years and constantly quarreled with the woman who at last became his victim. Last December Mrs. Hines caused his arrest for an assault and battery and Morley was sent to the penitentiary for four months. He then declared that he would have revenge. He was released from the Penitentiary about two weeks ago. The quarrel last night, which ended in this tragedy was about Morley's throwing some slops into an alley-way by the side of the house. Mrs. Morley remonstrated. Morley called her an approbrious name, and when Mrs. Hines told him that he must not call her mother such a name, he went to a bureau in an adjourning bedroom, took out a revolver, and returning to the sitting room, said to Mrs. Hines "I'll fix you," and fired at her as she was running toward the hall door to escape from him. Mrs. Morley, who had run down the stairs, heard two other shots and then raised the alarm.

Morley was forty-two years old. Louis Morley of Rochester and Ezekiel Morley of Vineland, N. J., are his brothers. Mrs. Fargo of Almond street and Mrs. Heath of Cedar street, in this city, are his sisters.

Mrs. Hines was thirty-one years old. Her husband is a stableman in Burns' livery barn. She left five children, and was again about to become a mother.

The bodies were removed to Mullin's undertaking rooms, where the coroner held an inquest.

WICKED PARTNERS.

Edgar Robinson Confesses to the Murder of his Partner Who Later Turns Up Alive.

Last Wednesday, at Great Bend, N. Y., Edgar Robinson gave himself up to the authorities claiming that he and his partner, Mr. Sayles had a disagreement in which he knocked Sayles into the Black river and was drowned. Robinson and Sayles were partners and interested in a patent process to make beet sugar. They often quarrelled over the ownership of the patents. Robinson was brought to Watertown on Thursday and placed in jail.

SAYLES TURNS UP

at Smithville in the town of Henderson, staying with Dr. Clark, an old schoolmate. He says he and Robinson had a fight and he became insensible, and when he came to he was lost in the woods, and the next morning found himself in the south part of the county, sixteen miles from where the fight took place. They, no doubt, had a fight, and both were so frightened afterward that they went in different directions.

Robinson has been released and promises to make it lively for some one.

David S. Baldwin, collector of the village of Oswego Falls has received his warrant for the collection of taxes of that village. He will be at the grocery store of E. M. Baker every Saturday until July 7th for the porpose of receiving taxes at one per cent.

THE TIMES is indebted to Mr. Harry Comstock for one of his "Flying Helgamites," a new fish bait, which was recently placed upon the market. It is pronounced by the most noted fishermen from all parts of the United States as being one of the finest fish baits ever produced, and is meeting with great success.

Mr. Albert Barnes of this village received a telegram Sunday announcing the death of his son Frederick who has been in New York city for the past seven years. He was a man of excellent qualities and habits and his loss will be deeply felt by many friends in this section. A wife and three children survive him. His remains were brought here Monday and interred in Mt. Adnah.

Charles Pfohl was arraigned Saturday morning charged on oath of W. E. Williams, a reporter on the Evening Herald, formerly of THE TIMES, with an assault and battery on the 8th of June. Pfohl denied the charge and a trial of the case was commenced. It was the unanimous verdict that the parsonage is a success, and the society is to be congratulated in having procured so desirable and comfortable quarters for their preacher's home.

The reception itself in point of numbers, personnel, heartiness and real enjoyment was all that could be desired.

As the people came in they were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Markham by the reception committee, Mrs. Emens and Mrs Harroun. Later light refreshments were served to all. About 9 p. m. an ominous call to order portended a change in the programme. E. R. Redhead bravely announced that it was his solemn duty not to talk himself, but to invite others to speak. Whereupon he called out Mr. F. E. Bacon who proceeded to state some of the peculiar attractions to the new pastor in the M. E. church by a very skillfully prepared punning article on the names of members of the society and congregation. He proved to be no respector of persons; for neither Jew nor Gentile, priest nor layman, male nor female, saint nor sinner, escaped the remorseless sweep of his imagination. It was a decided hit—at almost every ones patronymic. Names were twisted and tortured, and ruined, but no bones were broken. The punster is still alive, but some of the hapless victims threten dire vengeance.

Three voices of welcome from the Sunday school were well expressed by Jennie Knight, Mabel Lester and Cora Nelligan. A duet by Mr. F. E. Goodjon and Miss Cora Foster extended in words of song a hearty greeting to the occupants of the parsonage. Rev. Mr. Riggs and Rev. Mr. Dow also responded cordially and happily to the invitation to add a word of welcome, after which Rev. Mr. Markham in behalf of himself and family thanked all present for their kind words and looks of welcome and cheer and expressed the hope that the relations of pastor and people so pleasantly inaugurated might prove of mutual benefit, and result in the further spread of pure and undefiled religion in the hearts and lives of all the people.

In his brief pastorate thus far Mr. Markham has made a most favorable impression, proving himself to be a refined gentleman, an earnest and interesting preacher and an active pastor. He has already made many friends and is destined to make many more.

J. W. Pratt's New Vault.

A few days since we took a view of the substantial vault just erected by J. W. Pratt in Mt. Adnah cemetery. It is entirely completed and presents a handsome appearance. It is built of Onondaga limestone from the Indian reservation. The foundation walls extend four feet below the surface and are two feet thick. The main stones on each side of the entrance weigh about three tons each. Inserted in each is a polished granite tablet about two feet square. Outside the extreme width of the front is twenty-two feet. It is from the floor to the top of the cross by which it is surmounted about sixteen feet high. There is an outside summer door and double marble doors suspended from two hinges of brass and shutting with perfect fit. The vestibule is about six feet by seven feet and seven and one half feet high. The floor is of colored tile forming a center piece and border. The top of the vestibule is one huge stone eight feet by nine and seven inches thick. Above this are two stones resting on the walls. The entire top is covered with stone in this manner and above the stone is a layer of concrete, above this is a layer of Portland cement and then another of asphalt. After which comes dirt and sod. There are nine receptacles for coffins. They are all eight feet deep and six of them are twenty-eight inches wide by two feet high and three are two feet square. A stone eleven feet long, two feet wide and eighteen inches thick at the top bears the name of Pratt. Above this are the figures 1883. It commends itself so fully to those who have examined it critically that several parties are contemplating building similar vaults. Mr. Wm. Crabtree of Syracuse is the builder and done himself great credit.

Perhaps the multitudes who will visit the Art Gallery at 45 South Salina street this week will be able, after close consideration of the works of art in painting and sculpture and kindred methods of developing the artistic genius, not omitting the art of arts on such occasions displayed by the "hanging committee," arrive at the conclusion that the poet fully understood his theme, and hit upon the secret of success. "Burt" Webster has purchased the old French street sprinkler and will commence work on the streets next Monday. Mr. Webster is energetic, and will undoubtedly be well patronized.

Mrs. B. M. Davis of Oswego Falls has secured one of the stores in Stephen's opera house block and will open ice cream parlors. Mrs. Davis has an excellent reputation for making this luxury, and will undoubtedly receive a large patronage.

Business in Mrs Ney's news room has been steadily increasing. While in conversation with Mr. Ney he informed the TIMES that during the month of May he sold 6100 daily papers and 3200 weeklies. This is over double the amount of business ever done heretofore.

It has always been the custom to have one of the clergymen of this village deliver a sermon before the graduating class of school district No. 2. Rev. J. S. Riggs has had the honor bestowed upon him, and will deliver the sermon before the class Sunday evening, June 24th, in Stephen's opera house.

A young married lady residing on Seneca street after returning from the M. E. reception last Friday evening and retiring, dreamed that her two children were locked up in an upper room at the parsonage and started for their rescue in her haste jumping out of a chamber window and did not awaken until she was well on her way upon the street.

Mr. M. Dundon of Mexico was in town yesterday looking after the interest of a telephone line which is being talked of between Fulton and Mexico. He thinks that the company wants a guarantee of too much business, and fears that the project will fizzle. It seems as if a telephone line, if properly managed might be worked up, and be made a paying investment.

Preparing for the Celebration.

A large number of the citizens of this village congregated last Friday evening in the Lewis house parlors for the purpose of making arrangements for a celebration on the Fourth of July. The scheme seems to meet the approval of most of our citizens, and the first steps were taken by making N. H. Gilbert chairman and Eugene V. Lathrop secretary. The following general committee was appointed to make arrangements:

J F Herrick, William Waugh, G S Piper, G V Emens, N H Gilbert, I C Curtiss, W C Stephens, H S Gardner, W A Hall, E W Ross, Willard Johnson, H P Poucher, Patrick Cullen, George Smiddy, W S Nelson, D Ramsden, Slater Laycock, A Amdurskey, John H Cavanaugh, Con Murphy, W C Wheeler, J W Pratt, M A Stewart, C R Nichols, S B Mead, Joseph LaLonde, J H Case, G M Case, Amos Yeomans, A Howe, H C Howe, Simeon Osborne.

A committee consisting of Wm G Betts, J H Case, H B Poucher and H C Gardner were appointed for soliciting. The meeting adjourned to meet Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the office of Dr. Emens.

Every one who attended seemed to be enthusiastic in the matter, and professed a willingness to take hold of it with earnestness. The probability is, we celebrate.

Friday afternoon Daniel Dorrity, aged 36, went swimming in the Erie canal at Syracuse. He swam once or twice across the canal, then pulled himself upon the tow path and was on the point of sitting down to rest when a cramp seized him. He fell back into the canal and was drowned.

In Oswego Monday morning about three o'clock Glynn & Moore's heading factory on West First between Cayuga and Seneca streets, was discovered to be on fire and an alarm was promptly sent in from box 35. After a long search which was impeded by the smoke, the fire was discovered in the kilns situated just over the boiler containing forty thousand pieces of heading which was almost ready to take out. After an hour and a half of hard work, the department succeeded in getting the fire under control, but not until the entire stock of heading on hand had been ruined and the rear of the building badly burned. The mill had been left in charge of the fireman for the night, but at 2:30, after seeing that everything was in order, he walked down to the steamboat dock to see if the Rupert had arrived and before his return the fire was discovered. The building was owned by Mannister Worts and insured for $3,500.

Glynn and Moore estimate their loss by fire and smoke at $3,500; insured for $3,300. The mill employed twenty hands who will be out of employment at least two weeks.

William J. Lovejoy has received the appointment of town clerk, made vacant by the resignation of Joseph Francis. The office will be held in Fulton Saving's Bank where Mr. Lovejoy is acting as bookkeeper. The appointment is a good one.

J. M. Howe has rented VanBuren's Island and will fix the grounds up with swings and croquet setts. He will also have boats and fishing tackle to let. The Island will be kept in first-class shape, and no pains will be spared to make everything pleasant for his guests.

Miss Amelia Thomson, daughter of A. M. Thomson died this morning at three o'clock at the residence of her father in Granby Centre of consumption, age 37 years. She has been a sufferer for a long time. The best of physicians have been employed, but impossible to save her. She was a lady much respected and beloved by all who knew her.

The original Fisk University Jubilee Singers will be at the Opera House Thursday evening, August 28th, 1883. The proprietor announces that he has engaged this splendid company for one entertainment to close the season at the above stated time and place. Details hereafter. Reserved seats to any part of the house, 50 cents. Sale commences Monday, June 18, at 10 a. m. at Watson's.

The excise board of Oswego Falls express a determination to enforce the excise law, and propose to make a warm time for those who violate it. They commenced it in good earnest last Thursday by swearing out a warrant for Fred Stoddard who confessed to selling one glass of liquor. He was brought before police Justice Betts and was fined $50. If a saloon keeper only receives ten cents for a drink of whisky and has to suffer the penalty of $50 fine, it will probably remind them of the old addage, "The way of the transgressor is hard." Mr. Stoddard has been sued in Supreme Court by Mrs. Thomas Simpson for damages, she claiming her husband has been seriously injured in the quarrel that took place in Stoddard's hotel a week ago.

Last Wednesday very dark clouds gathered around Fulton, giving us warning of a severe storm. but fortunately the wind shifted and the heaviest portion of the storm passed over, although it rained here slightly. In South Granby the rain fell in torrents almost in sheets; lightning struck the barn of Mr. Thomas Quade setting it on fire. The building and contents were entirely consumed, including two horses, three calves, buggies, cutters, farming tools, feed, etc. The barn was insured for $600, the horses for $200, which will not begin to cover the loss. There was no wind of any account. The loss over and above insurance was about $500.

Several Fultonians were up the river at a place known as the square docking, say it was the most teriffic storm they ever witnessed in this vicinity.

A few friends and relations assembled at the residence of N. H. McCracken last Wednesday to witness the marriage ties of Mr. William Gillespie and Miss Charlotte McCracken, Rev. J. S. Riggs officiating. The presents were as follows: Celluloid set and case of perfumery from the groom; set of furniture, marble top table from the brides' parents; a horse and china tea set from the groom's parents; a water set from Mr. and Mrs. Whitaker, brother and sister of the groom; a silver butter dish; from Mr. and Mrs. Ferris, brother and sister of the groom; silver spoon, forks and knives from Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McCracken of Indianapolis, Ind., brother and sister of the bride; a silver spoon holder from N. E. McCracken, brother of the bride; an embroidered handkerchief and panel pictures from Miss Alice McCracken of Onondaga Valley; silver pie knife from Mr. Fred Gillespie of Oswego, pickle castor from Mr. and Mrs Mack of New Haven, N Y; pair of vases from Mr and Mrs House of New Haven; silver berry spoon, from Miss House of New Haven; silver standard vase from May Duncan of Syracuse and other useful gifts.

[illegible] majority of those afflicted with small-pox had been vaccinated. Although there is a law in England, passed in [illegible], compelling every one to be vaccinated, three epidemics have occurred since that time and the statistics proved that during these periods the ratio between the increase of population and the increase of small-pox was largely in favor of the latter. In England 97½ per cent. and in Prussia 94 per cent. of the population are vaccinated and one half of these are attacked by the disease. The compulsory vaccination laws which are on our statute books, said the lecturer, are in opposition to and in direct violation to God's law and ought to be trampled under the feet of freedom.

The lecture was highly interesting and elicited encomiums from all who had the good fortnne to attend.

Another Merchant.

The dissatisfied merchant last week seemed to create considerable excitement.

Another merchant who is going to remain in Fulton says:—

A man who is not up and alive, sufficient to hold his trade ought to lose it. Give your business a boom, display your goods, sell cheap, and say thank you! to those who do buy, if only a spool of thread, and the people will come and keep coming, and bye and bye will bring all their neighbors.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Several new factories were registered Monday and the samples of cheese laid out on the table for the inspection of the buyers showed an improvement in the quality of the offering. There were two buyers present from New York city which greatly pleased the salesmen and had much to do with the pleasant smiles of those who had cheese to sell in the face of an overburdened market. The cheese which went to the seaport last week arrived in rather bad condition owing to the weather. Cable has declined two shillings, showing an unfavorable condition of affairs across the water. There were twenty-one factories registered with an offering of 1222 boxes. The prices paid were at the top for all lots of creamery. Several factories did not register, and some sales were made that were not recorded. The offering of the milk association was consigned.

AT UTICA.

While the Market Monday was unusually active it closed much earlier than usual, showing there was no disposition on the part of salesman to hold back their cheese on account of the decline. There eems to be a probability that the make of cheese is to be larger this year than for two or three years past, and it is necessary to dispose of fodder cheese. Next week there will be more or less grass cheese offered—in fact no one will acknowledge that he has anything else to offer. By looking back for several years we discover that this is always the heaviest week in June when hay cheese is cleaned up. This and no other is the feature of to-day. There is no great confidence that an upward turn is yet to come. So much depends on the amount of the make and the steadiness of foreign demand, that it is useless to speculate on results until these factors become better developed. At present the outlook is for lower prices, and some people talk about 8c. as a possible price this summer. But we should be very loth to believe that cheese would touch that price this season. And unless there there should be much more made than it is likely there will be, there would seem to be no good reason why it should sell for any such price.

Transactions to-day have been as follows: 118c at 10¼c.7329 at 10½c.; 434 at 10⅝c.; 1155 at 10¾c.; 239 at 10⅞c.; 72 at 11c. and 310 at p. t. Sales 10,723; commissions, 2026; total, 12,749. Ruling price 10½c. The sales to-day show that the old flush times on the Utica market are returning.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The day opened warm and sultry Monday, as it has been for much of the time for the past few days, and buyers were inclined to be pretty moderate in their purchases, inasmuch as the low and medium grades taken last week did not turn out as well as expected in New York. But in the afternoon the weather turned decidedly cooler and it doubtless had some effect upon the ideas of buyers who were contemplating pur chasing cheese for New York. Early in the day bids were 10 and 10¼c., and it was said that these were the best figures but later, buyers appeared more ready and did take liberal amounts all around. It is admitted on all hands that feed is remarkably good and cows are increasing in the yield of milk. Some of the sales named at 10¾c. were disputed, but we give them as we believe they actually occurred. They were very fine cheese and we think they were white. Following is the list of transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
1	87	9⅞
7	233	10

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

TRADE MARK

For Man & Beast

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

Fulton Feb. 1st, 1883.

[illegible] dangerous illness of his only sister, a beautiful and intelligent young lady. After the death of the loved one the mother became delirious, and for two weeks her life was in danger. At last she became convalescent, and the young man returned to his studies.

He was soon sent to the dissecting room, and assigned a subject. Fellow students instructed him in the use of the scalpel knife, and then, after wandering about among the tables covered with human bodies until the terrible odor was almost unbearable, he was about to leave the room, when attracted by the remarks of two students upon a subject. One of them asked him whether he thought the dead person's teeth were genuine or false. With hesitation he stepped up to the table, then with a terrible shriek fell insensible to the floor. The body was that of his idolized sister.

Brain fever ensued, and for many weary weeks the stricken parents watched for some sign of recognition. In his delirium he struggled furiously to escape from his nurses, and then becoming exhausted, would piteously ask: "Why won't you rescue my darling sister?" He was reduced to a skeleton when the crisis came. One day he asked his mother, with apparent intelligence, for a drink of water. As she handed it to him he denied wanting it. The mother watched him closely and soon perceived that her fears were realized, and her son's mind had fled.

The broken-hearted parents were at last obliged to place their afflicted son in a private insane asylum. At each of their visits to him he recognized them, but rebuked them for not allowing him to go free and rescue his sister from the harm that he imagines threatens her.

American Society.

American society, as now carried on, is maintained solely for the benefit of young girls, and is generally little better than a marriage mart. The parents launch their offspring as well as possible, and display their wares to the greatest advantage, but the business of the market is carried on chiefly by the young girls themselves, instead of by their mothers, as in England and Europe. There is no special objection to this method of transacting the business, but it is preposterous that young girls and their affairs should overshadow and shut out everything and everybody else. The result of this absorption in one class and one pursuit is that American society is often insufferably dull and flat. It is made up too exclusively of ignorant girls and their attendant boys. Half the education of a cultivated woman is of course that which is derived from society and from the world; and yet American society is almost wholly given up to the business of entertaining and marrying those who are necessarily wholly destitute of such an education. Another effect of the prevalence of social principles of this description, is the supremacy of that more rustic and unattractive of habits, the pairing system, which converts society into a vast aggravation of tete-a-tetes. This prevails all over the world to a greater or less extent, but it should never reign supreme. The upshot of the whole thing with us is to drive out of society nearly all married people,—for marriage under such a system is destructive of social value; nearly all unmarried women over 25 are thought to have overstayed their market; and, finally, a considerable portion of the unmarried men of 30 and upwards. In other words, except at few large balls and receptions, all the best and most intelligent part of society is usually lacking. It has been pushed aside, and is obliged to find all its social amusements in small coteries of its own. This retirement is of course voluntary, because the pairing system ruins general society, and makes it, in fact, impossible in the best and truest sense. A clever young Englishman not long ago expressed his surprise at the fact that whenever he asked who a lady of a certain age, as the French say, might be, he was invariably told, not that she was Mrs. Blank, but that she was the mother of Mrs. Blank. The girl, like the boy, is properly the most insignificant member of society. When a young man goes forth into the world he starts at the bottom of the ladder, and works his way up. The same rule should apply to young ladies in society. They have their place, and it is an important one; but they should not start in social life at the top, and then slowly descend. Such a system is against every law of nature or art, with its concomitant of universal tete-a-tetes, makes really attractive general society impossible. We place the social pyramid upon its apex, instead of upon its base, and then wonder that it is a poor, tottering and unlovely object.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

[illegible] was his sense of fitness outraged by a lack of completeness and order which would have driven the farmer of the Middle States into an insane asylum. There was a sort of laxity about his methods which was hard for the northern man to distinguish from slothfulness. Yet he watched with care the development of the crops, the progress of his work, and was no doubt a better director of labor than could generally be found upon the northern farm. With ignorant labor and crude machinery he achived good results. It is especially with regard to the domestic life of the South, however, that false ideas prevailed at the North. The planter's family has always been credited with hospitality of a lavish, careless, kind, but a very small proportion of the people of the North have ever supposed that the planter's wife was very generally a Martha of the most anxious and troubled variety. The difference of method betwixt the northern and southern housekeeper has been so great that the former has very often been inclined to elevate a dainty nose in scorn of any professed acquirements of the latter. So too, the hurly-burly of our northern life; its sharp competition and the constant influx of the outside world has been such as to predispose us to underestimate the charming domesticity of the southern home. It is not often as strictly ordered or administered with that anxiety with regard to detail that characterizes the northern household, yet there is rarely to be found a more faithful purveyor of comforts than the mistress of a southern plantation. The very isolation of plantation life, the rarity of strangers' visit and the care with which even the most distant family ties are remembered and acknowledged in that section, all tend to make the domestic life of the better class of the South very charming and delightful.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."

Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."

River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."

[illegible] that Nature smiles,
[illegible] have frowned and darkled, yester-morn,
She may to-morrow look on joy with scorn;
But now she woos us with a thousand wiles.

Caprice controls her moods for it is May.
I heard her ominous mutterings form the hill
Grow loud and louder; then with shuddering chill
She drowned the faintly-smiling summer day.

And then her awful voice in volleys broke
Forth from her lurid lips; her angry tread
Shook all the mighty earth. I watched, read
Her purpose in her flashing eyes, then spoke:
"O, mighty nature hearken to my cry!
Take me to your great arms and let me sleep!
My slumber would so peaceful be, and deep
On your broad breast. My mother, hear, reply!"

Great nature held her breath: a waiting calm
Pervaded the whole earth. Then fell her tears,
And gently blotted out those troubled years.
My heart ceased smarting 'neath the cooling balm.

Then came her sweet reply, so kind and low:
"Wait child of change, till I a place prepare;
Let not your heart be troubled—peace be there.
With patience wait." Her tears had ceased their flow.

Her golden glory gleamed o'er land and sea:
She dashed the tear drops from her laughing eyes,
Then glanced around, with sweet and glad surprise,
At drops still glistening upon ground and tree.

When nature wept with me those human tears,
"Surely, thought I, she owns me for her child.
Now hope comes with her strong calm breath, so mild.
Her love will linger o'er weary years.

Fashion Notes.

The silk Surahs and those with satin face, worn last year, still remain popular.

The newest Spanish lace is the Escurial, with its figures outlined with heavy cord or braid.

The stalks of flowers must be as visible in all flower garnitures as the flowers and leaves.

Bows and bouquets are more frequently worn on one side of the throat than directly in front.

The Mother Hubbard slip, without sleeves, and low in the neck, worn over an under waist, or gumpe, remains a popular dress for little girls.

A novelty in Surah silks is weaving them in checks of two colors in strong contrast, such as red with green or blue. These are used for entire dresses.

The sheer mull squares that are so pleasant to wear in summer as neckerchiefs, now have a printed vine of natural colors just above the hem, or large flowers strewn all over the square.

High linen collars are made with a very narrow rolled over piece at the top, on which is a fine vine of embroidery, and the plain space below this is covered by a neck ribbon of a becoming color.

Fashions show a novel device for the ornamentation of a dress skirt. It is to work the wearer's initials in a monogram on the plain front breadth. As a rule the design is so embellished and obscure that the letters are not readily traced and the figure passes for something merely ornamental.

A return to the fashions of six or seven years ago is the use of low-priced black silks for traveling dresses. Small ribbed black gros grains are made up in severely plain dresses for this purpose, and are worn on short journeys when a lady wishes to be quite well dressed, and on very long journeys where sudden changes of temperature are encountered.

The styles at present, says the New York Sun, are suitable for all; whoever has a good figure can display it; whoever has not may wear a fuller gown; whoever has a well-formed head and pretty young face may wear a little [illegible] bonnet; whoever has fallen [illegible] and wrinkled jaws, a large head [illegible] looks may wear a close capote, [illegible] tie down under the chin.

[illegible] have women dressed with more [illegible] street than they do at present. It is now considered execrable [illegible] anything but the plainest [illegible] jewelry of any kind, [illegible] is considered vulgar, [illegible] only a fashion [illegible] of the few good [illegible]. On all other occasions [illegible] as much [illegible] of dis[illegible]. In fact, house[illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] The watcher had [illegible] little ragged [illegible], who frequently [illegible] through the park as soon as the gates were open, but as she always emerged at the gate of exit empty-handed, and her scanty skirts showed no sign of a bulging pocket beneath, suspicion did not [illegible]. Nevertheless, she proved to be the offender. It was [illegible] ends, that she should wear an old bonnet many sizes too large for her, and it was in the capacious crown of this article of headgear that the stolen flowers were bestowed. The gardner saw her pause at a bed, and, after looking warily about, produce from her bosom a piece of slate fit for digging with, and then she knelt down, and, taking off her bonnet, to which half a dozen tiny roots were rapidly transferred, she placed it on her head again and went on her way, to be presently stopped in a fright and accused of the petty robbery. It was useless to deny it, nor did she attempt to do so. She went down on her knees, however—this time without producing the criminating piece of slate—and begged the park-keeper not to take her to the police station, because, if her mother who was ill in bed came to hear what she had done it would kill her. Presuming that it was much more likely that the child's story was but an artful pretense, and that probably her mother had sent her to steal the flowers to be afterward converted into button-hole bouquets for sale in the streets, the little girl was taken before a magistrate and put back a while for inquiries to be made. The address she gave was at a house in a squalid back street in the borough—at least a couple of miles from the park where she had purloined the snowdrops, and it was soon discovered that the tale the child had told as to her mother being ill was quite true. The poor creature was found confined to her bed in a dark and miserably furnished back room, and there she had lain dying of consumption since last winter set in. The father was in prison, and the sick woman's only means of support were her two children, respectively two and four years older than the child in custody, and they all earned a few pence each daily by selling cigar lights near London Bridge. At a glance it was evident what had become of the stolen flowers. A piece of board was fastened shelf-wise across the foot of the sick woman's bedstead, and on it, in three or four old gallipots, were as many bunches of crocuses, snowdrops, and wall flowers, each in a setting of green grass. The poor invalid had not the least suspicion that they had been dishonestly obtained, and the person inquiring being in unofficial costume and perceiving her condition charitably refrained from enlightening her. "You are looking at my garden, sir," her white face lighting with a wan smile. "They are wild flowers, sir, so my little gal tells me, but she has to go ever so far to pick 'em. When the winter weather went away and the sun came out I began to feel that craving for the sight and smell of fresh flowers that I couldn't express if I tried. It is through lying here so many weeks so dreary and dull and so many hours all by myself, I suppose; but I knew it was no use thinking about 'em at the price they are when they first come in the spring, though I couldn't help talking and saying that if I had a few I felt sure that they would do me more good than all the physic. And so, without saying a word to anybody, my little Kitty—a mere mite of 7, sir,—she gets up at five in the morning, and before breakfast time she's back with as pretty a bunch as ever you set eyes on. They didn't last very long, poor things, in this stuffy little room, and it seems almost a shame to bring 'em here out of the fields where they grow, but there's thousands of 'em there Kitty tells me, and I don't think that those who have their health to go and see 'em growing would grudge me just a few brought away for my share." "No one certainly would, supposing the little girl you speak of comes by them honestly," the visitor ventured. "No fear about that, sir," replied the sick mother confidently. "Why, I happened only to hint something like what you just said when she brought home the first lot, and she fell crying so that I didn't know what to do with her." So the kind hearted park official came away with his original purpose unfulfilled, and the magistrate being informed of the circumstances discharged the terrified little prisoner with a caution. Whether she ran home and made confession I cannot say; but unless she did so within a week it was too late, for at the end of no longer an interval the [illegible], and it was my privilege to [illegible] in placing Kitty and her two [illegible]

Dr Dio [illegible] health and vigor in the metropolis. He is a living exponent of his teachings, and notwithstanding the amount of work he has already done, promises still greater activity for years to come. He received the interviewer most courteously, and in reply to a question said:

"It is true I come to New York to establish a monthly magazine. I have come here for the same reason that I went to Boston 25 years ago. Then Boston was the best platform in the country from which to speak of education. New York has now become most hospitable to progressive thoughts and especially so to movements on behalf of physical training.

"I have reason to know the great and abiding interest of the American people on this subject. They have come to realize that the future of our country pivots upon the vigor of our women. My new magazine will bear the title 'Dio Lewis's Monthly' and be devoted to Sanitary and Social Science. I hope through its pages to inaugurate a new departure in hygiene."

"Have you not written several books on the subject?"

"Yes, nine volumes, and some of them like "Our Girls," published by the Harpers, have had an enormous circulation, but the best work of my life I shall give the world in the new magazine. Forty years of skirmishing ought to conclude with ten years of organized warfare."

"Doctor what is the occasion of this new interest in health questions?"

"It has come through suffering, which seems to be the only road to sell knowledge. The stomach, heart, kidneys or liver fall into trouble, happiness is gone, and then people give attention to their health." "Which of these organs is most frequently the victim of our errors?" asked the reporter.

"Within the last few years disease of the kidneys have greatly multiplied. When I was engaged in practice, thirty-five and forty years ago, serious disease of the kidneys was rare; but now distressingly frequent and fatal."

"To what do you attribute this great increase of kidney troubles?"

"To the use of stimulating drinks, adulterated food and irregular habits of life."

"Doctor, have you any confidence in the remedy of which we hear so much now-a-days, 'Warner's Safe Cure?"

"I believe in the ounce of prevention rather than a ton of cure."

"But have you noticed the remarkable testimonials of Warner's remedy?"

"I have, and confess that they have puzzled and astonished me. The commendations of proprietary medicines usually come from unknown persons residing in back counties. But I see in our most reputable newspapers the warmest praise of Warner's Safe Cure from College Professors, respectable physicians, and other persons of high intelligence and character. To thrust such testimony aside may be professional, but it is unmanly. No physician can forget that valuable additions to our materia medica have sprung from just such scources. I was so impressed with this cloud of witnesses that I purchased some bottles of Warner's Safe Cure at a neighboring drug store, and analyzed one of them to see if it contained anything poisonous. Then I took three of the prescribed doses at once, and found that there was nothing injurious in it. I do not hesitate to say that if I found my kidneys in serious trouble, I should use this remedy, because of the hopelessness of all ordinary treatment, and because when a hundred intelligent and reputable persons unite in the statement that a certain remedy has cured them of a grave malady, I choose to believe they speak the truth.

"But as you may know, my great interest in life lies in prevention. For 40 years I have labored in this field. One of the phases of my work in New England was the establishment of the ladies' seminary at Lexington Mass. My aim was to illustrate the possibilities in the physical training of girls during their school life. This institution became before I left it, the largest and most successful Seminary for young ladies owned and managed by one person, in our country. I sit down to dinner every day with a family of two hundred persons. The remarkable results of this muscle training among girls, were given in my paper published in the North American Review of December 1883.

"Besides I established the Norman Institute for physical training in Boston, and for ten years was its president and manager. Dr Walter Channing, Dr Thomas Hoskins, Professor Leonard, and others were among its teachers, and more than four hundred persons took its diploma and went out into all parts of the land to teach gymnastics. And now the years left to me I propose to devote to the magazine which I have come here to establish. It will be the largest periodical ever devoted to this field of literature, and will present the hundred and one questions of hygine with the simplicity of a child's talk. To this end all so-called learning will be subordinated. The magazine will be more or less illustrated, and will strive to reach a high place in the confidence and hearts of the people. In a few weeks our first number will appear, and we shall [illegible] [illegible]

There was a narrow escape from a mixedness in connection with the Memorial church wedding the other evening which was appalling to contemplate. After a few of the more favored guests had been admitted and the ushers were preparing to seat the crowd a small party entered led by a young man with a look of expectation on his brow and considerable baggage in his hands. He was asked by the sexton if he would leave his impediments in the chapel, to which he consented, and he then remarked in a matter of fact way: "I suppose this is the Episcopal church." "No sir," answered the sexton. "But you don't mean to say this isn't Christ church where I told the hackman to take me, and where there is to be a rehearsal for a wedding to-night?" "I mean to say rejoined the sexton, "that this is the Memorial church, that we are all ready for a wedding and are expecting the bride and groom every minute." "How can I get where I belong?" gasped the stranger. "I think you will have to take a horse car if your hack has gone," was the reply. But the unwitting intruder could not brook a horse car, and so he rushed to the door and struck a bargain with a hackman who had brought some guests to the wedding to take his party and baggage to the Chestnut street sanctuary. He was married there the next day, and is doubtless happy. But if he has any spare moments for reflection during the honeymoon, he may wonder why the Springfield hackmen are so oblivious to religious distinctions as to make life temporarily unpleasant for a metropolitan journalist.

A young man dressed in the height of fashion with a poetic turn of mind, was driving on a country road, and upon gazing on a pond which skirted the highway said: "Oh, how I would like to lave my heated head in those cooling waters!" An Irishman, overhearing the exclamation, immediately replied: "Be-dad you might lave it there and it would not sink."

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
Stem Winding Open Face Case,
MANUFACTURED BY THE
AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

Those watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these cases in both gold and silver, and is a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case. Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

[illegible] shocking accident [illegible] this week. This time [illegible] shown. Twelve hundred [illegible] assembled in the galleries of the Victoria Hall, Sunderland, England, where a conjurer was giving his performance. On the stairs was a narrow door, twenty inches wide through which only one person could pass. The children leaving the hall hurried through this door; one child fell; the rest were precipitated over him, and 197 of them were trampled to death. With the Brooklyn bridge tragedy fresh in mind this new horror seems even more terrible.

The Nutt-Dukes murder is again brought into public notice by the shooting of Dukes by James Nutt, a son of the murdered man. The trouble originated in an attempt by N. L. Dukes, a promising young lawyer of Uniontown, Pa., to defame the daughter of Capt. A. C. Nutt, to whom he was engaged to be married. This angered the father and letters containing threats passed between him and Dukes. They finally met by appointment in a room in a hotel and a scuffle ensued. They were separated and while being held apart by bystanders, Dukes deliberately drew a revolver and shot Nutt. Dukes was tried and acquitted. To say that the verdict was received with disgusted surprise gives but a faint notion of the feeling that was aroused. Dukes was disbarred by the Fayette county bar and was forced to resign from the Pennsylvania legislature, to which he had been elected. James Nutt, the son, is a quiet young man of about 21 years and it was feared that he would avenge his father's death which he has done. Though the provocation was great he cannot be commended for taking the law into his own hands but, as the New York Herald wisely remarks, the State "can neither acquit nor convict him without subjecting itself to new disgrace." Dukes had declared that he would either live in Uniontown or in the cemetery. He has found his permanent abode.

The notorious Star Route trial was brought to a close Tuesday by a verdict of not guilty from the jury, which was a surprise to the country generally. The first trial of this great State case began one year ago Thursday and lasted three months and one day. It ended in a scandal. The jury disagreed on all the prisoners but two of the least important and this partial verdict was set aside by Judge Wylie. There were charges and counter charges by both prosecution and defence that the jury had been tampered with until the public were led to doubt whether an honest jury could be found to try the case. But the government seemed determined to bring these men to justice and the second and last trial commenced December 4, 1882. That Dorsey, Brady, and the rest are guilty of a semi-legal robbery of the treasury, very few people doubt. It is an easy matter now to censure judge, jury and the counsel, but the case against the defendants involved difficulties of proof which rendered it a task of great skill and labor to establish their guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. The defendants and their counsel, of whom Mr R. J. Ingersoll stands pre-eminent, are of course highly elated over the result. The government's case was in the hands of the ablest lawyers in the country, and though they may be chagrined at their defeat they may feel somewhat ameliorated in having an ample financial reward for their services during the trial, Attorney-General Brewster received a total of $5,000; Colonel Bliss $46,206,18; Mr Cook $6,949,18; Mr Gibson $5,000; Mr Ker $27,872,48; Mr Merrick $29,000; Detective Pinkerton $9,949,64, making a grand total of $129,979,48. Besides this there were numerous other expenses which the government was obliged to incur and but for the vindication of the dignity of the law it would have been far cheaper for the government to have congratulated these rogues upon their success in plundering the treasury and bid them go their way than to have undertaken the trial. There is some satisfaction however in the fact that the cost to the defendants has been nearly as great as to the government and was largely borne by Messrs. Dorsey and Brady.

Hewitt, tenor; Messrs Jas. Hoff, M. C. Highriter and John Swan, basso; Mrs. F. D. VanWagenen, jr., presided at the organ.

The exercises were opened by an anthem, "Give thanks unto the Lord," followed by a fervent prayer, offered by Rev. Mr. Koons. Then the choir sang the hymn "Come Thou Almighty King," and the sixth chapter of Second Chronicles was read by Rev. Mr. Fahnestock. The dedicatory anthem, "Praise ye the Lord," followed. Rev. Dr. Upson then delivered the following eloquent sermon:

DR. UPSON'S SERMON.

Dr. Upson spoke from Acts 14-13 "Long time therefore abode they, speaking boldly in the Lord which gave testimony to the word of his grace and granted signs and wonders to be done by their hand." He said: God confirmed the truth which the apostles preached. And these miracles in the acts of the apostles are just what Christ had promised that his apostles themselves should work.

I dare say that many of us, as we have read the 17th and 18th verses in the last chapter in the gospel of Mark have thought that these farewell prophecies of our Lord refer to some remote future time and to what is to be done by his disciples. As we read "those signs shall follow them that believe; in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover." As we have read this last prophecy of our lord in connection with the subsequent Acts of the Apostles, we may not have noticed how immediate and remarkably exact was its fulfillment.

These final prophecies of our risen and ascended Lord were exactly fulfilled in the time of the Apostles with such remarkable precision that if we did not know to the contrary, we might imagine the prophecy recorded by Mark was written after the Acts of the Apostles recorded by Luke. In the name of Jesus, the Apostles did cast out devils; just after the death of Ananias and Saphira in Solomon's porch "those who were vexed with unclean spirits were healed every one" by the Apostle Peter, and afterwards by Philip and twice afterwards by the Apostle Paul. They did speak with new tongues on the day of Pentecost and afterwards under the preaching of Peter at Coererea, and under the preaching of Paul at Ephesus. And in the island of Melita we hear of one instance in which Paul took up a serpent and suffered no harm. They "did lay hands on the sick and they did recover." The devout Ananias laid his hands on the blinded eyes of the converted Paul and "he recovered forthwith his sight;" and this same Paul laid hands upon the sick Publius and healed him. No wonder the people brought forth their sick into the streets and laid them on beds and couches that at least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow them. Thus the Lord gave almost immediate contemporaneous testimony unto the word of His grace. The apostles were not limited to the evidence afforded by miracles of Jesus in the past; nor to some hopeful prophecies in the future. Our Lord did not send out His representatives into the world and desert them.

Neither does he desert his church now! To each and every age God is adapting evidence appropriate to the period itself. In these days he is giving testimony unto the word of His grace. In these days He is confirming His word with signs following. We have no reason to believe in modern miracles. I have no faith in them and yet some very thoughtful, calm and sensible people have believed in them. But for me they are not sufficiently authenticated. I have no faith in modern miracles. Yet we have no reason to doubt, we have every reason to believe that God is continually confirming the truth of the gospel by evidences accompanying its proclamation. "Christian evidences" so-called, are not all bound up and laid away in dusty parchments, or dustier books. They are not altogether of the past. Written are they to be developed hereafter in the promises of the future. We have no reason to doubt that God is now giving contemporaneous testimony to the word of his grace, and this kind of evidence is designed for us.

On such living ever present testimony may be seen the existence of the Christian church. That the church of Christ is alive to-day, is a sign and a wonder wrought by God's hands. Why is not the Christian church dead at this hour? According to every calculation of probabilities it ought to be dead * * * Remember how debilitating and consumptive errors have undermined the strength of the church; it has been brought to death's door by the sins of its members and by the foolish advocacy of its weak friends. In all candor, is it not surprising that the church is permitted to live. Yet the church of Christ lives and by the church I mean not so much the faith of the church christened by individuals but the church of Christ as an organization, the church of Christ as composed of various families with different [illegible] yet essentially one. * * I cannot but think that the living organized church is [illegible] by the [illegible]

[illegible] of [illegible] but few desire to imitate his example. The very perfection of Christ's character, strangely enough, [illegible]; the very perfection of Christ's character excites ill will in those who cannot help acknowledging his perfection. Jesus himself declared of himself; "Whoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken and on whomsoever this stone shall fall it will grind him to powder." The distinctive power of the gospel is evidently abolishing idolatry from the world. When Jesus came to Palestine it was the only country in the world where the true God was spiritually worshipped. Not only Asia and Africa but the whole of Europe and America was peopled with idolaters. Our ancestors in the British isles under the guidance of the Druids were worshipping plants and trees when Christ was born. To-day the descendants of millions of idolatrous worshippers are transformed into at least nominal Christians. The gospel has almost banished slavery from the world. The principles of the brotherhood of men the principle that we are one in Christ cannot be worked out without destroying the servitude of man—and this the gospel has largely effected, and so also it is breaking down the middle walls of partition everywhere in this world. The lesson that was taught the apostle Peter is being learned in those days by the church of Christ more practically than ever before. This must be the work of one omnipotent king for human nature has not essentially changed. * * * When I hear now and then some triumphant second advent hymn describing the approach of Christ, I cannot but ask myself what will become of all the petty exclusiveness in which Christian people now too often intrench themselves.

But I find another living witness of the truth of the gospel not only in the life of the church, not only in the evident opposition to the truth, not only in the destructive force that the gospel is now exerting; for Christ not only destroys but he constructs; he tears down the old that he may build up the new. He is leveling the walls and the ruins of the old in order that the new may arise in grander proportions in a new glorious and perfect beauty.

It requires no very wide or close observation to see that God is testifying to the prophecy by the effect Christianity is now evidently producing upon the world. Is not the effect everywhere good rather than evil? Tell me what but Christianity is the pioneer of modern civilization? I challenge any one to show a single instance in which civilization in modern times has spread to any place to which Christianity has not first found its way! The gospel is continually doing good by introducing a principal of general benevolence never known before; leading men to be willing and suffer; to give their property for the good of those whom they have never seen and never expect to see in the world. Wherever the influence of the gospel is felt, there good will is shown unto the mitigation of man's horrors. What emperor in these days could imitate the example of Titus, who crucified by thousands the brave defenders of Jerusalem? * * * * Only in modern Christian lands are the wounded and the sick tended by the surgeons and nursed in the hospitals of those against whom they have been fighting and against whom it is possible they may fight again!

So the present elevated condition of women in Christian lands and her recognized equality with man is not only a good thing in itself, but a living proof that the gospel is what it claims to be. Millions of such happy Christian homes are living witnesses to-day of the truth as it is in Jesus. The gospel has not yet eradicated vice. Sin is here. Satan is not yet dead. And yet, wherever the power of Christianity has been exercised there its legitimate effects have been seen in unnatural crimes and the grossest forms of sensuality which once appeared openly and were practiced and defended by the best men.

These beneficial effects are produced by the gospel. These and such as these are the legitimate results of gospel principles.

Much of the modern civilization, this general benevolence, these institutions of beneficence, this mitigation of war, this restraint of vice, this elevation of woman, these Christian homes, all these and many more are the signs and wonders by which the Lord in his own day, is giving testimony unto the word of his grace.

And beside all this, in addition to this general testimony, the Lord is continually raising up individual witnesses of the truth. *

They teach us the truth of the declaration of Christ to Nicodemus—"Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." They teach us the truth of the declaration of the apostle Paul to the Corinthians—"If any man be in Christ he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold all things are become new." * *

We are in the early morning of the Christian day. The sun of righteousness has not ascended to its meridian glory. Let us not be content; let us be thankful; let us be strenghthened; let us be encouraged by the abundant, ever present confirmation that God is now giving of the truth as it is in Jesus. *

You have here erected for yourselves, for your generation, this visible testimony unto the word of his grace. * God in his providence has evidently determined that each church building here shall not only be a memorial of the faith of the past, but a witness, a substantial witness to the faith of the present. The erection of this house of worship has, I doubt not, developed your Christian graces. Your common sacrifices have bound you more closely together, and united your hearts, in sincere devotion to your common Lord. I am not wrong when I say that you hardly knew what you could do till you tried to build the sanctuary. It has been no waste to glorify this place where the King of Glory condescends and especially for you to dwell. * Dear friends, the only great thing, the only permanent thing in this world is the salvation and the forgiveness of our blessed and glorious God, and that is what you are now celebrating.

Long may this consecrated building stand to be a visible testimony unto the word of his grace. Long may the influence of this venerable church continue [illegible]

The exercises closed by a hymn from the choir, the doxology, in which the congregation joined and the benediction by Rev. Mr. Kinmouth. Among those present were Mr. J. E. Dutton of Corfr. Mrs. A. Hannahs of Utica, J. J. Hart of Oswego, J. B. Alexander of Oswego, Mr. Scott and Dr. Rice and friends from Hannibal, Mrs. O. C. Potter of Syracuse, Frank Seymour of Buffalo, Mrs. F. M. Baker of Oswego, Mrs. David and Mr. and Mrs. Bloodgood of New Haven, Mrs C. Fetterly of Hannibal, Mr. and Mrs Marcus Geer of South Granby, Rev. W. F. Markham, Rev. A. Smith and Mr. B. R. Dow.

Rev. Mr. Riggs, the young pastor of the church, the Building Committee, and other members of the church and congregation, who have labored so indefatigably to promote the interests of the church and community by making the building as perfect as possible, deserve hearty commendation and are to be congratulated upon the success of their efforts.

Resolved, That the several sidewalks hereinbefore specified be built and repaired of sound two-inch hemlock plank laid lengthwise or one and one-half inch plank laid crosswise, or one and one fourth inch pine plank laid crosswise on 3 by 4 stringers, well secured with earth to make a firm foundation; that no new walks are built less than five feet in width, that the outer line of those that are re-laid be evenly laid, and in the line of those already built.

On motion the clerk was directed to immediately after the publication of the aforesaid ordinance, serve the several persons affected thereby with printed copies thereof, in the manner required by the charter of the village, and to make and file proof of such service

Adjourned to meet Tuesday, July 3d, 1883, at 7:45 p. m.

L. H. Patterson, Clerk

The most reliable carefully prepared and best purgative of the present age is

BRANDETH'S PILLS

They are compounded of Roots, Herbs and Gums of the most healing and beneficial kind.

As a Family Medicine they are unrivalled, curing Head-ache, Constipation, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia—clearing the blood of all impurities—acting on the Liver, Kidneys and other important organs, removing the waste tissue, and adding years to the lives of all who use them.

For fifty years they have been used by the American public, and their constantly increasing sales show how they are appreciated.

A Perfect Remedy in 20 Diseases.

Ashfield, Mass.

I am verging on eighty years, and deem it my duty to suffering humanity to say that my long life is due to Brandreth's Pills which have been my sole medicine for half a century. I know the last forty-three pears of my life is owing solely to their use. Your Pills saved me many times after the best medical skill in several States had given me up as hopeless. I have had many converts to purgation with Brandreth's Pills, and have seen them perform almost miracles of cure. For children, a few doses have cured measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough. In all female troubles and weakness I have never known them to fail. In adult males I have known them to cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney diseases, dysentery and diarrhœa; even dropsy, paralysis, and appoplexy have yielded to a persistent course of Brandreth's Pills. In fact I have found them the true Life Elixir. They act as continual preventives against the effects of time, disease and labor.

Dr. E. F. Marsh has been elected health officer of Oswego Falls.

Mrs. Byron E. Rowley and son, of Leonard, Neb., are visiting relatives in town.

Mrs. E. W. Flaxington of Rockwell Mills, N. Y., has been making her Fulton friends a visit.

Miss Lillie Schenck, who has been sojourning in Pennsylvania for some months past, has returned th her home in Oswego Falls.

Rev. James B. Murray, of Hamilton, was the guest of Dr. Daniel Pardee for a number of days last week and officiated at the Episcopal church Sunday.

First communion service was celebrated Sunday at the church of the Immaculate Conception and was participated in by about eighty young ladies in white costumes. The occasion was one of much interest.

The efforts which the ladies of the Episcopal church and congregation have put forth lately in behalf of their Sunday school have proved very successful, and the numbers and interest has increased by more than half.

Mrs. F. D. VanWagenen jr., leaves to-day for Albany and Schenectady, where she will spend a few weeks with friends. Next week Mr. VanWagenen will attend the commencement exercises at Union college and will subsequently join his wife.

Mrs. Isaac Ketcham of this village, accompanied by Mrs. A. Burns of Davisville, Cal., who has been sojourning among Fulton friends, are visiting in Hannibal, Sterling and other places. Mrs. Burns soon returns to California by way of Chicago.

The ladies of the Congregational church and society of Oswego Falls will hold a festival on the fair grounds Saturday afternoon for the purpose of securing funds to purchase a new carpet for the church. Strawberries and ice cream will be served.

About eleven o'clock Saturday night while J. Ford Morris was putting out the lights in the Uncas club rooms, a chandelier gave away and fell to the floor, breaking it to pieces, injuring the carpets, and doing considerable damage to the furniture. Twenty-five dollars will cover the damage.

There will be a pigeon shoot on the fair grounds in Oswego Falls on the Fourth of July. The contestants are Harry Brown and A. B. Fletcher for a purse of $50. Each one will shoot 15 birds at 21 yds rise, 60 yds fall and trap his own birds. Both Mr Brown and Mr Fletcher are crack shots, and the contest will be very interesting.

Last Friday morning Mrs. O. P. Conger, who has been spending the past winter in Florida arrived in town. She came by way of New York where she remained a few days. She was accompanied by Mrs. Clara Coby, who has been enjoying a season of recreation in Europe. Both ladies are much invigorated and improved by their journey.

At the request of Miss Lucy Ramsden, Miss Hattie Nelson, Mrs. E. W. Ross and other ladies of Zion church Mr. F. The chapel was full to overflowing, the attendance including nearly all of the most fashionable and cultivated people of Fulton. The exercises opened by a well executed duet by Misses Nellie Jennings and Maud Boomer, followed by the essay, "Temple and statue the marble block hides." It abounded in well rounded sentences, classic references and was attentively listended to. Miss Allie L. Case was the essayist. Miss Anna L. Foster recited "[illegible]," which was rather long, but as her utterance was distinct and expressive, the audience did not tire of it. Then came a historical essay by Miss Carrie P. Jennings entitled "William the silent." It was historical in character, describing graphically the horrors and struggles of the Reformation. She spoke freely, using her manuscript but little. Then came one of those humorous sketches, which are often heard in the schools at commencement time, suggesting the dogmatic tendencies of her companions in study, was read by Miss Carrie C. Hamilton. It was an ingenious piece of workmanship and was titled "Glimpses of the Future." Miss Carrie Jennings and Anna Foster followed by the duet "Deutche Tanze." The audience attempted to recall the performers, but failed. Mr. Herbert E. Hoff declamed, "Caractacus" in an expressive, earnest style, and then in a clear and strong voice Miss Carrie C. Hamilton rendered the "Cuckoo song." She drew forth abundant applause and her effort was appreciated. Mrs. F. D. VanWagenen, jr., accompanied her on the piano. The excellence of Miss Bertha Lee's essay "The crusades" was especially noteworthy, giving evidence of a thorough knowledge of the topic she had chosen. Her delivery was forcible and in sympathy with the essay. The only oration on the programme was delivered by Arthut W. Gifford and in a sober, scholarly manner he discoursed upon the subject "Who shall be first?" The piano solo, "Irish Diamonds," by Miss Nellie Jennings, which was skillfully executed was followed by the essay, "The floral clock," by Miss Rachel E. Nash, delineating woman's life work, taking her illustrations from the industry of nature. The duet, "Fete des Moissonneurs," followed and was gracefully rendered by Miss Anna Gilmour and Mrs. F. D. VanWagenen.

Rev. J. S. Riggs then stepped upon the platform and in appropriate language presented the prizes which were awarded to members of the class in botany and Grecian history. The Pupils in the botany class displayed such great equality and proficiency in their examination that it was hard to decide to whom the prize belonged and two first and second prizes were given. The donors of the first prizes were Miss J.M. Porter and Mrs. George M. Case, and Mrs. James Gilmour and Miss L. N. Estabrook gave the second prizes.

Miss Alice Schermerhorn of Schenectady and Arthur Gifford of Baldwinsville, were requested to step forward and receive the two first prizes for botany and Misses Bertha Lee of Fulton and Anna L. Foster of Canandaigua, were much astonished at also being called forward to receive second prizes in that study. The honor of receiving the prize in Grecian history was conferred upon Miss Carrie Hamilton, of Oneida.

At the Regents' examination at the seminary last week successful results were reached by a number of pupils in Greek history, astronomy, Frency, botany, physiology, arithmetic, grammar, geography, spelling and Cicero.

Three graduates go out from the seminary this year, Mr. Arthur W. Gifford, of Baldwinsville, having finished the college preparatory course, Miss Rachel E. Nash, of Union City, Tenn., the scientific course, and Miss Bertha Lee, of Fulton, the college preparatory course. Miss Lee will probably enter Oberlin college, at Oberlin, Ohio, this fall in the second year of the college course and Mr. Gifford enters Cornell university.

UNION SCHOOL NO. TWO.

One of the all absorbing events in Fulton next week, especially among the younger portion of the community, will be the examinations and closing exercises of Union Graded school, No. 2, in the Opera House Friday evening, June 29, and already the bustle and flurry of final preparation of those who are to participate is apparent. The Regents' ordeal was passed last week by a large number with success, the twenty-two members of the zoology class being among the fortunate. The graduating class will listen to a sermon by Rev. J. S. Riggs in the Methodist church Sunday evening.

Prof. Boothby is laboring with indefatigable energy to make the commencement exercises a success.

Mrs. James Bowen, of Pinconning, Mich., is visiting friends in Oswego Falls.

Norman Hubbard of Brooklyn was in town a guest of his sister, Mrs. C. H David.

Mr. F. E. Gee, of the Fair Haven Graphic, called at THE TIMES office Saturday.

The organ concert at the Presbyterian church this evening is for the benefit of the church.

Mr. B. R. Dow, who has accepted the pastorate of the Baptist church of this village, will graduate at Madison University this week and be ordained in Fulton next month.

Miss Carrie Streeter has been sojourning for a few weeks among friends in the Mohawk valley. She will attend the closing exercises at Madison University, Hamilton, this week.

Mrs. A. F. Markham, of Big Rapids, Mich., nee Miss Mary Randall, of Fulton, is in town, after an absence of twenty-three years. She is the guest of her sister, Mrs. F. M. McIntyre, corner Utica and Third streets.

A temperance mass meeting of citizens of the towns of Volney and Granby will be held at Howe's hall, Friday evening, June 29, to devise ways and means of suppressing the liquor traffic. The meeting will be one of importance and a large attendance is requested.

A difficult surgical operation has been performed by Dr. D. E. Lake upon Alice Barnard, a seven-year-old daughter of Mr. Adelbert Barnard, of Schroeppel, She had been suffering with inflammation in one of her feet since November and the entire removal of the fifth Metatarsal was found necessary.

Prof. W. J. Stevens, of Middletown, gives an organ concert at the Presbyterian church this evening. Prof. Stevens is a skilled organist and, his performances here having attained considerable popularity, he will doubtless entertain a large audience. Mr. N. H. Gilbert, Mrs. O. P. Conger and Miss Gertie Stephens will assist.

LAST Saturday there were ten suits commenced against the cities of New York and Brooklyn and the trustees of the East river bridge by several persons who sustained severe injuries on Decoration day. The total amount of damage claimed is $200,000. It is said the plaintiffs' counsel are confident of holding the trustees personally responsible as well as the municipal officers of the two cities. This will be the occasion of a bonanza for the lawyers.

Police Justice Betts of Oswego Falls, had several cases of violation of the excise law before him recently. Last Friday Patrick Kennedy was convicted and fined $50, but he has appealed and his case now goes to the county court. He is under bail. His wife, Margaret Kennedy, has also been arrested. She will be tried at two o'clock to-morrow. A warrant has also been issued for Morgan L. Wilcox for the same offence, but it is thought that he will pay his fine and not stand trial.

Miss Cora Miller, who is the daughter of John A. Miller, deceased, an old time Fultonian, has just graduated from the normal and antique art class of Cooper institute, New York. She is now in Fulton and proposes to give the community the benefit of her knowledge during the coming summer. That she has been a pupil at Cooper Union is a sufficient guarantee that her instruction has been thorough. She will give lessons in drawing, oil painting, water colors, flower painting on China and in crayon portraits. She will return to New York in the fall and complete a higher course.

The Fourth of July is coming, and a great many people are also coming to Fulton to see the sights. But they may be assured that they will not see all the sights, nor the greatest of them all, unless they step around and look into

AMDURSKY'S CLOTHING HOUSE.

James Stevens of Oswego Falls is fully prepared to furnish ice cream in large or small quanities, at 40 cents per quart. A man will travel the streets of this village and those who wish this summer luxury can obtain it at their residences. A bell will be attached to a cart as a warning that the ice cream man is near. Mr. Stevens guarantees to furnish the best ice cream in the market. Orders received by mail promptly attended to. 5m3

In Luck.

Mr. Henry E. Nichols, who bought a tract of land in Bismark, Dakota, some weeks ago and who returned from Fulton to Dakota last week, is about to strike a bonanza. It is is said that his property is wanted for a territorial capitol, and should the rumor not prove delusive he will be the gainer of a handsome sum of ready cash.

The Fisks are Coming.

The Fisk jubilee singers numbering twelve people will give a concert in the Opera House, Fulton, Thursday evening, June 28. They are highly spoken of by the press, and a large number of prominent public men in this country and titled dignitaries abroad. Queen Victoria heard them and was pleased, according to their circular, so did the Emperor and Empress of Germany, the last four Presidents of the United States and many others of almost equal note. Doubtless the Fulton audience who hear them will enjoy a rich treat.

A Sphinx in Ashes.

That our citizens sometimes possess talents of which the community is ignorant was forcibly suggested to a representative of THE TIMES, who was invited to call at the residence of Mr. C. H. David on Buffalo street. It had been intimated to a reporter that he was to see a curiosity and from the opposite sidewalk he saw in Mr. David's rear yard an object having the appearance of the head of a sphinx, similar to those found in Egypt. It looked like a huge piece of granite, skillfully hewn into shape by the hand of a sculptor. The reporter congratulated himself that he was about to see some great work of art from a foreign shore. But upon a closer examination the delusion vanished, the granite was transformed into ashes, and the sculptor was no other than Mr. David. The statue was indeed a work of art, but it was wrought by the trowel instead of the chisel. It was about three feet high and a good representation of the "Father of his country."

Joshua Gifford.

On Monday Governor Cleveland commuted to imprisonment for life the sentence which was imposed upon Joshua Gifford by Judge Vann, who was to have been hung Friday of this week. Mr. Gifford upon receiving the intelligence of the commutation, seemed to be highly delighted and clapped his hands with joy. Upon being interviewed by a Palladium reporter he said, "I was sure he would do it, he could not refuse," he exclaimed, "I was assured by a gentleman before I left the court house," he continued, "that a rope would never be placed around my neck. Who that person was, however, I would not like to tell because it might perhaps on account of his official position do him an an injury, and I would not injure a man who had befriended me, for the world. He has worked hard to bring about this action on the pare of the governor."

Gifford seems to be enjoying good health, and says he has received kind treatment at the hands of sheriff Huntington and jailor Hubbard and feels very grateful toward them.

United for Life.

Last Thursday evening at eight o'clock Miss Maria Clutterbuck was married to Mr. William Sylvester at the residence of Mr. William Dexter. Friends and relatives to the number of about fifty witnessed the ceremony which was performed by Rev. B. R. Dow beneath a handsome arch of green leaves interspersed by blossoms. Among the numerous presents were a bedroom set from Mr. and Mrs. William Dexter, silver castor, Willie and Florence Dexter; $100, Mr. Clutterbuck; pair of rose blankets, Mrs. Clutterbuck; $25, Mr. Sylvester; bed spread, Mrs. Sylvester; hanging lamp, George Sylvester; towels and silver spoons, Mr. and Mrs. Rivett; silver pickle castor, Mr. and Mrs. F. Preston; silver tea tray, from the Baptist church; silver cake basket, from her Sunday school class; silver spoon holder, Miss Libbie Osgood. silver castor, Mr. and Mrs McIntosh and Miss McIntosh; dinner set, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Skaden; chamber set, Charles Jones and Charles Dexter.

Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester will be members of the family of Mr. William Dexter for the present.

ever seen in this part of the state. A large amount of money has been raised toward defraying the expenses of the celebration.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

There was a large attendance at the Dairymen's Board of Trade meeting, Monday, and before 6:30 o'clock in the evening every box of cheese offered, but three lots, had been sold at very good figures, considering the market. There were but few lots of grass cheese offered, which were sold at declining figures. Twenty-three factories were registered offering 1,662 boxes of cheese.

AT UTICA.

The transactions in the cheese market in this city were heavy Monday. The temper of the market was seen early in the day, when salesmen expressed a belief that it ought to be stronger than last week, while buyers claimed that it ought to be a quarter of a cent lower. The compromise was made on prices similar to those of last week, altho' buyers declare that there is no money in such a market. Salesmen are hoping that the market has touched bottom, and will not go below 10½c. this season, but dealers feel very sure it has not reached the lowest point, and predict a lower market no farther away than next week. There were only three buyers, and the ruling price was 10½ cents.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The attendance in the cheese board was fair, and the ruling price 10½ cents. The sales reached 860 boxes. The following were the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
2	102	9¾
10	751	10
45	2,962	10¼
3	193	10½
43	3,637	10⅜
5	350	10⅝
2	138	10¾
14	851	Commission
121	8,984
Farm Dairy	860
Total	9,844

AT FULTON.

There were twenty-three factories represented here Monday evening, but the market was rather quiet, still the cheese was sold at 10 to 10½c., except two factories on private terms. There were 1,592 boxes registered.

Take Time, Don't Hurry.

"O, gentlemen, the time of life is short;
To spend that shortness basely were too long,
If life did ride upon a dial's point,
Sti'l ending at the arrival of an hour."
[Henry IV.

More than twenty years ago, a clergyman quoting from a more ancient author than Shakespeare: "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you that if any would not work neither should he eat," added a very practical comment:—"What a time there would be in New York if this were enforced now." Precisely what was true of New York twenty years ago is true to-day, and it is also true of Syracuse. Life is too precious to be spent in idleness; and he who keeps his neighbor busy, is himself blessed by the improvement of precious time. The extent to which Syracuse working people are kept employed in the manufacture of Ready Made Clothing by Kent & Miller, is not realized by many since not only are the [illegible]

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

For Man & Beast.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

[illegible] size been nicknamed "the baby," and it was a great favorite especially with the ladies, and who seemed to be milder and tamer than the other tigers and lions—so became a "baby."

There were ballet girls in the piece as well as wild beasts, and among the ballet girls was a pretty little blonde, almost a child, who had acquired the pet name of "the mouse." She was the daughter of one of the fiddlers in the orchestra, a big, burly sort of a man, a German, was fond of only three things in the world—his fiddle, his little girl and his beer—and who always sat stock still. Nothing ever seemed to move him or to make him move. The boys in the pit used to call him "the mountain" and held it as an article of their creed that you could as soon move a mountain as stir him.

Well, one Saturday night, there was a big house, and the piece passed off well till it came to the time for the tamed lions and tigers to perform "The baby" seemed to be very much out of humor. Probably it had the dyspepsia, or felt like eating a man. Anyway, baby was mad, and wouldn't perform, and then Driesbach got his mad up too. He wasn't going to let a baby get ahead of him, and so he stirred up the huge infant with whip and pole, and finally finding all other means fail, went into the den himself, and poked baby lively with an iron rod. This style of Winslow's soothing syrup didn't work, and the tiger made a spring at Herr Driesback, who met the attack with a bar of iron, which made the baby howl. But Driesbach, in his haste, had forgotten to close the door of the cage after him when he went in and the tiger seeing the door open, rushed out and was free.

The immense brute found himself at liberty right in the center of the stage, which was just then filled with soldiers ballet girls and actors. But it wasn't filled long. Soldiers, ballet girls and actors scattered right and left. They stood not on the order of their going, but they went at once. No stage was ever cleared so quick before or since. And the only cool one of the ballet girls was the smallest one of the lot, the one they called "the mouse." She neither shrieked or struggled like the rest, but, looking at the tiger, even admiring him for a moment, walked, though rapidly, away.

Not so the fat fiddler in the orchestra, her father. For "a mountain" he was in a state of the very liveliest eruption. He never even stopped to think of his fiddle or his daughter but dashed under the stage.

By this time there was nobody under the stage but the tiger, who was dazed, and the beast tamer, who had all his wits about him and appreciated the terrible situation. The tiger and the tamer eyed each other for a moment, and then, with a low growl, the tiger slunk away from the tamer and approached the footlights as if he were about to spring into the pit.

This was enough. The "pit" as was then called that portion of the house now known as the parquette—was cleared as if by magic. There was only one entrance to and exit from the pit, by a long, narrow, winding lane or aisle, but along the aisle the crowd rushed or rather was borne by its own weight.

Meanwhile Herr Driesbach had seized hold of a torch used in the spectacle, and had scared the tiger with it, and had, as it were, burned him back into the cage, which being then securely locked, the beast was at his mercy, and got from Herr Driesbach such a beating as would quicken his memory for many a day.

Pretty soon the news got into the street that the beast had been secured, and then the rush in was almost as wild and frantic as had been the rush out. In fact, the crowd suffered more squeezing and bruising, trying to get back into the theatre than it did to get out.

Dress Coats for Minstrels.

A merchant tailor of Liberty street, Pittsburg, relates a quaint anecdote about the fashions of two score years ago. When he first went into business he succeeded his father. It was thirty years or more ago, and among the stock were 300 fine, black swallow-tail coats, just then going out of fashion. They were invoiced at a nominal figure.

About ten years after, a theatrical agent dropped in the store one day and asked the cost of making twenty dress coats for a minstrel organization. The merchant bethought him of the 300 stored away, and in a twinkling [illegible]

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
150 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

Our New School Law.

One of the new laws of the legislature of 1883 changes the time for holding the annual school meetings in the country districts from the second Tuesday of October to the last Tuesday of August; but in districts having a school population of 300 and upwards the election will hereafter be held on the Wednesday next succeeding the last Tuesday in August. The State's school year will hereafter end on the 30th day of August and the 30th day of September, and trustees to school districts must make their reports to school commissioners between the last Tuesday of August and the first Tuesday of September. These changes, together with some others affecting the school laws, are embodied in chapter 313 of the laws of 1883, and should be carefully examined by all school officers.

The New Sleeping Car.

The Amsterdam Recorder gives the following description of the state room sleeping car invented and patented by John A. Sleicher, lately one of the editors and proprietors of the Troy Times:

The new sleeping car is a radical departure from the style now in use, and which stands to-day just as it stood when Pullman first introduced it, twenty-three years ago. It is a matter of surprise that so little improvement has been made in sleeping cars. Mr. Sleicher's invention shows that patience and thought were only needed to develop something up to the requirements and demands of travellers. The "state room sleeping car" has an outward appearance much like that of any night coach. Inwardly it reverses everything. Instead of having two rows of seats with an aisle between them, it has one row of seats with an aisle on the side, and instead of having seats three feet long, it has sofas or seats six feet long. The new car thus presents a unique but not attractive appearance. A seat has a width of three feet, but the sloping back, projecting over the seat covers up a part of the latter, and at the same time conceals beneath its surface in a convenient receptacle the pillows and blankets that are used at night.

To change a seat into a berth, it is only necessary to lift up the sloping back and the seat to which it is attached and brings them to a horizontal plane. The back and the seat are thus made to serve as the upper berth. The seat used in the day time hides underneath it two mattrasses, one of which at night is placed upon the upper berth and the other is left for the lower berth.

To change the section into a private stateroom it only remains for the porter to raise a panel of the same size and shape as the outside back part of the seat frame. This, when raised to the ceiling, meets a slight projection extending therefrom and forms a close partition. Thus each section is quickly transformed into a snug sleeping room, containing two berths running across the width of the car, and not lengthwise over the jarring, jolting wheels and rails, as in the cars now used. The change from a day car into a night car can be made even more rapidly than a Pullman and Wagner can be transformed into a sleeper. The car will furnish as many staterooms as the ordinary sleeper of the same size has sections, so that a stateroom will cost a passenger no more than the charge for a common section.

The new coach is well lighted at day by large windows and it is intended to illuminate it at night with either wax candles, compressed gas or electric light. Mr. Sleicher is determined that no kerosene shall be used in his sleeper, and to add to the car's safety has decided to enclose the heater in a sheeting of iron, so that in no event can fire be set by the stove. As a still further protection from the fire, he has arranged a water tank in the upper [illegible]

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."

The Sabbath.

Fresh glides the brook and blows the gale,
Yet yonder halts the quiet mill;
The whirling wheel, the rustling sail,
How motionless and still!

Six days of toil, poor child of Cain,
Thy strength the slave of want may be;
The seventh thy limbs escape the chain—
A God hath made thee free!

Ah! tender was the law that gave
This holy respite to the breast,
To breath the gale to watch the wind,
And know the wheel may rest!

But when the waves the gentlest glide
What image charms to light thine eyes?
The spire reflected on the tide
Invites thee to the skies.

To teach the soul its noblest worth,
This rest from mortal toil is given;
Go snatch the brief reprieve from earth,
And pass—a guest to Heaven.

They tell thee, in their dreaming school,
Of power from old dominion hurled,
When rich and poor, with juster rule,
Shall share the altered world.

Alas! since time itself begun;
That fable hath but fooled the hour;
Each age that ripens power in man
But subjects man to power.

Yet every day in seven at least,
One bright republic shall be known;
Man's world awhile hath surely ceased,
When God proclaims his own!

Six days may rank divide the poor,
Oh, Dives, from thy banquet hall;
The seventh the Father opes His door,
And holds His feast for all!

TEXAN DARE-DEVILS.

The Genuine "Cow-Boy" Comparatively Free from Vice.

The genuine Texas cow-boy is a character, and, after some acquaintance with him, I can say that he is one that is very little understood by the out-side world. He is rough, uncouth, hardy, generous and brave. He must stand the hardships that he takes upon himself, and be a splendid specimen of physical manhood. He is generally from twenty to thirty years of age. There are no old men in their ranks. They can beat the Mexican vaqueros (equistrians) at their own peculiar feats of horsemanship, such as picking money from the ground with the horses at a dead run. A great sport with them is called the chicken game. They bury a fowl in the light earth so that nothing but his head is shown. They then ride their horses in a circle upon a keen gallop, and snatch for the head. The man who first secures the chicken wins the prize, which is usually a small sum of money. It is a Mexican custom, but the Texan can beat him at it every time. The genuine cow-boy is comparatively free from vice in the true meaning of the term. His home is in his saddle, and he sits on a horse as though he were a part of it. He frequently rides seventy miles a day and a majority of his nights are spent in the open air. Indeed, for most of the year he never sees a house, and has no chance, if he should have the inclination to drink liquor.

Every cow-boy labors to be a dead shot. When he gets to town, either by accident or after the year's hurry is over, he is apt to be free with his pistol if he gets drunk and finds a quarrel, as he often does. Of the petty crimes he knows nothing. He never steals unless he is dead broke and then he captures a horse. He never lies or cheats. The pilgrim or tenderfoot, as they call an eastern man, is always welcome to a share of his rude fare. You can offer them no greater insult than to proffer pay for it. They have no idea of social distinctions, and "Jack always rates himself as good as his master." He very frequently gets an interest in the herd he is tending, and often graduates from a cow-boy to a proprietor of a ranch. It is a fact that many of the rich men here started with only two steers and a branding iron. Their highest idea being [illegible] they look upon homicide as an in[illegible] crime compared with horse-[illegible]. HOISTED BY A WHALE.

How a monster of the Deep Striking Against the Keel Lifted a Boat.

The boat Maria came into port a few days since with a heavy cargo of fish and a story almost incredible. The captain, whose name could not be learned, states that upon passing along beyond the bar on the outward cruise last Monday, while several of his men were asleep and he was the tiller, he felt his craft in contact with something rubbing along her bottom, and was surprised to find it suddenly lifted, with a great shock, fully ten feet above the surface of the water. The boat fell again into the sea perfectly upright, and the sail having lost none of her stiff breeze that filled it, she continued her course as if no such extraordinary thing had happened. The men below were rudely awakened, and turned out to ascertain the cause of the phenomenon, when all hands were surprised to see passing away at one side a monstrous whale. The leviathan had exhausted his supply of air, and in coming to the surface for more had struck the boat, with the effect mentioned. The huge being spouted an immense stream of water, and, having sported about for a short time, sank again into the ocean. Aside from a severe wrench, the craft sustained no injury, and the men suffered nothing but a momentary alarm.

Religious Notes.

He that is much in prayer shall grow rich in grace. He shall thrive and increase most that is busiest in this which is our traffic with heaven, and fetches the most precious commodities thence.

As a transparency on some night of public rejoicing, seen by common day, with the lamps from within removed, even such would the Psalms be to me, uninterpreted by the Gospel.

[S. T. Coleridge.

So, the true Christian should always bear about with him the consciousness that his excellencies and his attainments are so far below what they ought to be that pride should have no dominion, and that humility should mark every Christian grace. It was so in Christ, and the gentleness and lovableness of Christ are among the most marked features of divine excellence, and of perfection in Him. [Bleecker.

How beautiful is that simple prayer which, it is said, the Breton sailors are wont to utter when launching out upon the heaving ocean; "Keep me, my God; my boat is so small, and Thy ocean is so wide!" For God is just the same upon the water as He is upon the land; the sea is His and he made it; though tempests come and in the wilderness of fierce floods death yawns blackly on every side, His power that stilled the turbulent sea of Gennesaret can deliver His children from the wildest war of winds and waves. The prayer of the Breton mariner becomes the prayer of every soul that has learned to revere, to obey, and to trust; "Keep me, my God; I am so weak, and Thou so mighty; put underneath me Thine everlasting arms and I shall be upheld!"

If there is a disease in our modern theology and our modern philosophy of life more conspicuous than another, it is indifference to sin. We lull it with anodine. We call it anything but sin, We form our schemes of social improvement, and material progress without any conviction of the deep plague of our nature. We hide it from ourselves until it breaks out in some scandalous form and startles us with its intensity. We will drill men into morality; we will repress crime by education; we will empty our jails by philanthropic legislation; but the sin that dwelleth in us too strong for human remedies, too rampant for the social reformer's pruning hook. Far truer is the novelist's sentiment, when he puts into the mouth of one of his characters the awful, but grand words, "How gladly would I endure the torments of hell if thereby I might escape from my sin.' [Dean of Peterborough.

Postal Cards.

When postal cards were first issued, their novelty provoked some fault finding and they were made fun of as "stingy," "shabby," "unsafe," etc. But they were cheap and the people used them and the critics soon followed the example of the people; now the postal card has only two enemies—the man who receives duns on it and the manufacturer of writing paper.

The little postage causes a decrease from twelve to fifteen dollars every year in the business of the writing paper trade in this city.

[illegible] Mysterious [illegible] Troubles [illegible] Come to Every Household [illegible] Explained.

The following article from the Democrat and Chronicle, of Rochester, N. Y., is of so [illegible] a nature and emanates from so reliable a source, that it is herewith re-published entire. In addition to the valuable matter it contains, it will be found exceedingly interesting:

To the Editor of the Democrat and Chronicle:

SIR:—My motives for the publication of the most unusual statements which follow, are, first, gratitude for the fact that I have been saved from a most horrible death, and, secondly, a desire to warn all who read this statement against some of the most deceptive influences by which they have ever been surrounded. It is a fact that to-day thousands of people are within a foot of the grave and they do not know it. To tell how I was caught away from just this position and to warn others against nearing it, are my objects in this communication.

On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years previous, any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible a disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, had weighed over 200 lbs. and hardly knew, in my own experience what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull and indefinite pains in various parts of the body and do not understand it. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought it was nothing; that probably I had taken a cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a heavy, and at times a neuralgic pain in my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next, I paid but little attention to it. However, my stomach was out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet I had no idea, even as a physician, that these things meant anything serious or that a monstrous disease was becoming fixed upon me. Candidly, I thought I was suffering from Malaria and so doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. I next noticed a peculiar odor about the fluids I was passing—also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared upon the surface, and a sediment settled in the bottom. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these symptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

There is a terrible future for all physical neglect, and impending danger always brings a person to his senses, even though it may then be too late. I realized, at last, my critical condition and aroused myself to overcome it. And, Oh! how hard I tried! I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the prominent mineral springs in America and travelled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; Another, nervous prostration; another, malaria; another, dyspepsia another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of all of which I really had. In this way several years passed, during all of which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitiable. The slight symptoms I at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders—the little twigs of pain had grown to oaks of agony. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a torture to myself and friends. I could retain no food upon my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell upon the floor, convulsively clutched the carpet, and prayed for death. Morphine had little or no effect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the death-premonitory hiccoughs constantly. My urine was filled with tube casts and albumen. I was struggling with Bright's Disease of the kidneys in its last stages.

While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, rector of St. Paul's church, of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation he mentioned a remedy of which I had heard much but had never used. Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures which had come under his observation, by means of this remedy and urged me to try it. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I cherished the prejudice both natural and common with all regular practitioners, and derided the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being the least beneficial. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudice and try this remedy he so highly recommended. I began its use on 1st day of June and took it according to directions At first it sickened me; but this I tho't was a good sign for me in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better as did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that, upon what I believed a few days before to be my dying bed, I vowed, in the presence of my family and friends should I recover I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an opportunity. I also determined that I would give a course of lectures in the Christian Academy of Music in this city, stating in full the [illegible] dreds of people die daily, whose burials are authorized by a physician's certifying that it was "Heart disease" "Appolexy," "Paralysis," "Spinal complaint," "Rheumatism," Pneumonia, and other common diseases, when in reality it was Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicians, and fewer people realize the extent of the disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence by its commonests symptoms, and fastens itself upon the constitution before the victim is aware. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterious power that was removing them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly, and as such is usually supposed to be heart disease. As one who has suffered and knows by bitter experience what he says, I implore every one who reads these words not to neglect the slightest symptoms of kidney difficulty. Certain agony and possible death will be the sure result of such neglect, and no one can afford to hazard such chances.

I am aware that such an unqualified statement as this, coming from me, known as I am, throughout the entire land as a practioner and lecturer, will arouse the surprise and possible animosity of the medical profession and astonish all with whom I am acquainted, but I make the foregoing statements, based upon facts which I am prepared to produce, and truths which I can substantiate to the letter. The wellfare of those who may possibly be suffers such as I was, is an ample inducement for me to take the step I have, and if I can successfully warn others from the dangerous path in which I once walked, I am willing to endure all professional and personal consequences.

An amusing incident occurred, during a recent hail storm, at San Antonio. A lady had forbidden her little boy to throw stones. She was sitting at the bay-window, when the glass was suddenly shattered by a stone. She instantly rushed out of the house, cuffed her biggest boy right and left, and was dragging the astonished youth into the house when a hailstone hit her in the back. This was followed up by several other hailstones hitting her in various and sundry places, before she could get under shelter. It is needless to add, that the pane of glass was broken by a hailstone, and not by her unfortunate son. [Texas Siftings.

A BAPTIST MINISTER'S EXPERIENCE.

"I am a Baptist minister, and before I ever thought of being a clergyman I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, forty years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured me. I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas' Eclectric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured them, and if taken in time it will cure seven times out of ten. I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold, or cough, and if any one will take a small teaspoon and half fill it with the Oil, and then place the end of the spoon in one nostril and draw the Oil out of the spoon into the head, by sniffing as hard as they can, until the Oil falls over into the throat, and practice it twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure their catarrh. For deafness and earache, it has done wonders to my certain knowledge. It is the only medicine dubbed patent medicine that I have ever felt like recommending, and I am very anxious to see it in every place for I tell you that I would not be without it in my house for any consideration. I am now suffering with a pain like rheumatism in my right limb, and nothing relieves me like Thomas' Eclectric Oil." Dr. E. F. Crane, Corry, Pa.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the o'her day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

ON Monday there was a frightful calamity at Dervio, on the shore of Lake Como, in Italy. Ninety persons were attending a puppet show in a hall, when some straw in a room adjacent to the stage caught fire. On perceiving the flames the showman shouted "Fire!" but the spectators thought the cry was merely a realistic detail of the show and remained seated. Cries of fire were soon raised outside the hall. The audience, thinking an affray had arisen in the street, barred with a heavy table the door leading from the hall. They did not discover their mistake until the flames burst into the room. After the fire was extinguished forty-seven charred corpses were found near the table, including the bodies of the showman and his wife. A large portion of the dead are women and children. All who were not killed were more or less injured.

Gone To Rest.

The death of Mrs. Carrie C. Cockran, wife of Theodore Cockran, occurred last Wednesday, too late for publication in THE TIMES of that day. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. She leaves three children, the oldest being six years old and the youngest a babe of but a few days. She was 41 years of age. Her funeral occurred at her home on Seneca street, Friday at 3 p. m., and was largely attended. Rev. J. S. Riggs officiated and Messrs A. Rice and R. N. Hoff and Misses Mattie Parkhouse and Gertie Ottman furnished the music. The pall bearers were Messrs J. Bailey, R. E Phillips, R. P. Hall and J. M. Hewitt. Her remains were interred in Mt. [illegible] Harvey Smith [illegible] is another lie. The editor of THE TIMES made no such promise. Again, he says "The 'Boss' has his heel on THE TIMES and the patrons of that paper are evidencing their displeasure by withdrawing their support from it. A man who knows says Lyman H. Patterson is to assist in the editorial management of the Times."

This is about as refreshing a piece of intelligence as was ever imposed upon people of Fulton and considering the diminutive circulation of the Times and Express in Fulton, it is hardly worthy of notice.

But for the benefit of any who may entertain any such hallucination as seems to be troubling the brain of the cheese editor of the Oswego Times and Express and merely pausing to pleasantly remark that the assertions above quoted are maliciously false and that the cheese editor knew they were false when he made them, we desire to say most emphatically that this journal is "bossed" by no one but its editor, that Mr. Willard Johnson, nor Mr. Lyman Patterson would not "boss" it if they could, and could not if they would, that it is published to promote the interests of the people of this community and not to please any person, party, faction, clique or ring, and that it is thoroughly independent in everything first, last, and all the time.

THE TIMES holds no antagonism against Mr. Harvey Smith and if he or anybody else will furnish THE TIMES with the exact price—the figures—at which they sell their cheese we shall be very happy to publish it, but we shall publish all such statements over the signatures of the parties making them. Otherwise we shall deal with cheese news as we do with every other variety of news—as we please and without dictation from anybody.

And now we desire to say a few words about the man who permitted such a complete fabrication to be published in his so-called newspaper. If there is one man who is more thoroughly detested and despised than another in this county by Republican and Democrat, by Stalwart and Half Breed, by men of every political creed and no creed at all—in fact by everybody, that man is John A. Place, editor of the Oswego Times and Express. A man who has fawned and cringed for the favor of so imperious a boss as Roscoe Conkling and as soon as that great chieftain sunk by his own hand into political nonenity, turned upon him like the venomous serpent he is, is the last man who should discourse upon bosses and bossing, or permit his organ to do so. John A. Place's supreme desire is to become a "boss." But woe unto the party of whom he is a boss. It is nearly a year since he crawled into the Half Breed camp and havoc and chaos are the result. Not that he ever attained the importance of a boss in the party, but the disgust and panic which he has produced in his small way has been sufficient to send a Democrat to the Legislature for two terms from a strongly Republican district. Like the last straw that breaks the camel's back, the hissing of his snake-like breath is enough to blast the hopes of any party in a close campaign and the only hope of future success in the Republican party in this county is to pitch John A. Place and his organ overboard, neck and heels, or induce him to write an epitaph something like this: "Died of an insatiable greed for power and patronage," and then get under it.

OUT OF TOWN.

Pennellville.

PENNELLVILLE, June 25.—Mr. R. C. Hanchett, whose whereabouts have been unknown for some time, returned to Pennellville last week and remained several days.

Mr. Ambrose Gregg has built a large and convenient hotel barn. It is 80 feet in length.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

The business transaction at the dairymen's board of trade was rather dull Monday. There were 21 cheese factories registered, offering more than 1,600 cheese. The dispatches from New York city did not show a very encouraging state of affairs on cheese, as far as prices were concerned. The product was quoted steadily at 10¾ to 11 cents. Several lots were consigned and a number were bought on private terms. Much more cheese would have been sold on that market if it was offered.

AT UTICA.

The market Monday was a surprise to every one, buyers and salesmen alike. In the early part of the day 10c. was talked of as the only sensible price for ruling. Later on it was acknowledged that 10¼c. would be reached; but when it rose to 10⅜c. it was felt to be imprudent, considering the foreign market, and no one expects more than to just get out, even if they do not meet a loss. The salesmen regard it as an unhealthy market for which they will have to suffer next week.

Transactions of the day are as follows: [illegible] lots, [illegible] boxes, at 10c.; 14 lots, 1,300 boxes, at 10¼c.; 4 lots, 410 boxes, at 10⅛c.; [illegible] lots, 5,4[illegible] boxes, at 10⅜c.; [illegible] small cheese, 377 boxes at [illegible] 1,117 boxes at [illegible]

[illegible] is "The Young Folks at Home;" Book No. 3, "Society;" [illegible] touching upon [illegible] the evil and a [illegible] of the temperance [illegible] The remaining two books are entitled "The Higher Life," and "Gems of Home Poetry," the latter containing the choicest selections of the world's best poets. It is profusely illustrated with fine steel engravings, comprising full page pictures of Henry W. Longfellow, John G. Whittier, and William Cullen Bryant. It is printed upon handsome heavy paper, in clean plain type and is bound in four styles—silk finish cloth at $3.75; half morroco, $4.50; Turkey morroco, $4.75; and Russia morroco, $5.50. All the volumes are gilt edged and gold stamped on the side and back. The highest types of society and government rest upon the home for security, which proceeds out of all the various forms of education, business and law. All this and more is found in this work which will be a valuable acquisition to any library. It is sold by subscription only, by Mr James H. Kennedy and Mr W. D. Bolster, both of Rochester, who are at present canvassing Fulton.

The Congregational Sunday school of Oswego Falls held a festival in Howe's hall Monday evening and cleared $25 which will be devoted to the purchase of a windows for the church.

NOTICE.

So many stories have been told, and so much written of late in the advertising columns of the press of Fulton, about the low price of clothing, I wish to say right here that it is impossible to advertise clothing at less prices than has been done by certain dealers, and maintain my reputation for honest advertising. I wish to state that in no case will I mislead the public by false or deceptive advertising. Permit me to call your attention to our large advertisement on another page of this paper. I would state that you will not find the "The goods just sold," nor "We have not the size to suit you," "We sold two Thousand this morning," "You should have come before, my friend," etc. We will fulfill to the letter every statement made; sell our goods at low prices, give you your money back on every garment returned unsoiled, and guarantee prices lower than all competitors.

BRANDETH'S PILLS

They are compounded of Roots, Herbs and Gums of the most healing and beneficial kind.

As a Family Medicine they are unrivalled, curing Head-ache, Constipation, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia—clearing the blood of all impurities —acting on the Liver, Kidneys and other important organs, removing the waste tissue, and adding years to the lives of all who use them.

For fifty years they have been used by the American public, and their constantly increasing sales show how they are appreciated.

A Perfect Remedy in 20 Diseases.

ASHFIELD, MASS.

I am verging on eighty years, and deem it my duty to suffering humanity to say that my long life is due to BRANDRETH'S PILLS which have been my sole medicine for half a century. I know the last forty-three pears of my life is owing solely to their use. Your PILLS saved me many times after the best medical skill in several States had given me up as hopeless. I have had many converts to purgation with BRANDRETH'S PILLS, and have seen them perform almost miracles of cure. For children, a few doses have cured measles, scarlet fever, and whooping cough. In all female troubles and weakness I have never known them to fail. In adult males I have known them to cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, rheumatism, kidney diseases, dysentery and diarrhœa; even dropsy, paralysis, and appoplexy have yielded to a persistent course of BRANDRETH'S PILLS. In fact I have found them the true Life Elixir. They act as continual preventives against the effects of time, disease and labor.

[illegible] A BIG BENEFIT.

[illegible]

[illegible] School. [illegible] the following clergymen [illegible] Revs. W. F. Markham, A. R. [illegible], B. R. Dow, A. M. Roe and B. F. Chase.

The sermon by Rev. J. [illegible] Riggs was earnest and eloquent and was attentively listened to. The text was from Proverbs 4:7—"With all thy getting, get understanding." "The book of Proverbs," said the preacher, "is the philosophy of practical life. Its terse, sententious utterances meet us from a different side from most of the truths of the Bible. No one can read its pages without being impressed with the frequent repetition of these two significant words 'wisdom' 'understanding.' I can think of no more fitting message to bring hither tonight. My word to you as students is not to try and inspire you with ambition for that knowledge which is before you in your books. Such ambition you already have, and that ambition I trust, will carry you far beyond the closing days of school life and make you more than tyros in learning. I make no plea to-night for mental culture. Indeed I would keep in thought the disastrous unbalancing of mere mental unfolding, the cold metallic brilliancy of more heartless thinking. Sometimes more than the brain needs training. That word understanding gathers into it nerve and muscle and heart, brings thought to the level of life or lifts life to the level of thought, and seeks to strengthen, ennoble and sanctify thought itself. In Solomon's mind when he wrote these words the good man was the wise man and he who by any ambition made character second to attainments or accomplishments was a pitiable, contemptible fool, and in the New Testament the fatal policy of him who fastens his eyes upon the earth and searches only for its treasure is sharply declared. I urge you first to understand yourself. The mind at the beginning is a mere bundle of capacities. The greatest and chief result of a thorough education is to teach us how to think. If you do not now know it you will soon discover that the amount of knowledge you have acquired is exceedingly small. The closing day of school life is well called the commencement day. It sets you out amid activities and you must begin to think. A student will rarely have a chance to put his algebra to practice. What you know about the planets you will hardly be able to transmit into ready coin. But what algebra and geometry and astronomy have done to help you think, to focalize your mental powers upon some given object will stand you always at hand. You stand to-night on the threshold of that higher, nobler use of the mind. Enter upon it and you will be saved from false estimates, unworthy undertakings and painful failures. Learn to measure yourself. Not by the kind and well meant praises of others, but by a careful, painstaking trial of your own powers, know where you can bear the strain, get an approximate estimate of your reserve force. These things you will not find amid the stars, nor in your books. They come from reflection. Experience will always be putting new tests, unexpected emergencies and may discover latent force, but does not change the truth that a man who thinks, who reflects, may have a pretty correct estimate of himself. Understand your life. Carlyle used to say that you could never get at the interpretation of the old inscription of the Delphic oracle, know thyself, until you had translated it into the form know "what thou canst work at." Life is worth steady increasing effort. If you lay down the book, you cannot fold your hands. Many a dream palace is tumbled into shapeless confusion; many an easy hope is dashed into fragments because forsooth dreaming and hoping must be tried by action. Mental, moral, physical force must be brought to bear to keep life at the level it has reached, yes to send it higher—as you step out into these activities let me call you again to reflection. Again the possibility of understanding life is in strengthened individuality. The form of clear-cut, well-defined individuality is perhaps great because there is so little of it. It is the subtle temptation that meets us constantly to throw away our individuality and follow the crowd. Custom is the mighty thing. Nothing is so often squarely set against the just interpretation of any given reality as this same tyrant custom. It will chain thought, abuse opportunity, hamper freedom, hold progress and stunt character. It shuts us up to given lines of perception, it is wary of all new interpretations, and we can well agree with Mr. Holland where he says, "if fashion had only to do with forms and manners and methods which touch the person and the outer life it would not be important as a subject of public discussion; but it goes deeper than this and becomes a power of no mean magnitude in the world's life—even disputing supremacy with Christianity in our civilization. These two forces, instability and custom opposed as they seem to be to each other there my younger hearers will meet you—have met you already and they will keep you once and for all from any right sense of life. All your getting will be impelled and defined by them. They will make their aim to take all force from your influence and consign you to the level of their easy going indifference. Purposely thus far I have said nothing about the truth of this word for I would thus lead the way up to it with the question—Whence this individuality? The answer fills these pages. This is the text-book of life. Strange is it not, that when Christ came and the stories of the Greek language were searched for a word that should befit the occasion the word "wisdom" was called forth to do service again, and what has been called the "sanctified common sense of the Old Testament" made the embodied truth of the New. So it is, and in commending Jesus Christ to-night to you I put into your hands the only key that will unlock life's meaning—in the noble conviction—truth-sustained individuality it will make possible to you. With all your getting—wealth, fame, home, friends, knowledge, fail not to get with them this understanding of life. It speaks of knowledge, beauty and growth that have no limitation. To such realities are we destined if we get the right meaning out of life. Shall we be so unwise, so devoid of understanding as to miss it? God forbid. Indeed so close are these steps in collection to each other, that to take the one is to take them all. The young man or the young woman who wishes to think, will [illegible] to pray and [illegible] in the open door for the [illegible]

SHOE A. E NETTLETON. STORE!

Nay rather I would hold you to the thought I have placed before you, and call you individually, personally to enter upon that path of reflection, whose end is wisdom and everlasting joy. This day needs positive men and positive women too, it needs men and women who live and act under Christ-given convictions and in the strength of truth refined individuality. Let it fill the vigor of your life—the Christliness of your purpose, the residue of your reflection. Be happy, but be thoughtful. Be aggressive, but be careful. Be ambitious, but be truthful. Get wisdom, that is the principal thing—with all your getting, get understanding. And may the good Lord cause "His face to shine upon you"—help you to your noblest ambitions and make you wise unto salvation. Amen!

The graduates, Misses Grace G. Fuller, Zuilee Hubbard, May L. King, Messrs. Charles H. Howe, Edward E. Hill, Frank A. Waterman Clarence P. Hall and Charles W. Young, rose in their places as Mr. Riggs spoke to the class personally in the last few sentences of his discourse. The oral examinations of the Union Graded school take place to-day and to-morrow at the school building and Friday evening the closing exercises of the graduating class occur in the Opera House, for which 1,000 tickets have been issued. No one is admitted without a ticket and they may be obtained of the graduates. After the orations, essays, etc., the prizes and diplomas will be awarded.

The preliminary and academic papers of the Regents' examination in the school have been dispatched to Albany.

A class from the school under the direction of Prof. Boothby will compete in the State Inter-Academic Literary Union contest at Binghamton July 4, which comprises examinations in chemistry, physics and American history.

An Old Timer.

Mr. J. T. More, for 50 years a resident of Fulton and who removed to Buffalo three years ago, has been paying his many friends in Fulton a visit. He preceded his visit here by one to the Chenango valley. Mr. More informed The Times that he was a subscriber for the Fulton Chronicle, the first newspaper ever issued in this village. He returned to Buffalo Monday.

Quick Time.

A message was dispatched from Fulto Sidney, Australia, last Thursday at 7:40 p. m. and at 8:25 the same evening an answer was received. The message was sent by way of London, Falmouth, France, across Europe, through Asia, from China to Japan and thence across the sea to Australia. The whole distance to Australia and return by this route is some 40,000 miles and the record of 45 minutes is a good one.

Cleared Eighty Dollars.

Last Saturday afternoon the Congregational church of Oswego Falls held a picnic on the fair ground at which about 400 were present, including many people from this side of the river. Among them may be mentioned Prof. Boothby, Rev W. F. Marham, Mr D. M. Perine, Mrs. H. E. Nichols, and Mrs Dr Woodbury. Ice-cream, strawberries, cake, lemonade, and other good things were served and an afternoon of social intercourse and enjoyment was passed. The receipts amounted to about $80.

H. & A. Rosenbloom have just received fifteen cases of hats in all the latest styles. Don't fail to inspect the stock. 4tf

Hanlan Coming to Fulton.

Mr. Brockway of Mexico, agent for Edward Hanlan was in town yesterday and completed arrangements for a two mile single scull race to take place Thursday, July 26, on Lake Neahtawanta. Parties have stepped forward and guaranteed $800. The contestants are Edward Hanlan, Hosmer and Lee, who are well known by every one. It will be a grand event, and Fulton will be crowded with spectators from all over the State. The price of admittance will be 50 cents.

MUSICAL MATTERS.

A Delightful Entertainment at the Presbyterian Church.

The organ concert on Wednesday evening last was attended by a very select audience, who were highly pleased with the entertainment. Prof. Stevens' rendering of "Stradella," "Ingenieu" and "William Tell," was faultless, and the audience who were fully able to appreciate good music evinced much pleasure at his efforts. Mrs. O. P. Conger made a successful operatic effort in the song "Flor de Margurita," by Arditti, and was called out for an encore. "Rolling and Foaming Billows," from the "Creation" by Mr. N. H. Gilbert was well received and loudly applauded. This is one of Mr. Gilbert's favorite pieces and one upon which he has devoted much time to perfect himself. Cultivated and finished musicians speak of his rendition of it in a highly complimentary manner. Miss Gertie Stephens sang "See the Pale Moon" with Mr. Gilbert in an easy and graceful style, her well trained voice blending nicely with Mr. Gilbert's powerful baritone.

MRS. BULLOCK'S REHEARSAL

The annual musical rehearsal of Mrs. H. L. Bullock's class, occurred at her residence on Buffalo street last Wednesday evening and all of the pupils did honor to themselves and their teacher. The pupils answered promptly many questions upon the theory of music, showing a thoroughness of instruction not common, and many fine selections of classical music were rendered with skill and expression. A guitar solo by a young lad, was finely executed, and a cousin of Mrs. B., 14 years of age, displayed in his cornet and piano playing remarkable talent. Two little pupils eight and ten years of age, relatives of the great prima donna Albani, played a piano duet with fine touch and in perfect time indicating a very promising future. Miss Cornell of Baldwinsville rendered a vocal selection in a manner showing both talent and culture. The pleasant parlors were handsomely decorated with cut flowers and blossoming plants, and appropriate to the occasion, upon the piano, was a harp made of roses and forget-me-nots, resting upon a bed of pansies.

About one hundred persons were present and after the music all were served to ice cream and cake, while they enjoyed an hour of social intercourse. Mrs. Bullock's class is large and shows thorough instruction. She will remain at home during the summer in order to give her class the benefit of instruction during the long school vacation.

ALLEGRO.

THE FISKS

The Fisk Jubilee Singers appear in Fulton for the first time to-morrow evening. From the testimony of all persons and papers whose opinions are of value the public is assured that their entertainment is one of the most pleasant and delightful furnished by any troupe in the country. When people of prominence give such a troupe as the Fisk Jubilee Singers a compliment it is deserving of more than passing notice. The great London preacher, Charles H. Spurgeon, says of them:

"I am sufficiently acquainted with music to be able to say, that I never so enjoyed music in the way of performance." Rev. Dr. J. H. Vincent, of New Haven, Conn., speaks of them in still more emphatic terms: "For artistic finish, for native simplicity, for that peculiar magnetic power which wins and charms, and holds, for spiritual earnestness that tells in the expression of the face as well as the tone of the voice, this company has no equal." The personal character of the company is above reproach. Tickets can be obtained at Watson's drug store.

Pay Your Taxes.

The corporation assessors have completed their work and the tax list is in the hands of the collector, Otto Scholz, and taxes may be paid at his shop on Oneida street for thirty days from June 20 at one per cent. From the assessment roll we take the following figures which will be of interest to every taxpayer of Fulton: total amount of real estate, $1,178,185; personal property, $240,075; exemptions, (ministers) $4,400; amount liable to taxation, $1,413,860; rate, .00506; amount to be raised, $7,154.42. All taxpayers residing in school district No. 2, who pay their taxes to Mr. Eugene V. Lathrop at No. 22 First street inside of two weeks, dating from June 18, will be charged but 1 per cent. fees.

A Change of Time.

On Monday the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad issued a new time table, making a change in the time of every train passing through Fulton with one exception. They also made a change which will greatly facilitate business and travel by putting on a night express both to and from New York, to which sleeping cars will be attached. The night train to New York leaves Fulton at 3:56 p. m. and arrives in New York at 7:10 a. m. The night train from New York leaves that city at 8 p. m. and arrives in Fulton at 11:05 a. m. The train which formerly passed through Fulton going north, at 5:33 p. m. now arrives at Fulton at 6 o'clock. The day express which left Fulton for New York at 7:15, now goes 10 minutes later and the freight and accommodation which was due from Oswego at 8:35 a. m. now comes at 9:07. The new night trains afford increased express facilities, enabling the National company to send all kinds of express matter over the road each way twice a day.

HOW ABOUT THE DOSES.

Many people before purchasing a medicine naturally inquire the size of the dose and the strength of it. In using Burdock Blood Bitters a teaspoonful for the little ones and two teaspoonsful for the grown folks are all that is necessary at one time. This magnificent medicine is not only economical but very pleasant to the taste.

Rev. M. W. Chase of Syracuse University was the guest of Mr. F. E. Bacon over Sunday.

Miss Jessie, daughter of Bruce J. Kimball graduates this week from the Oswego Normal School.

This evening the Literary Society of the Methodist church will meet at the residence of Dr. D. E. Lake.

No notice will be taken of anonymous communications to this office. We have received two this week.

Mrs. Fred Emerick is acting as organist of the Presbyterian church in the absence of Mrs. F. D. VanWagenen.

The subject of Rev W. F. Markham's discourse next Sunday morning will be "Independence in the character of youth."

A strawberry of the Sharpeless variety measuring 8½ by 7½ inches was presented to The Times this week by Mr. John Hill.

The Hon. Dennis McCarthy, who is to deliver the oration on the Fourth of July in this village will be a guest of John W. Pratt.

Mr. J. E. Salsbury, who has just received his "sheepskin" from the Eclectric Medical Institute, at Cincinnati, will soon settle at Cazenovia.

"Charley" Mosher, at his confectionery emporium on Cayuga street next to the Lewis house, has added ice cream to his list of sweets, which he will be happy to serve to his patrons with lots of cake.

Mr Burt Miller, Miss Elsa VonBlumen's agent, was in town last week to arrange a race between Miss VonBlumen with her bicycle and a running horse, the race to come off about the middle of July.

Mrs. D. W. Gardner has gone to Oberlin, Ohio, to attend the commencement exercises of Oberlin College, where her daughter, Miss May Gardner, graduates next week. Mr. D. W. Gardner follows Mrs. Gardner Friday.

Mr. Robert McCully in his "Recollections of Andersonville," last evening at the G. A. R. rooms gave a very interesting and pleasing account of how they fared in "Dixie' and especially their "Bill of Fare" at the great Andersonville "Summer Resort" in 1864.

The Phœnix Register publishes the names of Mrs Ketchum, Mrs Thomas Keeler and Mrs Hanna as delegates from Fulton to the Black River Association of Universalists which was held in that village last week. Rev A. U. Hutchins, formerly of Fulton, opened the services by an address of welcome.

The Oswego Times a short time since stated that The Fulton Times was losing its patronage, but we are happy to say we have not seen the effect of it yet. On the other hand an agent for the Oswego Times was in Fulton the other day and offered a copy of that paper to a gentleman, but he wouldn't have it. The Fulton Times is gaining new subscribers daily and that our advertising patronage does not decrease is apparent to every one.

If you want a handsome dotted check or striped muslin dress go to F. E. Bacon's for it.

ICE CREAM PARLORS.

Mrs. Miller's Ice Cream Parlors on south side of Cayuga street, 3 doors east of Second street is open each day and evening. But quality of Ice Cream always on hand. Cream sold and delivered anywhere in the village by measure, in dishes made for that purpose and furnished by Mrs. Miller. 4m2

COME TO FULTON AND SEE THE FUN!

And Participate in the Biggest Celebration in Northern New York—Hon Dennis McCarthy to Speak!

The preparations which are being made by the enterprising citizens of Fulton promise the greatest celebration that has been seen in Northern New York in years and people from Volney, from Granby, from Schroeppel, from Hastings from Mexico, from Oswego, from Syracuse—in fact from all creation are invited to come to Fulton and participate in a rousing old fashioned Fourth of July celebration.

Everybody will be allowed to make as much noise as he pleases if he keeps sober. Ex-Senator Dennis McCarthy, of Syracuse, will be the orator of the day and Rev. Father O'Connell will read the Declaration of Independence.

The sports promise to afford much amusement. The potato picking contest will occur on Cayuga street, from the corner of First to Second street.

The tug of war contest, climbing of the greased pole and other amusements will happen at the corner of Cayuga and Second streets.

Parties desiring to parade with the fantastics will report to Ed. P. Cole or Louis Hewitt as soon as possible.

Post Daniel F. Schenck, No. 271, G. A. R., will hold a special meeting Tuesday evening to complete arrangements for turning out.

If you wish to see some first class bicycle riding come to Fulton. The town of Oswego and Norwich can celebrate the Fourth of July on paper in first-class style but the city of Fulton will do the celebrating in reality.

If yon wish to celebrate in the grand old fashioned way come to Fulton.

IN MEMORIAM.

A Handsome Monument Erected Over the Grave of Rev. Father Smith.

Last week a monument was erected in the Catholic Cemetery, adjoining Mount Aduah, to the memory of Rev. James Smith, the priest who presided for so many years over the church of the Immaculate Conception. The monument is of St. Johnsbury granite from St. Johnsbury, Vt. It arrived here Thursday and was immediately put in position by Mr. D. L. Simmons, of Clyde, who is the agent for this State.

It weighs 44,500 pounds. The first base is 4 feet 6 inches square and 1 foot 9 inches in height, while the second base is 3 feet 4 inches square and 1 foot 4 inches high, and its top is heavily molded. On its north side are the handsomely polished raised letters, surrounded by a polished border. Resting upon this base is the die, which is 2 feet 6 inches square by 3 feet 11 inches high. On the northern and southern faces of the die are highly polished tablets, with an eliptic marginal edge. Upon these tablets inscriptions are engraved, the one on the northern face of the die reading as follows:

SMITH.

REV. JAMES SMITH,
Born County Cavan, Ireland, 1811,
Died September 15, 1881.

Requiescat in Pace.

On the southern face the words Rev. Bernard Smith, from County Cavan, Ireland, March 14, 1812, died February 12, 1876, are found. The letters forming these inscriptions are sunken into the granite. A chalice ornaments the eastern face of the die, and a ciborium the western face. Both are 1 foot 8 inches high by 1 foot wide at the base and both are tastefully traced.

The die is surmounted by a heavily molded gothic cap—3 feet 3 inches by 1 foot 6 inches—with fillet and beads countersunk on the face of the plinth, which is 1 foot 9 inches by 2 feet 2 inches. Rising from this to the height of 2 feet is a Roman cross, with arms 2 feet 9 inches long, the granite composing the cross being 8 inches square. In the centre of this cross is the polished monogram I. H. S.

With the exception of the first base the monnment is of the finest granite and takes a very high polish. It is cut from a design which Father Kearney obtained in Albany, there being a similar monument in St. Agnes Cemetery, at that place. The representatives of the St. Johnsbury granite company, from whose workshop the monument came, have now ten stones in Mt. Aduah Cemetery, of which those erected upon the Edgarton, Parkhouse and Calvin Osgood lots are the most conspicuous.

The Father Smith monument stands in the centre of a lot 16 feet square which is to be edged by a pathway of Oswego lake pebbles. On the four corners of this lot will be a granite post, with a polished letter S on their tops.

Standing before this fine piece of monumental art, the solidity of character, the uprightness of heart, the scholarly habits, and the piety and devotion of the the man who for so long a period guided the spiritual destinies of the 3,000 members of the church of the Immaculate Conception are brought vividly to memory, and this ever present reminder of his many virtues will cause him to live anew in the hearts of those by whom he was so dearly loved.

THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

SULPHUR BITTERS

It will drive the Humor from your System [illegible]

[illegible] made by a physician [illegible] prove that the practice is very injurious. He took for his purpose thirty-eight boys, from 9 to 15, who had been in the habit of smoking, and examined them closely. In twenty-seven he found obvious hurtful effects; twenty-two having various disorders of the circulation and digestion, palpitation of the heart, and more or less craving for strong drink; twelve of the boys were frequently troubled with bleeding at the nose; ten had disturbed sleep; twelve had slight ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth, which disappeared after discontinuation of tobacco for ten or twelve days. The physician treated them all for weakness and nervousness, though with little avail, until they had relinquished smoking, when health and strength were speedily restored. Even if it be granted that smoking is not harmful to adults, there is no doubt of its harmfulness to the young. Dr. Ranking, Dr. Richardson, and others, who have made a special study of the subject, all agree in declaring that it causes in them impairment of growth, premature virility, and physical degradation. One of the worst effects is the provocation of an appetite for liquor, which indeed, is not confined to the young, but which grown persons are better able to manage.

Where boys drink to excess, they are almost invariably smokers, and it is very rare to find a man overfond of spirits who is not addicted to tobacco. Men who want to give up drinking usually have to give up smoking at the same time; for they say that a cigar or a pipe generally excites a desire for liquor very hard to control.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, operates radically upon and through the blood, and it is a safe, reliable and absolute cure for the various diseases, complaints, and disorders due to debility, or to any constitutional taint or infection.

He Wasn't Guilty.

A member of a church congregation in Wisconsin was last fall charged with gambling in stocks, and brought up before a committee for investigation. The trial began by the deacon's asking:

"Brother Smith, the charge is gambling in stocks."

"Yes, sir."

"And you plead not guilty?"

"No, sir; I plead guilty."

"Then you do buy and sell stocks, speculate in wheat and oats, and sell futures in pork!"

"I do, sir. Didn't I give $1,000 in cash to help build this church?"

"Yes."

"Well, I scooped that in on a little deal in pork. Didn't I pay $500 on the organ?"

"Yes."

"That was part of my profits in a spec. in oats. Didn't I foot a deficiency of $400 in the minister's salary?"

"Yes."

"That came from a rise in stocks. Didn't I chip in $700 toward the parsonage?"

"Yes."

"That came from a corner in oats. Haven't I whacked up on the orphan asylum, the new bridge, the park and the fire engine?"

"You have."

"Well, that means more corners and holding on till I felt my hair growing gray. Gentlemen, I will step out for a moment and let you reach a verdict."

He stepped, but it was only thirty seconds before he was called in and congratulated on a verdict of "not guilty."

A Honeymoon Spoiled.

A man who probably hailed from Buffalo played a powerful mean trick on a bridal couple at Niagara Falls the other evening. They went to a hotel and registered, had supper and then started out for a night view of the Mighty Roarer. They had not gone far when a man called to them and said:

"Have you just been married?"

"We have," answered the groom.

"Going to stay here a day or two?"

"Yes."

"Having registered at my hotel, you probably intend to remain there?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I want to say a word to you. I don't want any ducky-deary nonsense around my house. I want no squeezing hands on the veranda. I want no popsy-wopsy business on the balconies or feeding each other at the table."

The groom let his arm fall from his bride's waist in a slow and painful manner and the stranger continued:

"The first time you call her peaches and cream, or she calls you her darling, out you go?"

"Y-yes, sir."

"She's no sweeter than ten thousand other girls, and you're no more of a darling than I am, and I won't stand love sick nonsense."

He walked away with that, and the people at the Falls who knew the bridal couple were amazed to hear them address each other as Mr. and Mrs. and to see what precautions they took to prevent touching hands or betraying any symptoms of love. They put in two wretched days, and it was only as they were upon the point of leaving that they discovered how a base villain had duped them.—[Detroit Free Press.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

KIDNEY-WORT

THE GREAT CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

As it is for all the painful diseases of the KIDNEYS, LIVER AND BOWELS.

[illegible]

[illegible]

"Oh, you are Dickens' Dutchman."

"Ya, dis is vas dey call me," he replied. He said he couldn't get along and lead an honest life. He had been out of the Eastern penitentiary a short time only. If he had twenty-five cents to buy a basket he thought he might make a living by peddling. He would not tell where he was living, and he hobbled out of the office and went slowly up the street.

This is the man of whom Dickens spoke in his "American Notes," as "a dejected, broken down criminal whose life had been cruelly tortured out of him." This was upward of forty years ago, and to all appearance Langheimer is in as good health as he was then. He is over 80 years of age, and more than half of his life has been spent in prison. When Dickens visited the Eastern penitentiary Langheimer was serving out his first term. Dickens used him as a terrible example of solitary confinement. "I never saw such a picture of forlorn affliction and distress," he said. "My heart bled for him; and when the tears ran down his cheeks, and he took one of his visitors aside to ask, with his trembling hands nervously clutching at his coat to detain him, whether there was no hope of his dismal sentence being commuted, the spectacle was too painful to witness. I never heard of any kind of misery that impressed me more than the misery of this man." It was this description which gave to Langheimer the name of "Dickens' Dutchman."

Langheimer was first sentenced on May 15, 1840, for thieving. His last sentence was a year ago.

"I am seventy years old, judge," he said. "Only give me a year this time, and I will begin a new life at eighty."

"You shall have one year," said the Judge.

"And send me to the penitentiary; I am better acquainted there." And he had his wish.

He has been leading his solitary life ever since, until a few days ago. It is fair to presume that he will soon be back behind the massive stone walls.

AN EXCLLENT REPORT.

Hon Jos G Goodridge of Brooklyn, N. Y, writes this: "Cannot express myself myself in sufficiently praiseworthy terms. Burdock Blood Bitters have used for the past two years; keep my stomach in perfect trim."

He Rang the Bell.

"I would like to ring that bell. Say, won't you let me ring that bell? That must be a fine sounding bell. I will give you fifty cents if you let me ring that bell."

The speaker was a mild eyed young fellow with an innocent look upon his face that inspired confidence at the first sight. He was a Boston boy and was at Waterloo, Canada, with only fifty cents in his pocket. He hadn't had any breakfast or dinner, and when he offered Charley Hall, the proprietor of the hotel, fifty cents for the privilege of ringing the huge dinner bell that set in the office he was playing for a stake.

Charley gave the youth a casual glance, "sized him up" as "fresh," and then told him he could ring the bell as long as he wished to for fifty cents.

The young man laid down his last fifty cents, seized the bell and began a vigorous ringing. As it happened to be about the dinner hour, the proprietor thought this a good joke.

In through the parlors, out upon the veranda, and even up into the chambers sounded the clang of the bell. The guests soon became annoyed and then exasperated. "What in thunder have you got that bell ringing for?" asked one. "Tie a rope to that calf and haul him in," said another. "If you don't stop that confounded nuisance we'll quit your house," said a third.

The landlord, thoroughly bewildered, by the ringing of the bell and the complaints of the guests, went out to the fellow and said: "Come, haven't you rung that bell about long enough? The guests are all complaining about it."

"Rung it long enough? Bless your soul, I haven't begun yet. What do you suppose I paid you the last fifty cents I had in the world for? Long enough? Pshaw! You must be crazy, man. Just listen to that bell. Ain't that a splendid sounding bell? What a magnificent bell! Listen to the fine tone of that bell, man, and then think how you could ask me to stop ringing that bell. I'd rather ring that bell than eat my dinner. Don't keep bothering me; let me attend to this bell."

By this time the attention of the town officers was attracted to the matter, and the landlord was told that he must discontinue the ringing of the bell.

"Condemn it," said the now thoroughly enraged landlord. "I'm not ringing the bell."

"Well, you must stop it, no matter who it is that's ringing."

To the bell ringer again went the annoyed landlord and repeated his request, this time a little more severe. "I want you to let up on this business. You have made noise enough, and I think it is time to stop. Do you want to alarm the whole country?"

"Just listen to that bell; ain't that a daisy bell? That's the best bell that I ever heard. Where did you get this bell? Oh, it's splendid! Say, just listen to this bell. What an exceedingly fine sounding bell. What will you take for this bell?"

"The question ain't what I'll take for the bell, but what you will take to let up."

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage of real property situated within the state of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage which is dated the 18th day of May 1876, and recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego at Oswego, N. Y., on the 18th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Liber 109 of mortgages, at page 210, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Autinger, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage is as follows, Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86.) The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4) block number twenty eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street, and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 2d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.
Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 8th day of March 1883. ORLANDO HOWELL,
HOWE & RICE, Att'ys. Assignee.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagor Nathan Rowlee; mortgagee, Harmon J. Rasons, mortgage dated March 3d, 1870, to secure four hundred and eighty dollars ($480) part of the purchase price, and recorded in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego May 24 1873 in book 94 of mortgages at page 485. Said mortgage has been duly assigned to James H. Langdon of Oswego Falls, N. Y., who is the owner thereof. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York, and being two acres to be laid off in a "square form as near as may be on the south west "corner of forty acres of lot seventy-one in the old "military township of Hannibal, now Granby, and "bounded as follows: East and north by the original "line of said lot No seventy-one. South by the road "leading from Oswego Falls to Hannibalville, and "west by a line to run from said road leading as "aforesaid to the north line of said lot and parallel "with the east line of said lot 71, and at such a distance therefrom as shall enclose the said five acres "of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the 1st publication of this notice the sum of one hundred dollars principal and interest thereon from October 1st 1881, which is the whole sum unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding in law or equity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid and notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction, to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 6th day of July 1883 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Why She Hated a Tunnel.

"I hate a tunnel the maiden said,
And closer to the drummer drew;
They always make me feel afraid
Of some disaster; don't they you?"
And then the drummer shook his mane,
"You're safe enough with me," said he;
"Whatever happens to the train,
You always can rely on me."

And with ear splitting whistle's shriek,
The train plunged in the dark abyss;
The drummer sought her blooming cheek,
And frescoed it with a manly kiss,
Emboldened by her sweet alarm,
As on they tore through that eclipse,
He laid her head upon his arm,
And friezed a dado on her lip.

"Ah, me!" the maiden sweetly smiled,
As she arranged her tumbled hat,
And once again the sun beams filed
In at the window where they sat;
"I thank you for your interest;
Excuse me, sir; I get off here!"

And so she left him drowned in sighs,
And on the sea of soft dreams tossed,
Of her sweet lips and pure, bright eyes,
So quickly gained and quickly lost.
To dream! But ah, at last to wake
And learn that in the tunnel's din
She seized upon the chance to snake
His watch and chain and diamond pin.

Religious Notes.

It is a significant circumstance that while we hear boasts that the old creeds are crumbling away, there comes from the same direction earnest pleas for liberty, and against intolerance—a confession, that is to say, that the men who are chipping away at the rock do not represent their respective dominations but hope only for toleration within their limits. As has been said, using another figure, such observers mistake an eddy for the current. [Watchman.

"Progress" is the watchword which emblazons the banner of the cross. The leaven, which was put into the flour of humanity, is permeating the whole race. The germinating mustard seed is becoming a large tree. Our King shall possess universal empire; for the kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of our God, and his Christ, and he shall reign victoriously over all forever and ever. The outlook is indeed glorious.

The Church of Christ was born in ten days' prayer meeting, and it must still be found in a place of prayer. In building the church of God, prayer has the first place. Before sermon or parish work is prayer. Above all other services is the prayer service. God calls his house the house of prayer. He rears His church over the walls of salvation and by prayer the water of life is drawn with joy. The believer that is always there receives and gives a blessing which will hardly be received by any other work he ever does.

The call of God to the ministry is not made to all in the same way. It is not unnecessary that the summons should come to every one in some miraculous manner as it did to Saul of Tarsus. We are not to take the experience of others for a model. It is enough that we have the evidences of the will of God and our duty. We may not wait for marvelous revelations and manifestations. The word of God is open, his providence surrounds us, our own experience, desires, convictions, to say nothing of what others may think, are to be consulted. By prayer and study we can learn our duty, it is for us to obey. Then we go forward, not from our belief in our fitness for the work, or that we can be more useful in it than elsewhere, but because God requires it.

[Morning Star.

What a pity it is that many who call themselves preachers of the Gospel of Christ neglect the voice! Some deliver what they have to say with a loud unmeaning yell; others in a sepulchral moan; still others in two or three different keys, changing from one to the other without any reason. In conversation in the shops and stores and in the [illegible] place, the voice exerts its normal power. In rage, in joy, in fear, in pleading, or in sports of the children, it is heard and is effective. One of the most common faults is a [illegible] and continuous emphasis on all [illegible] great and small. Under such circumstances the voice adds nothing to [illegible] but detracts from their normal power. Many preachers produce [illegible] effect by preaching their sermons [illegible] would follow the perusal of [illegible] if they were printed.

[illegible] ever write a letter, and just [illegible] finishing it let your pen [illegible] a drop of ink fall on the [illegible]? It was the work of a moment [illegible] could not be effaced [illegible] you ever put yourself [illegible] [illegible] the world, and [illegible]

A SEA MONSTER.

Tom Langtry, walking along the pebbly beach a few miles from Mullingarth, came upon a sheltered inlet, where, undisturbed, he might indulge in the luxury of a swim. It was a warm afternoon, and Tom, oppressed with the fatigue and dust of a long railway journey from Dublin that morning, could not resist the temptation of a "dip" in the cool, sparkling water. Leaving his clothes half hidden among the rocks, he plunged in and struck out boldly from the land. After half an hour's lusty buffeting with the waves, he swam slowly back to shore, and, scrambling up the shelving beach, saw, to his indescribable consternation, that of his garments left on the rocks not a trace remained.

He stood for a moment looking about him in breathless dismay, shivering and miserable, but with energy enough left roundly to malign the rascally thief who had taken his clothes. He shouted in a strong, clear voice—once, twice, three times—but no answer came. What was to be done? He could not walk back to town as he was, and it was growing late and unpleasantly cool. What a fool he had been to risk his property within reach of a possible thief! Yet the spot he had chosen had seemed so safe.

A quantity of rank, coarse-fibered sea-weed, and the remains of a fish-net were hanging from a stake driven into the sand. No better idea occurring to him, Captain Langtry tore great handfuls of the slimy weed from its stony bed, and, winding it about his shivering form, secured it with fragments of the net.

He made his way inland from the beach as fast as his unshod feet would bear him over the rough stones, and, crossing a barren meadow, came at length upon a cabin more picturesque than the average, shaded by several fine oaks. Help seemed finally at hand, for surely the roughest peasant would have more suitable attire than sea-weed to lend in an emergency. Captain Langtry hastened toward the open doorway, and proclaimed his arrival by a knock and a loud "Hallo!"

His summons was quickly answered by a girl of sixteen or eighteen, who, after a swift glance at the new-comer, threw up her hands and exclaimed:

"The saints defend us, but it is the Ould One himself!"

Captain Langtry gave no heed to this inhospitable greeting, so pleased and fascinated was he by the girl's beauty. But her mental summing up of the Captain was far from complimentary. She saw only a shaggy, dripping creature, with little human about him, except a tawny moustache and laughing, saucy blue eyes.

"Begone, you villain, or I will throw this hot water over you," she cried, seizing the boiling kettle from the hob.

Tom saw that she was in earnest, and, as she absolutely refused to listen to his pitiful story, he thought it better to avoid the scalding water and depart in peace. With a last regretful glance at the beautiful little fury brandishing the tea-kettle, he disappeared behind the house, and found himself in a flourishing potato field.

In a far corner an old woman, in one of the long, dark, blue cloaks of the country, was busily bending over the hillocks. For the first time in his life Captain Langtry played the part of a sneaking thief. He stole softly up behind the helpless old creature, and, seizing her cloak, tore it from her shoulders, and sped like the wind across the potato field, wrapping himself in the ample covering as he ran.

"Howly mother preserve us!" he heard screamed behind him, and then a groan and execration reached his ears. One swift glance backward revealed the old woman on her knees among the hillocks; but whether she had assumed this position by accident or to pray for the return of her cloak Captain Langtry had no time to inquire. His trials were now well-nigh over, for the cloak, though an odd garment for a man, robbed him of his troublesome, supernatural appearance. Beyond the fire of sarcasm from urchins encountered on the way, he was allowed to re-enter Mullingarth unmolested, where, over a glass of hot toddy, he laughed at his adventures of the afternoon.

Six months passed, and after an extended tour in Norway, Captain Langtry found himself again in the little fishing village of Mullingarth. All through his wanderings in foreign lands, he had oddly enough been haunted by the bright eyes of the fiery little country lass who had threatened to deluge him with hot water on the day of his unfortunate plunge into the sea.

After careful inquiry he learned that the family who had lived in the cabin under the oaks now kept on the outskirts of the village very primitive but neat lodgings, for summer visitors. Captain Langtry seized on the information with avidity, and, after having assured himself that the blue-eyed heroine of the tea-kettle still held her sway in the household, he engaged a room for a month in the little lodging-house, which rejoiced in the name of "The Gull's Rest."

Folded in the bottom of his trunk, which was shortly conveyed to his new dwelling, lay the long blue cloak which Captain Langtry had found of such service on a former occasion. If he found it expedient to acknowledge himself the thief, he would restore the old woman's property without delay, as his conscience troubled him for not having done so long before.

Shortly after his installation in his new abode, a timid knock, accompanied by the rattle of dishes, sounded at his door. To Captain Langtry's great delight, his attendant proved to be no other than the charming little girl for the sake of whose pretty face he had given up his comfortable rooms in the town. She set the tray, containing a carefully prepared tea, on the table, and asked bashfully what the gentleman's further wishes might be.

"What shall I call the graceful little fairy who brings my refreshments?" he asked gallantly.

"Who, please, sir?"

"What is your name—Rose, Lily, daisy? Something equally suggestive, I am sure."

"Norah, sir."

"Norah—a pretty name that suits you exactly."

The pleased blush on the girl's cheek showed plainly that this time the Captain's words had been understood, and with a half-saucy, half-deprecating curtsey she left the room.

During the six months that had elapsed Norah had grown more charming than ever; her manner had lost its wildness, perhaps, through greater contact with the people of the town, and Captain Langtry [illegible] eyes and the [illegible] about him. It wasn't enough to frighten Norah into fits, but he [illegible] chase the poor old woman in the [illegible] field, and rob her of her warm cloak, the like of which she couldn't replace ag'in the winter. May the Ould Boy crack his bones! And she's been limpin' and groanin' ever since wid the pain in her knees from a fall when trying to run afther him. The villain, wouldn't I like to have him within reach of me two fists!"

Captain Langtry thought of the long cloak lying at the bottom of his trunk, and could scarcely suppress a smile.

"Old Nelly and Norah think it was a ghost or the Evil One himself who stole the cloak; do you not agree with them?" Captain Langtry asked.

"No, your honor; even though Norah declares she saw the two horns of him stickin' up through his ragged hair, I have rayson to believe it was a man like ourselves who stole the cloak;" and Teddy chuckled to himself, and a knowing light shone in his eyes, but he could not be prevailed upon to express himself further.

As the summer wore on, Captain Langtry threw worldly prudence to the winds, and allowed bright-eyed Norah to take complete possession of his heart; and, what was of more importance, he knew that love had awakened in her bosom for him. He had not a relative in the world. His aristocratic friends might scoff, and make sport of his tender heart if they chose; he would take this wild rose for his own, and they could wander away to a newer country, if their life in the old was not happy. So more and more Norah became his companion in his daily walks, his rambles by the sea-shore, and his idle half hours in the shady garden; and each day he grew more convinced that, without her, happiness could not exist for him.

As the autumn drew near, the villagers heard rumors of a quiet wedding that was to take place in the little rustic church; and old Nelly waxed eloquent and her cap-frills swayed over a very radiant face as she spoke of Norah's elevation to a place among "the quality."

* * * * * *

A fair was in progress on the outskirts of the village, and Teddy was to grace the assemblage with his presence; before setting forth, he appeared among the dwellers at "The Gull's Nest" for their approval. As Captain Langtry was complimenting him upon the neat fit of his leather breeches, and the fine development of calf in its gray woollen stocking, a noise in the street drew the young Irishman outside.

During his absence the Captain caught sight of the bowl of a meerschaum pipe which looked strangely familiar; it was peeping forth from the pocket of Teddy's coat, which had been flung across the back of a chair. He examined the pipe, and found, as he had expected, initials and a date on the silver band near the mouth-piece.

"Teddy traded off an ould pistol for it at the last fair," said Nelly, noticing her guest's interest.

"I wonder if that old witch is an accomplice, or if the fellow humbugged her?" muttered the Captain to himself.

As he returned the pipe to its hiding-place, he could scarcely suppress an indignant exclamation, for he discovered a silk handkerchief bearing his own monogram and crest in the same dingy pocket; but, when Teddy re-entered the room, all trace of astonishment had vanished from Captain Langtry's face, and he allowed the young rustic to depart without remark.

"Confound the rascal!" the Captain exclaimed, when he was alone. "To think of his having my pipe and handkerchief in his possession all this time, besides all the other things that he stole from the rocks that day! No wonder the villain had 'rayson to suppose' that the sea-monster was a man 'like ourselves'—uncommonly like myself. In truth, I should like to give this young Paddy a taste of a prison-cell; but I dare not accuse him for Norah's sake. It is well for the villain that I want to keep that adventure a secret from his cousin; her tender conscience might rebel against marrying the man who had so ill-treated old granny. No, Teddy may keep his spoils, and I will hold my tongue. My sweet little Norah's confidence in me shall not be disturbed for a thousand times the value of those paltry clothes."

* * * * * *

It was the day before the wedding, and "The Gull's Nest" was the scene of a cheerful bustle and confusion; the bridal pair were to start for Paris, and the little house was full of the tasteful new clothes that had been bought for Norah.

As Captain Langtry walked up and down the garden paths, some one touched his shoulder softly from behind; he turned and beheld Teddy, who, instead of breaking forth into one of his many voluble greetings, beckoned to the Captain to follow him into a small summer-house. There was an air of mystery mingled with malicious triumph about the boy which excited Captain Langtry's curiosity as to what was coming.

"Savin' your presence, but I never believed it was a viper we was taking to our buzzums, your honor," Teddy began, somewhat confusedly.

"Speak out, man. What have you on your mind?"

"Indade, sir, but you might have told us long ago before Norah, the foolish child, lost her heart to you. In movin' your big trunk this mornin' I let it fall down-stairs; all the things tumbled out, and at the top of the heap I found granny's blue cloak. My heart is broken entirely thinkin' of poor Norah, for the curse of the O'Tooles will follow her if she marries the man who robbed the old woman, not to spake of the lame knees."

"Have you told Norah of your wonderful discovery?"

"Not yet, Captain," said Teddy; and then his tone changed. "If your honor wouldn't mind givin' me a trifle—a bit to put by in the bank for a rainy day—I perhaps would say nothin', though it was shabby of your honor to so deceive honest folks."

"Are you quite sure of the honesty, Teddy?"

"What do you mean, sir?"

"I mean that for stealing my pipe and handkerchief, which you have in your possession now, and the other things, which you have disposed of, you deserve a year in the penitentiary."

Teddy's dismayed face was a picture; he fell upon his knees and began in beseeching tones to ask forgiveness.

"Get up, Teddy," said the Captain, "we will let the subject drop. We have both done wrong [illegible] you—do you understand?"

"I do, your honor."

Fashion Notes.

New parasols are very showy and large.

Black straws are more worn than colored ones.

Summer toilets are made dressy with lace and embroidery.

Skirts for young women are covered with tiny flounces, alternating embroidery and lace.

Silk Jersey webbing in pale evening shades is much used for the cuirass bodice in toilets of silk, satin and velvet.

A charming finish to promenade costumes intended for early summer is a long coat "Moldave" made of cloth or cashmere to match the dress, or of a contrasting color.

The novelty of the season consists in the various stamped linen fabrics. When these materials were first manufactured they had only designs of flowers, such as poppies, peonies, and roses; later came birds and butter-flies, and now very old and grotesque designs are resorted to.

A cool and charming dress for morning in the country is of pale gray nun's veiling with the skirt in five lengthwise plaitings from belt to foot in front, but only half that depth behind. The gracefully festooned poloniase is caught up very short on front and hips by bows of narrow gray and garnet ottoman ribbon, and bows to match are on the tournure.

Many of the new toilets are in changeable silks in such shades as gray, apricot, "terre cute," blue and red Skirts are in ecru embroidery in open work, with light-colored linings. Corselets of velvet or gros de Naples, are much worn. Fancy toilets of foulard, with designs of large bunches of flowers without leaves. Violet pansies or roses are on black, brown, or pink-colored groundings. They are always combined with plain fabrics. Tiny bonnets worn with these toilets are almost concealed with huge bunches of flowers. Fruit and flowers are used for the large hats.

Bonnets and hats are varied in shape and trimming. Small shirred capotes are much favored, as they are becoming to all young faces, and even middle-aged women can use this style by making some modification in trimming. The beauty of the capote depends mostly on its shade. Those having raised points in the centre are only becoming to the most youthful faces. A pretty style is a capote with a small point trimmed underneath with shirred lace, and colored surah showing through the lace. The outside of the brim is covered with three or four rows of ruched lace fastened down in large pleats. The trimming for this bonnet consists of a bright colored ribbon rosette or a bunch of variegated flowers. Many capotes are trimmed to match the toilet with which they are destined to be worn. "Bise" and "havane" laces are also employed for these bonnets. They have crowns of puff lace tulle in the same colors on gold or steel colored tulle. This tulle is much lighter than surah. There is also capotes of batiste or ecru lawn for wear with suits of the same fabrics.

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
Stem Winding Open Face Case,
MANUFACTURED BY THE
AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air-tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

"We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

[illegible] killed by a railroad [illegible] Sunday.

A [illegible] scene occurred in the [illegible] House of Representatives [illegible] and hideous yells, cat calls, [illegible] and other little pleasantries was indulged in.

The Republicans of Iowa and Minnesota held their State conventions last week and re-nominated the present Governor, Buren R. Sherman of Iowa, and Hubbard of Minnesota, the Windom faction being defeated in the latter State.

The campaign in Ohio promises to be one of the liveliest ever witnessed in that State. The lines are sharply drawn between the temperance Republicans and the liquor sellers, and the latter to a large extent will control the German vote which is large and generally considered to be the balance of power. It is not thought that enough temperance Democrats will espouse the Republican cause to make up for this deficiency. The Republicans gained a point last week, when the Supreme Court of Ohio confirmed the Scott law, which provides for the taxation of the liquor traffic. This is simply another name for a license system which is forbidden by the constitution of that State. It would be unfair to say that the Democrats of Ohio believe in the unrestricted sale of liquors, but that they do not believe in the Scott liquor law is evidenced by the fact that their candidate for Governor was counsel for the liquor sellers in opposing this law before the Supreme Court.

A horrible railroad accident occurred at Rasselas, 25 miles south-east of Bradford, Pa., on the Rochester and Pittsburg railroad, by which six men were killed and 10 others more or less severely injured. It seems that two freight trains left Johnsonburg about 300 yards apart. The first train had a passenger coach attached, containing 15 persons. On going up a steep grade at Rasselas train No 1 stopped for water, when a link broke, letting a number of coal cars and a passenger coach loose from the train. As the grade was steep they went down at a frightful speed. The passenger coach of train No 1 struck the engine of train No 2 and was smashed to pieces, the coal cars piling on the top, killing and injuring the unfortunate people. A special train was sent from Bradford, with physicians to attend the suffers, and the sight which met their view on arriving at the scene of the calamity, is said to gave been indescribably horrible. The bodies of the dead were taken to an undertaker's and, after being washed, were placed in coffins.

War has again been made upon the Trade Dollar. For a long time the New York banks have refused to receive them and about a month ago the elevated roads of that city refused to accept change of New York together with all the large wholesale dealers, declined them. Other cities have followed New York's example and the smaller towns are wheeling into line. The Banks and Bankers' Association of Syracuse have decided that the banks belonging to that organization must refuse them. The Fulton banks have also refused to accept them at any price, hoping that the war upon them will be of short duration. The principal stores of Fulton have taken a like action. In fact the crusade upon Trade Dollars is general and those who are unfortunate enough to hold them must suffer—either by holding them until the present furore is over or by selling them to speculators at a discount of from ten to fifteen cents. The value of the Trade Dollar is greater than that of any silver coin issued, but Congress has seen fit not to make it a legal tender, thus creating a periodical panic and confusion, for which Congress is alone responsible. It is to be hoped that this time the crusade will become so general and the indignation of the country will be so thoroughly aroused that the government will be compelled to recall the coin or make it a legal tender.

[illegible] the jury [illegible] the testimony [illegible] the wound [illegible] jury upon retiring stood six for acquittal and six for conviction. One juryman was afterwards convinced of the innocence of the prisoner and they stood thus all night. The jurymen in favor of acquittal, in the morning agreed to a verdict of manslaughter in the fourth degree with a recommendation of mercy, as they thought that in case of a disagreement, the prisoner would remain in jail awaiting a new trial, for a longer time than he would be sentenced. The jury were discharged and Ingersoll was sentenced to confinement in the Oswego county jail for six months.

Ingersoll was tried on the charge of murdering Allie LeValley, an eight year old boy, in the town of Mexico, on the 9th of February, 1882. On that evening David LeValley, the boy's father, went to Ingersoll's house, where his son was visiting. Ingersoll declared that the boy should not go home then, and a row ensued. Ingersoll took up a chair with the intention of striking LeValley. By accident the weapon fell upon the head of the boy, who stood near by. The injuries inflicted were so serious that the child died in a few days. Ingersoll was arrested, and has since been confined in jail at Pulaski.

Pennellville, July 2.—Rev. Mr. Rice of Watertown delivered a sermon in the church Sunday morning and Rev. Mr. Simmons of Fulton preached in the afternoon and evening.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Twenty-five factories were registered at the dairymens' board of trade Monday and 2,200 boxes of cheese were offered, and 2,000 were sold at from 8 to 9¾ cents. The market is quite lively.

AT UTICA.

The board of trade Monday was fairly attended. The prophecies were made on the board that 10c. would be the top price in New York by the end of the week, but they did not find many believers. Transactions of the day were as follows: 17 lots, 1,870 boxes, at 9⅞c.; 79 lots, 7,891 boxes at 10c.; 8 lots, 1,835 boxes, at 10⅛c.; 7 lots, 735 boxes, at 10¼c.; 140 at 10⅜c.; 370 at P. T. Sales 11,904 boxes; commissions, 3,810 boxes; total, 15,914 boxes. Ruling price 10c. The cheese sold at 10⅜c. and some at 10¼c were small sized.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The market was not very brisk Monday, yet there proved to be a liberal sale. Prices show another decline of just about ⅛c. all around. At the opening of trade dealers put the top at 9[illegible]c., but it was soon evident that this was not to be so, as offers were freely made at 10c. Salesmen made a hard push to secure 10[illegible]c., but only a small number succeeded as indicated in the list. Following are the transactions:

[illegible] was an extended article to this paper a few days since, which was duly published, detailing his remarkable experience and rescue from what seemed to be certain death. It would be impossible to enumerate the personal enquiries which have been made at our office as to the validity of the article, but they have been so numerous that further investigation of the subject was deemed an editorial necessity.

With this end in view a representative of this paper called on Dr. Henion at his residence when the following interview occurred:

That article of yours, doctor, has created quite a whirlwind. Are the statements about the terrible condition you were in, and the way you were rescued such as you can sustain?

Every one of them and many additional ones. Few people ever get so near the grave as I did and then return, and I am not surprised that the public think it marvellous. It was marvelous.

How in the world did you, a physician come to be brought so low?

By neglecting the first and most simple symptoms. I did not think I was sick. It is true I had frequent head aches; felt tired most of the time, could eat nothing one day and was ravenous the next; felt dull, indefinite pains, and my stomach was out of order, but I did not think it meant anything serious.

But have these common ailments anything to do with the fearful Bright's disease which took so firm a hold upon you?

Anything? Why, they are the sure indications of the first indications of the terrible malady. The fact is few people know or realise what ails them and I am sorry to say that few physicians do either.

That is a strange statement, doctor.

But it is a true one. The medical profession have been treating symptoms I have mentioned for diseases for years, and it is high time it ceased. We doctors have been clipping at the twigs when we should strike at the root. The symptoms I have just mentioned or any unusual action or irritation of the water channels indicate the approach of Bright's disease of the kidneys even more than a cough indicates the coming of consumption. We do not treat the cough but try to help the lungs. We should not waste our time trying to relieve the headache, stomach, pains about the body or other symptoms, but go directly to the kidneys, the source of most of those ailments.

This then, is what you meant when you said that more than half the deaths which occur arise from Bright's disease, is it doctor?

Precisely. Thousands of so called diseases are torturing people to-day, when in reality it is Bright's disease in some one of its many forms. It is a Hydra-headed monster and the slightest symptoms should strike terror to every one who has them. I can look back and recall hundreds of deaths which physicians declared at the time were caused by paralysis, apoplexy, heart disease, pneumonia, malarial fever and other common complaints which I see now were caused by Bright's disease.

And did all these complaint have simple symptoms at first?

Every one of them, and might have been cured as I was by the timely use of the same remedy—Warner's Safe Cure. I am getting my eyes thoroughly open in this matter and I think I am helping others to see the facts and their possible danger also. Why, there are no end of want to know more about it go and see Mr. Warner himself. He was sick the same as I, and is the healthiest man in Rochester to-day. He has made a study of this subject and can give you more facts than I can. Go, too, and see Dr. Lattimore, the chemist, at the University. If you want to know more about it there are any quantity of them showing the alarming increase of Bright's disease, its simple and deceptive symptoms, and there is but one way by which it can be escaped.

Fully satisfied of the truth and force of the doctor's words, the reporter bade him good day and called on Mr. Warner at his establishment on Exchange street. At first Mr Warner was inclined to be reticent, but learning that the information desired was about the alarming increase of Bright's disease, his manner changed instantly and he spoke very earnestly:

It is true that Bright's disease has increase wonderfully and we find by reliable statistics that in the past ten years its growth has been 250 per cent. Look at the prominet men it has carried off: Everett, Sumner, Chase, Wilson, Carpenter, Bishops Haven and Peck, and others. This is terrible aun shows a greater growth than that of any other known complaint. It should be plain to every that something should be done to check this increase or there is no knowing where it may end.

Do you think many people are afflicted with it to-day who do not realize it Mr Warner?

Hundreds of thousands. I have a striking example of this truth which has just come to my notice. A prominent professor in a New Orleans medical college wrs lecturing before his class on the subject of Bright's disease. He had various fluids under microscopie analysis, and was showing the students what the indications of this terrible malady were. Order to show the contrast between healthy and unhealthy fluids, he had provided a vial the contents of which were drawn from his own person. And now, gentleman, he said, as we have seen the unhealthy indications. I will show you how it appears in a state of perfect health. And he submitted his own fluid to the usual test. As he watched the results his countenance suddenly changed—his color and command both left him, and in a trembling voice he said: Gentlemen, I have made a painful discovery; I have Bright's disease of the kidneys, and in less than a year he was dead.

You believe then that it has no symptoms of its own and is frequently unknown even by the person who is afflicted with it?

It has no symptoms of its own and very often none at all. Usually no two people have the same symptoms, and frequently death is the first symptom. The slightest indication of any kidney difficulty should be enough to strike terror to any one. I know what I am talking about for I have been through all the stages of kidney disease.

You know of Dr Henion's case?

Yes, I have both read and heard of it.

It is very wonderful, is it not?

A very prominent case but no more so than a great many others that have come to my uotice as having been cured by the same means.

You believe then that Bright's disease ban be cured?

I know it can. I know it by the experience of hundreds of prominent persons who were given up to die by both their physicians and friends.

You speak of your own experience, what was it?

[illegible] felt languor and unfitted for buisiness for years. But I did not know what ailed me. When, however, I fonnd that it was kidney difficulty, I thought there was little hope, and so did the doctors. I have since learned that one of the physicians of this city pointed me out to a gentleman on the street one day, saying there goes a man that will be dead within a year. I believe his words would have proven true if I had not fortunately secured and used the remedy now known as Warner's Safe Cure.

And this caused you to manufacture it?

No it caused me to investigate. I went to the principal cities, saw physicians prescribing and using it and I therefore determined, as a duty I owed humanity and the suffering, to bring it within their reach and now it is known in every part of America, is sold in every drug store and has become a household necessity.

The reporter left Mr Warner, much impressed with the earnestness and simplicity of his statements and next paid a visit to Dr S. A. Lattimore at his residence on Prince street. Dr Lattimore although busily engaged upon some matters connected with the State Board of Health, of which he is one of the analysts, courteously answered all questions that were propounded to him.

Did you make a chemical analysis of the case of Mr H. H. Warner some three years ago, Doctor?

Yes, sir.

What did this analysis show you?

The presence of albumen and tube casts in great abundance.

And what did the symptoms indicate?

A serious disease of the kidneys.

Did you think Mr Warner could recover.

No, sir. I did not think it possible. It was seldom indeed that so pronounced a case had up to that time, ever been cured.

Do you know any thing about the remedy which cured him?

Yes, I have chemically analyzed it and upon critical examination, find it entirely free from any poisonous or deterious substances.

We publish the forgoing statements in view of the commotion which the publicity of Dr Henion's article has caused and to meet the protestations which have been made. The standing of Dr Henion, Mr Warner and Dr Litttimore in the community is beyond question and the statements they make cannot for a moment be doubted. They conclusively show that Bright's disease of the kidneys is one of the most deceptive and dangerous of all diseases, that it is exceedingly common, alarmingly increasing and that it can be cured.

At about 4:30 [illegible] Charles Atwood of O[illegible] Justice of the Peace John E. Parker in the back at the corner of First and Oneida streets.

THE QUARREL.

Messrs G. F. Schenck, D. C. Case and Justice Parker were quietly conversing on the steps of M. V. Connell's boot and shoe store when Atwood came up to them in an intoxicated condition and became abusive to both Schenck and Parker, who, noticing his condition, replied pleasantly and endeavored to quiet him. Finally Parker laughingly told him if he did not keep quiet he would have him arrested and started up the street.

THE SHOOTING.

He had advanced but a few feet when, quicker than a flash, Atwood drew a revolver and fired. Parker threw up his right hand and walked slowly into Williams' drug store, followed by Messrs Schenck and Case, who asked Parker if he was hurt. He put his hand behind him under his coat and drew it out stained with blood, saying he guessed he was shot. Mr. Schenck telephoned for a physician and Dr. C. R. Lee soon arrived followed by Dr. Hall. They probed for the ball with Parker sitting on a stool, but without success. Parker was subsequently removed to his home in the Northrop block, where he lies in a precarious condition.

THE ESCAPE.

At the time Atwood fired upon Parker but few people were in the street and it being so near the Fourth of July a pistol shot did not attract the attention it otherwise would have done and Atwood was allowed to walk leisurely away from the scene of the shooting going toward Oswego Falls, but when fairly upon the big bridge he ran at the top of his speed nearly to the house of William Coville his father-in-law, where, according to Mr. Coville, he appeared in a perfect frenzy of rage. Mr. Coville says: "I tried to quiet him and induce him to eat his supper, but this seemed to anger him more than ever. He flourished a revolver and threatened to shoot me if I laid hands upon him, saying, 'Have you your back on me, too.' His mother-in-law and wife asked him what he had been doing and he told them it was none of their business and threatened to shoot them if they interfered with him. He said he was going to the river to drown himself and embracing his young son dashed out of the house toward the river. My wife entreated me to follow him and see that he did not hurt himself, and she would go to Fulton and find out what Charley had been doing. I started down the bank after Charley and overtaking him he ordered me with drawn revolver to take him in my boat to Van Buren's Island. I thought I could get him down to the Island and quiet him. We got into the boat and when between the Island and the west shore he ordered me to take him to the river's bank instead of the Island and again threatened to shoot me if I refused. I pointed the boat toward the shore in the cove opposite the Island and before the boat touched he leaped ashore and sprang up the bank, flourishing his revolver over his head and shouting to me, 'You can all go to——', using a terrible oath—and that was the last I saw of him."

PARKER'S STATEMENT.

To THE TIMES Parker said: "At about 4 p. m. last Saturday I stood on the corner of Oneida and First streets in conversation with G. F. Schenck and Daniel C. Case. Charles Atwood came up to where we were and commenced to quarrel with said Schenck, calling him names and then turned to me and said, 'you needn't laugh, I have you down, too.' He called me indecent names and said I committed him to jail when I was drunker than he was. He said he could lay them all out that had done him harm. I told him if he did not quit his abuse I would have him arrested, and started south up First street. I had gone about 10 or 12 feet when I was shot in the back. The ball entered about midway between my shoulder and hip on the left side of my back. I heard the report of a revolver." Parker has expressed no desire that Atwood should be arrested.

CHARLES ATWOOD

is an Englishman. His trade is that of a chain maker and he has a shop in Oswego Falls. His parents are both living, his father being about 75 and his mother about 65 years of age. When sober he is industrious and his manner is pleasing, being a general favorite among his friends, but when in liquor he is a perfect fiend. He is married and the father of two children. He has not yet been apprehended.

JOHN E. PARKER

is a native of Granby and was born 39 years ago. He is married. He was Police Justice of Oswego Falls for nearly two years and has filled various other offices, being now a Justice of the Peace. At one time Parker was possessed of considerable property. Mr. Parker is well known in this vicinity and notwithstanding an unfortunate lameness his appearance gives the impression of more than ordinary genius.

Messrs Schenck and Case who were the immediate witnesses of the shooting give substantially the same version of the affair as published above.

PARKER'S CONDITION

up to the hour that THE TIMES went to press was considered favorable by his physicians, who now believe that the ball has lodged in some of the muscular tissues and not in any of the vital organs themselves, but they add that they cannot tell definitely for several days yet whether Parker will live or die.

This number of the Herald is worthy of preservation and is an indication of that enterprise for which the Herald is proverbial.

The Oswego Palladium accomplished a very creditable journalistic feat last Saturday. The shooting of Parker by Atwood happened at 4:30. At 4:40 Mr. Eugene Lathrop, the Palladium's Fulton correspondent, sent a dispatch to that journal. A little after 6 o'clock the Palladium containing all the principal facts connected with the shooting was circulating in the streets of Fulton and Oswego Falls. The Palladium was the only paper reaching Fulton on Saturday night that had any account of the affair.

COGGINS IDENTIFIED.

A Fulton Boy the Victim of a Sad Tragedy—The Assassin Arrested—Claims Self-Defense.

A number of weeks ago THE TIMES chronicled the account of a murder which happened in San Antonio, Texas, the victim being John Coggins, who was thought to be a young man whose home was in Granby. Coggins had been in San Antonio for about a year, and when his parents, who live in Granby and are comfortably off, living on a small farm in the district known as Stony Robby, saw the account of the murder of a person bearing the name of John Coggins, of course their anxiety and suspicions were aroused. They took immediate steps to ascertain whether this was their son or not. A continued correspondence of weeks has removed all doubts and the body has been identified as John Coggins of this place.

Coggins has been engaged with a man named Gray in giving stereopticon exhibitions. The business proved to be profitable and they divided the proceeds every night. Coggins was temperate in his habits and economical, while Gray, his partner, was just the reverse, being very dissipated.

GRAY ASSAULTED COGGINS

for some unknown reason, then shot and killed him. The brute then fell upon Coggins, and with a knife cut off his nose and ears, mutilated other portions of the body, tied a rope around his neck with a jug full of sand attached and threw the body into the river.

Gray has been arrested for the horrible crime, and sets up the plea of self defense, but it is thought that the accused committed the deed in order that he might gain possession of a considerable sum of money which, it is said, Coggins had in his possession at the time he was murdered. It is also said that he had on deposit about $600 in a San Antonio bank. Arrangements are being made by Coggins' relatives and friends to investigate the matter and employ counsel. Coggins left Fulton about three years ago to seek his fortune in the far west.

He was an enterprising and industrious young man, thirty-one years of age, and highly respected by all who knew him in this vicinity. His body will be conveyed here as soon as possible.

For Ladies Only.

Falley Seminary will next term be a select ladies' boarding school and will open as such September 3, with Miss L. N. Estabrook again at the helm as preceptress. Read the corrected advertisement in this week's paper.

Collided With the Train.

The Ontario & Western train was late last Saturday night but it was in time to collide with a man named Hewitt, intoxicated, who tried to impede its progress near Rust's lumber yard. The result was a severe scalp wound and a dislocated shoulder which were attended to by Dr. C. M. Lee. Hewitt was subsequently confined in the lockup until Sunday morning, when he was released to appear before Justice Piper when he had sufficiently recovered from his injuries.

The Fisk Concert.

The concert given at the Opera House last Thursday evening by the Fisk Jubilee Singers was most thoroughly enjoyed by all present. This being their first visit to Fulton the audience was not as large as they deserved but should they come again they will be greeted by a full house. They were all colored people and most of them were born slaves but they were intelligent, cultivated and refined and their sweet voices harmonized wonderfully. They were called back many times and applauded with an earnestness not to be mistaken. It is hoped they may be induced to come again to Fulton.

Two Literary Societies.

The Literary Society of the Methodist church met on Wednesday evening last at the residence of Dr. D. E. Lake. The following officers were elected for the ensuing term; President, F. E. Goodjon; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Lyman Patterson; 2d Vice-President, Jay Palmer; Secretary, Mattie Parkhouse; Treasurer, Dr. G. V. Emens; Executive Committee, Mrs. Dr. Emens, Miss Ella Lasher, Miss Hattie Patterson, Mr. A. Bennett, Mr. Redhead. Vocal and instrumental music and a short address from Dr. Emens completed the evening's entertainment. The society will hold a picnic at Van Buren's Island July 11.

On the same evening the Baptist Literary society met with Mrs. H. L. Bullock and guests to the number of 50 were present. Mrs. Brownlow's works were the subject of the evening and select readings, recitations and music comprised the programme.

SATISFACTION UNINERSAL.

Dr. W. A. Hall officiated at the Episcopal church last Sunday.

Miss Jennie Squires of Ira was the guest of Miss Gertie Dada last week.

Mrs. William Stephens left last Friday for Brooklyn, to be gone several weeks.

The Baptist Literary Society met with Mr. L. B. Babcock last evening and had a jolly time, as everybody does whom Mr. Babcock entertains.

Mr. William J. Baker, of Fulton, was married to Miss Lizzie M. Daly of Oswego last week. They subsequently left for the Thousand Islands. The bride is a sister of Supervisor Daly of Oswego.

The Baptist and Methodist Sunday schools appointed committees last Sunday to confer together and make arrangements for their annual picnic, in which both schools are to participate. The committees have not met as yet. It is probable that the Presbyterian and Congregational schools will be invited to join in the picnic.

Patterson's Injunction.

A notice was argued before Judge Vann at Syracuse Saturday, to dissolve the injunction restraining the Board of Trustees from dismissing Lyman H. Patterson as clerk of the Board, on a charge preferred against him because he refused to draw an order for the April pay of the street commissioner. Patterson claimed that he was deterred from doing this by the village charter which provided that appropriations must be voted by a majority of the Trustees, exclusive of the President. Judge Vann heard H. C. Howe for the plaintiff and G. S. Piper for the defendant. He took the papers and reserved his decision.

The Call to Mr. Riggs.

A TIMES representative called upon Mr. Riggs yesterday to ascertain whether he had taken any action in relation to the proposals of a committee from Orange. Mr. Riggs desired THE TIMES to state that he had no inclination to leave Fulton, that his interests and sympathies were with his church and the town, and that he believed he had a large field of labor open to him here. On Thursday evening he intends to form a class for systematic doctrinal study of the Bible. The class will meet at the close of the prayer meeting and everybody is invited to participate in its exercises. Through THE TIMES Mr. Riggs desires to extend anew a hearty welcome to every one to all the services of the church.

THE WAY OF LIFE.

"If you will pass
To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,
Which you are out of." [Coriolanus.

This a very simple direction, and yet for lack of giving heed to it many a one has fallen into trouble, and has suffered not only mental anguish, but material loss. An over self-confidence, a proud self assertion, a haughty depreciation of others' less demonstrative, but possibly more sensible gifts, often lead one out of the way, and if he will pass to where he is bound, he must inquire the way. Sometimes the college graduate falls into this error, forgetting that the hard ways of life are rarely the broad and pleasant highways pictured in the books he has been so delighted in studying; and unless he has also learned to inquire the way whither he is bound, he will very likely soon find himself out of the way, and all bewildered by the strange surroundings. One of the most important problems of life is how to be well, tastily and cheaply clothed. The true solution of the problem is to inquire the way to Kent & Miller's the popular clothiers, whose varied and seasonable stock of Summer Clothing, Light Woolens, Flannels, Linen Dusters, White Vests, etc., etc., afford abundant opportunity to satisfy all tastes at the lowest cash prices. "If you will pass to where you are bound you must inquire your way" to KENT & MILLER'S,
18 and 20 South Salina Street.

[illegible] The exercises [illegible] by a prayer by Rev. W. F. Markham, [illegible] Overture [illegible] Miss Eloise [illegible] delivered the salutatory and an oration entitled "Saxon Grit and Norman Culture." The oration was ably written and was interesting, her voice was clear, distinct and expressive and her gestures were graceful and appropriate. The two orations, "The Flag of Truce," by Charles W. Young, and "Advancement," by Clarence P. Hall, were good in themselves, but their delivery was characterized by considerable hesitation and stumbling on the part of the orators. In her essay on "Science Applied" Miss Grace G. Fuller spoke of the great indebtedness of the world to scientists. It was well written, her sentences being gracefully rounded in plain language, devoid of technical terms. Frank A. Waterman in an easy, graceful style delivered an able "Criticism" upon critics. His inflection was excellent and his declamation was the most pleasing of the evening. The next oration, "The Campaign of One Hundred Days" by Charles H. Howe, was written in a flowery style, containing many historical facts relating to Napoleon's last struggle at Waterloo, and drawing the conclusion that God had ordained that Napoleon should be overthrown. "Goldsmith and his friends at the Club," an oration by Miss May L. King, delineated the characteristics of a large number of English men of letters. Her delivery was expressive and with good emphasis. "Positiveness" was discoursed upon by Edward E. Hill. His ideas were vigorously expressed, showing a trained and thoughtful mind, and his delivery and whole manner was earnest. In the Valedictory which Mr. Hill delivered at the close of his oration in behalf of the graduates he thanked their instructors, the school Board and others for their labors in behalf of the school.

Prof. Boothby in a few appropriate remarks then conferred the diplomas upon the graduates, together with a Regent's academic diploma to Miss Grace G. Fuller.

The awarding of the prizes proved a very interesting incident of the evening's entertainment. The first on the list was the spelling prize which was given by Mr. W. C. Wheeler and presented in a neat speech by School Commissioner Parkhurst of Scriba to Miss Katie Doyle. Two prizes were awarded in zoology, Misses Grace G. Fuller and Lillie Kellogg being the recipients. Miss J. M. Porter in her usually apt and graceful style made the presentation. Mrs. Dr. Emens was the giver of the botany prize, and Mrs. Frank Bacon presented it to Mr. Charles H. Howe. Mr. Birney Chubb, who is a contestant for the State chemistry prize, was the successful candidate for the Union Graded School prize in that study which was the gift of Mr. F. E. Goodjon. Dr. I. C. Cu[illegible]ted it. The Case medal prize was intrinsically the most valuable of any and was given to the best scholar in grammar, geography and American history, who proved to be Miss Stella Crosby. Mrs. A. J. Allen made the presentation, and Mr. G. M. Case was the giver. Mr. Edward E. Hill and Miss May L. King were the winners of the oratory prizes.

Mr. A. Hanna, President of the Board of School Trustees, expressed the satisfaction of the Board with the school under its present management and said they had no criticism to offer.

DISTRICT NO. 1.

The closing exercises of school district No. 1 occurred last Friday in Prof. Hart's room in the school building and consisted of declamations, essays, dialogues, music and an interesting paper by Miss Sylvester. On the blackboard were a number of drawings of maps of New York State and the committee appointed by the principal to decide upon their merits selected in the order given those of Harry Howe, Robert Dodge and Lillie Pratt as the most perfect, but the maps were so nearly equal that the committee were greatly puzzled in making their decision. The class standing of a number of the pupils was read, those having the highest in each study being as follows: arithmetic, Betsey Peattie, 95; grammar, Clara Hart and Betsy Peattie, 100; geography, Florence Taft, 97. The exercises were attended by a number of the patrons of the district.

LOWER OSWEGO FALLS SCHOOL.

The lower Oswego Falls school closed last Friday. There were some interesting exercises in which Misses Lillie McNamara, Bertha Kelley, Katie Hartnett, Mamie Kimber, Libbie Althouse and Masters Tommy Gillard, Ira Allen and Willie McCrea participated. The prizes were then awarded as follows: A arithmetic, O. Howell, donor, to Lillie McNamara; B. arithmetic, G. F. Schenck, donor, to Willie McCrea; A. geography, donor, O. J. Jennings, Aggie Flannery; B. geography, donor, Mrs Swan, to Eddie Craley; A. grammar, donor, Prof C. S. Eggleston, Lillie McNamara; A. spelling, donor, C. H. Gardner, to Lillie McNamara; B spelling, donor, T. R. Wright, to Eddie Craley. This has been one of the most interesting terms of the year; the school being under the supervision of James H. Cooper, principal, Miss Carrie B. Willard, primary, and Miss Frankie Connors, assistant. The teachers have spared no pains in making this one of the finest schools in the county. The same teachers have been engaged for next term.

A meeting was held last Saturday evening for the purpose of forming an Alumni Association of the Union Graded School. Miss Hubbard was appointed poetess, Miss King, historian, Mr. Howe prophet and Mr. Hill, orator. A committee of arrangements was also appointed.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to

For Man & Beast.

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

SULPHUR BITTERS. [illegible]

[illegible] "Are they thicker than this in the summer?"

"Why, in July there's a million to one!"

"And larger?"

"Larger! Why, sir one of the regular skeeters of this section could carry twenty of these on his back and still fly high."

I thought I'd down him once and so continued:

"Now, sir, tell me truthfully, do you believe that six of your biggest mosquitoes could kill a mule if he was tied up out here?"

He looked at me in amazement for a minute and then went to the door and beckoned in a man sitting on a box and watching the horses. When the man came in the native said:

"William, you remember that air roan mule of yours"

"I reckon."

"In perfect health, wasn't he?"

"He was."

"Could run like a deer and kick like a saw log?"

"He could."

"And he was all alone in ten acre lot, William?"

"He was."

"And two of them mud swamp skeeters got after him one morning and run him down and killed him and devoured both hams and sucked every drop of blood in his body? William, speak up."

"Stranger, if they didn't then I hope to be chawed to rags!" said William, and he said it like a man who wouldn't have allowed there were two skeeters if he hadn't been earnestly convinced of the fact. He walked out doors, and a deep silence fell upon us two, broken only after a long interval by the native saying:

"I've allus kinder suspected that them two skeeters had assistance from a hoss fly, but I can't prove it. I kinder think the hossfly held him down till the murder was committed!"

In no other medicinal preparation have the results of the most intelligent study and scientific inquiry been so steadily and progressively utilized as in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It leads the list as a truly scientific preparation for all blood diseases.

A Boy of Iron.

A year or more ago, as the foreman of one of the iron works of this city was crossing the park one day, he espied a little skip of a boy, seemingly not over eleven years old, seated on a big fly wheel and chewing the end of bitter reflection.

"Who are you?"

"I'm Jack."

"What are you doing here?"

"Resting."

"What do you want?"

"A job."

These were the questions and answers. The boy was pale and ragged, but in his steel blue eyes the foreman saw game. And, too, the idea of a waif like him setting out to battle the world touched a tender chord in the heart of the man, who had boys of his own, and set Jack to work in the yard.

No one thought the boy would stay a week and no one cared to ask where he came from or who he was. But he stuck. He was hardworking and faithful, and, as the week went by, he gained friends. One day he walked up to the foreman said:

"I want to learn that trade."

"You? ha! ha! ha! Why Jack, you are not big enough to handle a cold chisel."

"I can whip any apprentice boy in this shop," was the earnest answer.

"Just hear him! Why, any of the lot could turn you inside out! When you get big enough to whip the smallest one you can come to me for a job."

At noon Jack walked up to the biggest apprentice in the shop and said:

"Come out doors."

"What do you want?"

"I'm going to lick you."

"What for?"

"Because I want a chance to learn the trade."

The two went out and in sight of twenty witnesses, little Jack won the victory. At one o'clock he touched his cap to the foreman and said:

"I've licked your biggest apprentice and I want to go to work."

Ten minutes later he had become a machinist's apprentice, and if you go in there to-day you will find him with greasy hands, oily face and head full of business ideas. Jack carries the keys to the drawers where the steam gauges, safety valves and other trimmings are kept, and he knows the use of every tool, the workings of every piece of machinery, and there is a constant call for Jack here and Jack there. Before he is twenty he will be a finished machinist, and before he is twenty five he will be a foreman of some great shop. He is quiet, earnest, respectful and observing. What he does is done well. What he is told he never forgets.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.

JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

On Call.

He was a Buffalo man. The school teacher had been talking about finance to her scholars, and young John came to ask:

"Father is there any such thing as a call loan?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well, what is it?"

"Why, old Swipes, the doctor, comes bursting in some afternoon—note to meet—needs just fifty more—hand it back next day—and I am fool enough to lend it. That's the loan part of it."

"I wait two weeks, need the money and call at his office. He isn't in. I call again; he is out. I call forty or fifty times, always miss him, call to him on the street and he doesn't hear, call him an infernal dead beat, and that ends it. Conkling's Retort.

Speaking of Senator Conking's quickness of mind during a debate, John F. Smyth said recently: "Mr. Conkling was equally swift of mind in replying to those who were rash enough to question him during political meetings. I remember that when he was a young man he was once interrupted during a speech at Utica by a fellow who bawled out: 'Do you want me to marry a black wench?' Conkling pretended not to the remark distinctly, and said with great politeness of manner: 'Will the gentleman who asked me the question have the kindness to come forward and repeat it?' The Republicans who were present cried out: 'Turn him out, turn him out.' 'Oh, no, don't turn him out; I'm sure the gentleman asked a question that deserves a reply; let him come forward,' said Mr. Conkling. So they pushed the fellow forward to the middle of the hall, where he puffed himself out and said defiantly: 'Do you want me to marry a black woman?' Conkling looked the man over for about three minutes. It was so silent you could hear a pin drop. Then he said with a drawl: 'Do I want you to marry a black woman? No. I can't say that I do—I have too much compassion for the black woman.'" and other famous women have won a reputation for facial beauty. A fine complexion makes one handsome, even though the face is not of perfect mold. Burdock Blood Bitters act directly upon the circulation, and so give the skin a clearness and smoothness otherwise unattainable.

Torpedo Warfare.

Torpedo attack in war fare is receiving pretty close study abroad, and English authorities are viewing the subject in almost every possible light. Altogether, it seems that the attack, has considerably the best of the defence in this case, for after summing up all the known methods of resisting torpedo-boat attacks, there seems to be comparatively little comfort to be gained. Torpedo nettings, the use of torpedoes from the ship which is attacked, machine guns and direct fire of large artillery are all considered, and in each case the verdict has been there is more uncertainty than is desirable. The fast torpedo boats either long projectile or torpedoes having enormous bursting charges are decidedly ugly customers, and no certain way has thus far been suggested by which their attacks may be diverted. It is all the more unsatisfactory because the small torpedo boats can easily discharge such missiles at a speed considerably greater than that of the fastest iron clads now afloat, many of them being able to keep up a speed of twenty miles an hour for more than an hour at a time, while but few if any of the iron clads will be able to keep up that speed after having been at sea two or three months. The final outcome of all the suggestions seems to be that Galting guns of one inch bore are so far as known the most effective weapon against torpedo boats.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."

Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."

River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."

520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

Lathrop's Summer Song

FOR 1883.

Summer's here rather queer,
Weather neither warm nor clear,
But croquet I display,
For the skies will mend some day.

See my fishing tackle case,
Full of flies for killing bass,
Pike or prout or speckled trout
All you can pull out.

Rods and lines, fragrant pines,
Bananas from the tropic climes,
Rockers new, wagons too,
With iron ex. I'll sell to you.

Pipes, tobacco and cigars,
Trumpets, horses, engines, cars,
Doll cabs neat, candies sweet,
Bass drums never beat.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the state of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the 18th day of May 1876, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego at Oswego, N. Y., on the 18th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m. in Liber 109 of mortgages, at page 210, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Auringer, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage is as follows: Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86.) The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4) block number twenty eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 9d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., the 7th day of March 1883.

ORLANDO HOWELL,

HOWE & RICE, Att'ys. Assignee.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagor Nathan Rowlee mortgagee Harmon J. Rasons. mortgage dated March 30, 1878, to secure four hundred and eighty dollars ($480) part of the purchase price, and recorded in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego May 2d 1878 in book 91 of mortgages at page 493. Said mortgage has been duly assigned to James H. Langdon of Oswego Falls N. Y., who is the owner thereof. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York, and being five acres to be laid off in a "square form as near as may be on the south west "corner of forty acres on lot seventy-one in the old "military township of Hannibal, now Granby, and "bounded as follows: East and north by the original "line of said lot No seventy one, South by the road "leading from Oswego Falls to Hannibalville, and "west by a line to run from said road leading as "aforesaid to the north line of said lot and parallel "with the east line of said lot 71 and at such a distance therefrom as shall exclude the said five acres "of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the 1st publication of this notice the sum of one hundred dollars principal and interest thereon from October 1st 1881, which is the whole sum unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding at law or equity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due as aforesaid and notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction, to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 9th day of July 1883 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, April 2d 1883. JAMES H. LANGDON,

Assignee and owner of said mortgage.

WM. C. STEPHENS, Att'y Fulton, N. Y.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagors Louis LeFevre and Margaret LeFevre, his wife. Mortgagee James H. Langdon. Mortgage dated August 26th 1879, to secure the payment of $349.44 and recorded in the clerk's office of Oswego county, December 2d 1879, in book 120 of mortgages at page 346. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:—

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York; and being a part of lot No. 74, and "bounded as follows:—Commencing at the south "east corner of land on said lot No. 74, formerly "owned by Dorliska A. Northrup; thence northerly along the east line of said lot, [illegible] "point from which a line drawn westerly at right "angles with the east line of said lot, shall pass "thirty-seven feet from the south end of said Northrup's house (now owned by Andrew B. Moore) on "said lot, and to extend west far enough that a line "drawn southerly and parallel to the east line of "said lot and extending to the south line and thence "east to the place of beginning, shall contain three "acres of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the first publication of this notice the sum of $149.44 and interest on the whole mortgage debt from the date of said mortgage, and there is yet to become due the further sum of $200, and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity has been instituted to recover the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid. Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises at public auction to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 5th day of Aug. 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day. Dated, May 9th, 1883.

THE YOUNG WIDOW.

Mrs. Percy was not in a good humor [illegible] day, as she sat at the breakfast [illegible] pouring coffee for her husband, [illegible] dispensing bread and butter to the [illegible] little Percys. She was a handsome, over-dressed woman, with a good [illegible] of false hair, frizzed and puffed and [illegible] on the top of her head, and a complexion that bore remote witness to the constant use of cosmetics. And Mr. Percy, at his end of the table, was evidently ill at ease as he broke his egg and nibbled diligently at his roll.

"But what was I to do my dear?" said he, after a brief silence, which was by no means peaceful.

"Do?" shrilly retorted Mrs. Percy. "Why, what do other people do? Are we to keep a home for the indigent poor? Or a home for the widows and fatherless!"

"My dear, my dear," pleaded Mr. Percy, who was a small man, with thin hair and spectacles, "you may be a widow yourself some day."

"And if I am I shall not go begging among my relatives, that you may depend on," said Mrs. Percy. "And, after all, she isn't a relative of yours—only your brother's wife! I would like to know what earthly claim she has upon you! I declare, the more I think of it the more I am amazed at the woman's presumption. Her very name is an aggravation, too, 'Plume Perry,' indeed. I'll wager my new lace pin that she was a second-rate actress when she married your brother. No, Mr. Percy, if you think that I—"

But here the torrent of the lady's eloquence was cut short by the unexpected appearance on the scene of the very subject of objurgation—a tall, pretty woman of about four and twenty, whose wavy golden tresses and delicately fair complexion contrasted vividly with the deep mourning weeds she wore.

"A veil down to her feet," mentally ejaculated Mrs. Abel Percy. "And a six inch band of the very best Courtland crepe on her gown. I wonder who's to pay for all this?"

Abel Percy, the kindest hearted little man, welcomed his brother's widow with genuine hospitality; but Matilda, his wife, looked askance at her, with no friendly smile upon her countenance.

"Of course you will consider this your home," said Mr. Percy, as he made haste, to draw a chair near to the fire.

"Until you are able to suit yourself somewhere else," crisply added his wife.

The widow said little, she only looked, with large, wistful eyes, from one to the other, as she sat there in the morning sunshine, turning her fair locks to braided masses of gold, the pearly delicacy of her skin arousing the liveliest envy in Mrs. Abel's heart.

"Though, of course, it is some French balm or Circassian cream or other that I haven't heard of," she said to herself.

But after Mr. Percy had buttoned on his overcoat and gloves he came back to the breakfast room, while his wife was putting up the children's school lunches in the pantry.

"I am not much of a talker, Plume" said he, in an odd, hesitating kind of a way; "but you are welcome, my dear—very welcome. And I hope you will try and feel at home. Don't mind Matilda—[illegible] at first. She's a little peculiar, Matilda is, but I do assure you she—"

"Mr. Percy," uttered a sharp warning [illegible] at this instant from the threshold, "is it possible you haven't started yet? [illegible] you know how particular Budge & [illegible] are as to your getting to the [illegible] at nine precisely."

Mr. Percy turned pink all over.

"Yes, my dear—yes," said he, "I'm [illegible] sure to be in time!"

[illegible] he started off on a gentle trot.

When he was gone, Plume took off [illegible] bonnet and veil, removed her mantle and gloves and went into the kitchen.

"Cannot I do something to help you, [illegible] Matilda?" she said pleadingly.

Mrs. Abel Percy looked with cold, [illegible] eyes and lips primly compressed, at [illegible] face, which was younger and [illegible] than ever without the jet black [illegible] of the bonnet, and the slight [illegible] figure before her.

"[illegible] thank you, said she, "I am not [illegible] fine ladies in my kitchen. [illegible] apron—" [illegible] Percy!" [illegible] will find [illegible] shape the [illegible] you." [illegible] young [illegible] with [illegible]

"No, mum. I haven't [illegible]" responded Bridget, who was used to these kitchen skirmishes. "Sure, I never lived in a house before where they counted the raisins and the lumps o' coal, and if I don't suit, mum, it's a months warning from to-day, if ye's plaze."

"Situation's!" repeated Plume, half afraid of Bridget's warlike demeanor, half puzzled at her sister-in-laws words.

"Yes," said Mrs. Abel tartly, paying no attention to Bridget and her skillet—"in a glove factory, you know, or a fancy store, or even as a nursery governess or attendant to some elderly invalid. For, of course, you know," with another of those oblique looks that made poor Plume feel so uncomfortable, "you expect to work for your living. We are not rich enough to support all our relations. Abel's salary was reduced last year, and no one knows how strictly I have to economize in order to make both ends meet. And a strong young woman like you ought to be ashamed to sit down on a sickly man with a family, like my husband, because—"

"Stop—oh, stop!" said Plume, lifting up her hands as if to ward off some invisible terror. "He said I was welcome. He told me—"

"That's just like Abel!" said Mrs. Piercy, scornfully. "He'd take in all creation if he could. He never stops to think whether he can afford it or not."

"I am sorry that I intrude," said Plume, with dignity. "It shall not be for long. I will look at the newspaper at once."

"Yes, that's a deal the best plan," assented Mrs. Piercy, ungraciously. "Of course you won't mention our little chat to Abel. He might be vexed; and, after all, I'm only speaking for your good."

Plume looked at her with an expression of face which somehow made Mrs. Abel Piercy feel as if she were shrinking up like a withered walnut in its shell.

"Yes, I know," said she. "But you need not be afraid; I am no tale bearer, to make mischief in any one's family.

Mrs. Piercy felt very uncomfortable after this little conversation was ended.

"How she did look at me!" thought she. "But I only spoke the truth, after all. We can't be burdened with her support, let Abel talk as he pleases. And no matter what she says, I believe she has been an actress! No one but an actress could ever put on such royal ways as that!"

Half an hour afterward, when the bell rang and some one inquired for Mrs. Oswald Piercy, Mrs. Abel nodded her head to the cake she was taking out of the oven.

"Company already," said she, "and gentleman company, as I live. Well, if this is the way she intends to go on, the sooner she suits herself with a situation the better."

Mrs. Piercy had been secretly anxious for an opportunity of quarreling with her sister-in-law. Here it was at last, and when the old gentleman with the glossy broadcloth suit was gone, she bounced into the parlor with a red spot on either cheekbone like signals of war.

"So you have been receiving company, Mrs. Oswald?" said she.

"Yes," Plume innocently answered.

"Gentleman company, too!" cried Mrs. Piercy.

"It was Mr. Van Orden, my husband's lawyer," explained Plume.

"Oh, I dare say!" said Mrs. Piecy. "All that sounds very well; but I have the character of my house to look to, and—"

"He is coming back with a carriage," hurriedly spoke Plume. "I am to go to his wife's house at once. Mrs. Van Orden is willing to give me the shelter which my own husband's relatives grudge me!"

"I wish her joy at her bargain, I'm sure," said Mrs. Abel Piercy, with a toss of the mountains of false hair that crowned her head.

And so the two women parted, in no spirit of amity.

"I dare say she'll go straight to the store," thought Mrs. Abel, "and invent a pitiful story for my husband's benefit. And Abel will make a great fuss—Abel was always soft about his relative—but I shan't mind it. I always have been mistress in my own house, and I always intend to be, Oswald's widow or no Oswald's widow."

Nevertheless, she could not help feeling a liitle apprehension when her husband came in to tea. For when Abel really was angry, his anger signified something. But to her surprise he entered all smiles, and rubbing his palms gleefully.

"So Plume has gone," said he.

"Yes," said Mrs. Piercy, pretending to be busy with a knot in the second child's shoe. "She's gone. But how did you know it?"

"Van Orden stopped at the store to tell me," answered Mr. Piercy. "Strange wasn't it? And quite romantic, too."

"What on earth is the man talking about?" said Mrs. Piercy, aroused at last into something like active interest.

"Why, didn't Plume tell you? It seems that those last investments that poor Oswald fancied had beggared himself with have turned up trump cards after all. And Van Orden tells me that Oswald's widow is worth $150,000."

Mrs. Abel Percy turned first green, then crimson. Alas for the blunder she had committed! [illegible]

FOR FARMERS.

The Irish potato crop of the South this year is the largest ever produced.

A correspondent of the English Live Stock Journal says he has found that charcoal will cure the fluke and other parasitic attacks in sheep, when salt, which has so often been recommended for this purpose, is inoperative.

Dr. E. Lewis Sturtevant, director of the New York State Experiment station, is urged for the position of Commissioner of Agriculture. Should he be appointed, there would be less "buncombe" and more valuable work done in that Department than for some time past.

The American people rear, fatten and consume more pigs than any other people, and the exports of pig products exceed every other export except wheat and cotton. The average pig exports for the last six years have reached nearly eighty-four and one-half millions.

It is important, says the National Live Stock Journal, that ewes should have an abundance of good feed while suckling their lambs, for if the latter are once stunted they will not do so well afterwards, no matter how well cared for. All young stock should be kept growing continually from the start.

The Devon cattle are believed to be the oldest pure breed in existence. For beauty and regularity of form they are surpassed by no other breed, and in color they are the most permanent, their red being always the same, and an animal of any other color is seldom produced. They are unequalled for beef, except by the Highland Scotch, and afford an excellent quality and good quantity of milk. The oxen are strong and active, and the bulls more docile than the cows of many breeds. Taken all in all, they combine more excellences, with fewer defects, than any other variety of cattle.

POTASH IN THE SOIL.

The effects of potash upon the soil are well known to be remarkable. One hears continually that "the land never forgets a dressing of ashes;" and cases are continually spoken of where the effects are apparent after 30 or 40 years. This is not surprising when the action of potash in the soil is considered. Much error is taught in this respect. Potash is held by the soil very firmly, and so is phosphoric acid; and both of these are principal fertilizing elements of wood ashes. Dr. Lawes states that potash and phosphoric acid remain in the soil for at least 30 years, and an application of these fertilizers made 30 years ago at Rothamstead is still recognized by its effects upon the crops. Potash is one of the most necessary ingredientsof the soil for plant food. It is at the same time very abundant in the soil, but unfortunately is held in its combination with silicia, in the form of a silicate, in an insoluble and inert condition, and therefore it is that an application of potash, in whatever form it may be, to to the soil has such remarkable favorable effects. It is because of their effects upon the soil in rendering the potash available by dissolving the silicate that lime, salt, chloride of potash, and perhaps gypsum, or the sulphuric acid released from this in its decomposition, are so beneficially used as fertilizers, and it is this effect, also exerted by the atmosphere and the weather upon the silicates in the soil, that makes fall plowing, fallowing and cultivation of so much use. The abundance of potash that exists in the soil may be realized by considering the proportions of it which go to make up the following common rocks and minerals which enter into the composition of rocks. Mica, the glistening, scaly substance that is so abundant in almost every soil, and in a great many rocks, contains 9 per cent. of potash feldspar; the flesh color and reddish rock which is so often associated with quartz in granite, gneiss, mica, slates, porphyry, [illegible]

Army Shoes.

There was another poor fellow, a very small man, who had received a very large pair of shoes, and had not yet been able to effect any exchange. One day the sergeant was drilling on the facings—right face, left face, right-about-face—and, of course watched the men's feet closely to see that they went through the movements promptly. Noticing one pair of feet down the line that never budged at the command, the sergeant rushed up to the possessor of them, with drawn sword, and in menacing tones demanded:

"What do you mean by not facing about when I tell you? I'll have you put in the guard-house."

"Why, I did, sergeant!" said the trembling recruit.

"You did not, sir! Didn't I watch your feet? They never moved an inch.'

"Why you see," said the poor fellow, "my shoes are so big that they don't turn when I do. I go through the motions on the inside of them."

[St. Nicholas.

A Too Faithful dog.

The engineer of the train that left Hoboken, on the Morris & Essex road at 11:15 o'clock on Thursday night saw, in the flash of the locomotive headlight, the body of a man lying across the track about a quarter of a mile norch of Orange. A large brindle bulldog stood just outside the rail tugging energetically at the prostrate man's coat collar. In an instant the train had passed over the man, while the dog with a fragment of its master's coat between its teeth, was tossed into the air by the pilot. The train came to a standstill and the trainmen and a few boys gathered around the dead man's body. They were about to lift it from the track when the dog, with a warning growl that caused the crowd to fall back, leaped astride the body, whining and growling alternately. It persistenly refused to let any one touch it.

"That's George Neboe's dog," said a boy, coaxingly adding: "here, Nell, good dog, come here."

But Nell refused to budge. Brown then leveled his revolver at the animal and fired. Nell trembled as if she had been hit, but did not move away from her dead master. The policeman fired again. The bullet entered the dog's neck. She fell, but staggard to her feet again and ran away in a zigzag fashion. The body was recognized as that of Geo. Neboe's, a bricklayer forty years of age, who lived in Joice street, Orange. Shortly after it was laid alongside the track, a puppy of Nell came up and nestling itself against the neck of its dead master, went to sleep and remained so until the arrival of the undertaker.

Five minutes after the accident Nell went limping up to the door of Mrs Neboe's residence, where she stood awaiting her husband's coming. Blood was dripping from the animal's neck. "Nell, Nell," "where is your master?" Nell whined piteously, and slowly and mournfully wagged her tail. Soon afterward a messenger informed Mrs Neboe that her husband had been killed.

The dog is so badly hurt that sheprobably will have to be killed. She refused to take nourishment. Neboe bought her seven years ago, when she was a puppy. [N. Y. Sun.

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
StemWindingOpenFaceCase,
MANUFACTURED BY THE
AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case. Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

BY REFERENCE to our news columns it will be seen that there was a large number of casualties from wind and lightning throughout Oswego county during the past week. Some of them were of a fatal character.

FOUR-OARED crews from Cornell University, the University of Pennsylvania, Princeton and Wesleyan tried conclusions on Lake George July 4. The Cornell men, who had been coached by Courtney, won by seven lengths.

TWO TRAINS on the New York and New England Railroad came in collision on the main track one mile east of Plainville, Conn., Sunday evening. A locomotive exploded and four cars were blown from the track. A number of passengers were seriously wounded and three persons, an engineer, express messenger and passenger were instantly killed.

THE New York Tribune remarks that "Three prisoners escaped from the Oswego county jail on Friday night, and the telegram adds that 'seven prisoners have escaped from this prison during the past four months.' It would seem to be time for the Oswego county jailer to take action. He might at least come out with a card asking for a suspension of public opinion or for subscriptions to purchase a new padlock. It is not stated why the rest of the prisoners have neglected to come out." There is nothing remarkable about this. Oswego is altogether too sleepy a town to be even intrusted with the care of criminals. If the county jail were located in some live town, like Fulton for instance, escape from it would be a rare occurrence.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

Extensive alterations will be made in the Phœnix academy during the summer vacation.

There are 116 persons at the county Poor House at Mexico, 50 of which are in the insame department.

Mrs Louisa Henderson, of Texas, this county, picked 161 quarts of strawberries in eight hours on Monday.

A man named Demars and a boy named Kane were seriously injured near the N. Y. O. & W. depot in Oswego Monday afternoon, by having a bar of railroad iron fall on their legs.

William C. Ruger, Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, has been honored with the degree of L.L. D. by the Syracuse University. He is a man worthy of such honors, and he will make a favorable impression without.

At the Oswego county teacher's association held in Pulaski last Saturday an organization was completed and the following officers elected: President, the three School Commissioners; Recording Secretary, D. A. Richardson, Williamstown; Treasurer, O. H. Gurley, Pulaski. Addresses were made by Commissioners Parkhurst and Nutting.

A terrible accident, which resulted in the death of John Burns of Oswego occurred at Kingford's foundry Monday afternoon. Burns was engaged with other workmen in breaking iron outside the foundry. An iron ball weighing 480 pounds had been hoisted 30 feet from the ground, which fell and struck Burns on the head, causing a terrible fracture at the base of the skull. Burns was 31 years old.

Last Thursday at Cleveland, this county, a bolt of lightning descended from nearly a clear sky, striking ex-Senator Foster's residence. A large tree standing in front of the house was stripped of bark. From the tree three furrows were ploughed in the ground toward the house, which was considerably damaged. The house was furnished but not occupied. No fire was caused. Several in the vicinity felt the shock severely. About the same time P. Cavanaugh, [illegible] one mile north, was leading a horse into the barn, when a bolt of lightning shocked himself and horse, setting fire to the barn. The fire was put out.

South Hannibal.

SOUTH HANNIBAL, July 9.—Last Saturday a handsome monument was erected over the grave of Elmer Hulett in White's burying ground by George H. Fassell of Fulton. The stone is eight feet high and is carved in the Gothic style from the finest Sutherland Falls marble. It is surmounted with an urn. Its cost was $175. Mr. Hulett died April 15, 1882, at the age of 56.

Lysander.

LYSANDER, July 9.—Cassie, oldest daughter of Edward and Ann Summerville, died of heart disease at 9 p. m. yesterday in the 18th year of her age. She had been an invalid for a long time, but bore her affliction so sweetly and uncomplainingly that there were none who knew her but loved her. The funeral occurred Tuesday at residence, Rev. Mr. Franklin preaching the funeral sermon.

"She is not dead—the child of our affection,
  But gone into that school
Where she no longer needs our poor protection,
  And Christ himself doth rule.

"Day after day we think what she is doing
  In those bright realms of air;
Year after, her tender steps pursuing,
  Behold her grown more fair."

Palermo.

PALERMO, July 9.—The first quarterly meeting on the Gilberts Mills charge was held at Clifford M. E. church on Saturday and Sunday, Presiding Elder Mead preaching both days.

We are sorry to announce that our esteemed citizen, Martin Chaffee, is quite sick with dyspepsia.

Fred Scudder is being congratulated upon the advent of a bran new boy.

Mrs. Martin Chaffee of this town is supposed to be one of the heirs to the large estate belonging to the descendants of Governor Bradford of Plymouth Colony fame, which awaits the owners in England.

Andrus Gardner received a back pension July 4, amounting to $864.

Alexander Flint of Savannah, Georgia, is visiting friends in town. C.

Gilberts Mills.

GILBERTS MILLS, July 2.—Rev. Z. T. Griffin, who has been spending a few days at Lake George, has returned home.

Yesterday was observed in the Baptist church as children's day. The church was gracefully decorated with flowers, evergreens and mottoes. In the morning Rev. G. H. Ball, D. D., of Buffalo, preached to a very large congregation and in the evening the children occupied the time. The exercises were a pronounced success. The best thing of the evening was a class exercise by three little girls, Reda Byer, Lillie Hollenbeck and Nellie Griffin. These little girls are but four years old GILBERTS MILLS, July 6—A cow belonging to Monroe Blodgett was struck by lightning last Monday.

South Granby.

SOUTH GRANBY, July 10.—The Methodist church at Little Utica that was burned last week was insured for $1500 and was valued at about $4,000. They saved all the window sash and blinds and fixtures inside. The Society intend building again immediately and have already raised $1,000 besides the insurance. Services were held last Sabbath at the Baptist church in Jacksonville and will continue to be held there hereafter.

A severe wind and rain storm visited this section the Fourth and did considerable damage. Trees were uprooted and fences badly demolished. A tobacco shed owned by Thomas Welch of this place was moved from its foundation. Rain fell in torrents, with some hail.

Farmers have commenced haying. The grass crop is very good in quantity, but owing to so much wet weather, is somewhat inferior in quality.

North Hannibal.

NORTH HANNIBAL July 6.—The strawberry season is nearing its close.

Considerable damage was done to the crops in this vicintty by the hail storm of the 3d inst.

A son of G. J. Lockwood was to-day bitten by a large dog owned by William Blodgett.

Some of our girls have returned from New Haven, where they went to pick strawberries.

E. G. Newman has his evaporater and W. J. Bradt his sugar cane mill underway.

The vacation in our school closes this week, when Miss Nellie Curtis of Fulton returns to resume her duties as teacher. The close of the half term was a pleasant occasion and a large number of the patrons of the school attended the exercises which consisted of recitations, class exercises, declamations, papers and music by the school, a select reading by Mrs. F. Stark and remarks by some of the ladies and gentlemen present. The conduct of the school during the term and the closing exercises reflect much credit upon teacher and pupils. At the close of the school week a bountiful table was spread on the lawn in the school grounds under the large tent of D. D. Metcalf, and a very pleasant picnic was held. B.

[illegible] Samuel J. Doyle, Manager.

[illegible] natural that unusual interest should be manifested not only in theatrical circles, but in other branches of the community. This was especially the case, as it was known that Miss Granger had for the past year, been in exceedingly delicate health, and the determination to a star in a strong emotional play was the more surprising. One of the staff of this paper was accordingly deputized to see the popular lady and verify the rumor or announce its incorrectness.

Miss Granger's countenance is familiar to nearly every one in the United States. It is a face once seen never to be forgotten. Features so remarkable in their outline and contour are surmounted by a pair of large and deep eyes indicative of the greatest soul power. It is easy to see where Miss Granger obtains the ability to portray characters of the most emotional nature. She possesses within herself the elements of feeling without which no emotion can be conveyed to an audience. The man of news found the lady at her home in this city and was accorded a quiet welcome. It was evident at once that she was in greatly improved health, which the expression and color of her countenance both indicated.

Is it true Miss Granger that you contemplate a starring tour during the coming season?

Yes, indeed. My season begins in Chicago on the 16th of July. From there I go to San Francisco and then play the remainder of the season through the eastern and western states.

Are you confident that your health will permit of such an undertaking?

A ringing laugh was the first reply to this question, after which she said:

Certainly. It is true I have been ill for the past two years, but now I am wholly recovered. Few people can have any idea of the strain a conscientious actress undergoes in essaying an emotional part. It is necessary to put one's whole soul into the work in order to rightly portray the character. This necessitates an utter abandonment of one's personality and an assumption of the character portrayed. If this is an emotional part it is necessary to feel the same emotion the part is supposed to feel. For more than a year I actually cried each night in certain passages of a play I was playing. The audience considered it art. Probably it was, but those were none the less real tears and the effect was none the less trying upon the health.

But do you anticipate avoiding this in the future?

Not in the least. I expect to have just as great a strain as before but with restored health and a knowledge of how to retain it I do not fear.

You speak of a knowledge of how to retain health. Will you please explain what you mean by that?

You must be aware that women by their very natures are subject to troubles and afflictions unknown to the sterner sex. The name of these troubles is legion, but in whatever form they may come they are weaknesses which interfere with every ambition and hope in life. I believe thousands of noble women are to-day suffering agonies of which even their best friends and relatives know little or nothing, and when I reflect upon it I confess it makes me sad. All this misery arises largely from an ignorance of the laws of life or a neglect to carefully observe them. I speak from the depths of a bitter experience in saying this, and I am thankful that I know the means of restoration, and how to remain in perfect health.

Please explain more fully.

Well, I have found a remedy which seems specifically adopted to this very purpose. It is pure and palatable and controls the health and life as, I believe, nothing else will. It is really invaluable and if all the women in America were to use it I am quite sure most of the suffering and many deaths might be avoided.

What is this wonderful remedy?

Warner's Safe Cure.

And you use it?

Certainly.

And hence believe you will be able to go through the coming season successfully.

I am quite certain of it.

A few questions more Miss Granger. Will you please give me a list of the parts you have created and the plays you have taken part in since your first appearance in public?

I first played for some time with the amateurs in New York and Brooklyn. I then went to the Union Square theatre for two seasons, after that to the Boston Globe for one season and then to Booth's theatre in this city. Next I supported John McCullongh and afterwards starred in Juliet, Camille, Rosalind, etc. Subsequently I created the part of Cicely Blaine in the Galley Slave and also starred in Two Nights in Rome, playing the part of Antonia. The past year I have been playing in the Planter's Wife and the coming season, as I have said, will be devoted to Her Second Love.

As the writer was returning home he fell into a train of musing and wondered if all the women in this land who are suffering could only know Miss Granger's experience and the remarkable results achieved by the pure remedy she used, how much suffering might be avoided and how much happiness secured.

The West Shore Line.

It is probable that the date of the completion of the Syracuse, Phœnix & Oswego Railroad is not far distant. A gentleman who is largely interested in the road informs THE TIMES that if it is put in operation at all it will be by the West Shore Company. Another petition was recently entertained by the Syracuse Board of Alderman for a right of way of the Syracuse, Phœnix & Oswego road through the city. The petition was entered in the interest of the West Shore Company. The petition was referred to the Mayor, Common Council and City Attorney. It is to be hoped that the matter will be pushed forward as rapidly as possible, as the completion of this road means cheaper fares and greater facilities in freight and passenger traffic to and from Syracuse.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

The meeting of the Dairymen's board of trade Monday was largely attended, with thirty factories registering an offering of 2,468 boxes of cheese. Of this amount seventeen lots were sold; six lots on private terms, 4 lots at the ruling price which was 9¾c, two lots at 9½c, and one lot each at 9⅛c, and 9c⅞. Considering the state of the market it is thought that the day's business was exceedingly good.

AT UTICA.

There was a full attendance at the cheese board Monday. There was no disposition to hold stocks and it did not take long to close contracts. The cheese makers say that the pastorage is magnificent. Yet there is the ususal shrinkage of milk which usually occurs at this time. About 14,000 boxes in all were sold, including some 3,000 on commission. A very few cheese only realized 9¾c. The bulk sold at 9½ to 9¾c, the latter being the ruling price. A small number of first rates brought 9⅞c and a few small cheese realized 10c. Exports keep up pretty well with the receipts and help to keep the market tolerably firm.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

The meeting at the cheese board Monday was fairly attended. Buyers were not quite of one mind as to what prices should be. Some would not pay over 9½c, for the very finest, while others appeared glad to get such at 9¾c. Prices on the whole are about one-half cent lower than last week. White cheese goes at fully one-fourth cent below colored, selling at 9¼ to 9½c., about in equal amounts. No white cheese, we believe, sold higher than 9½ cents. Dairymen are beginning to complain of shrinkage of milk, hardly to be expected to the extent shown, in view of the great abundance of feed, but some attribute the difficulty to the grass lacking substance, it having grown so fast on account of the wet weather. Now that the weather has turned cooler, and because of the shrinkage in milk, farmers are trusting that prices will go no lower. Following were the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
4	447	9
38	3,298	9¼
63	4,176	9⅜
20	2,363	9½
12	1,031	Commission
127	11,305
Farm Dairy	826
Total	12,131

AT FULTON

The market was dull Monday. Twenty-two factories were represented with 2,120 boxes of cheese. Four factories sold at 9¼c; twelve factories shipped on commission and the balance held over. The price one year ago was 10 cents.

Freaks of Lightning.

W. J. Whitney of Rome, N. Y., and his daughter stood under a tree during a thunder storm Wednesday. Lightning struck the tree, and taking Mr. Whitney's left arm in its course passed down his legs and escaped through the toes of his shoes, making two small holes in the ground. He was stunned.

While the steamer Passport was going up Lake Ontario on Wednesday, lightning struck her flagstaff, cutting off the truck as though a knife had been applied.

William Waters of North Williamstowns used a telephone during a thunder storm. Lightning struck it, passed down his side and through his boot into the floor. He will recover.

The Widow Allen of Morrisville, N. Y., had been palsied for two years. Lightning stuck her house and tore the soles from her shoes. She has had no palsy since.

Yesterday morning Albert Yale discovered his bull dead in the pasture. It had probably been killed by lightning on the Fourth. [Syracuse Herald.

THE PROCESSION

formed on First street at the Lewis house corner at 7 o'clock and was marshalled in the following order:

Post Daniel F. Schenck, G. A. R., under William Pentelow, Orator of the Day,
Common Council and Prominent Citizens in Carriages,
Fulton Brass Band,
Fire Department: Engine No. 1, Mutual Hose, Engine No. 2, Johnson Hose, Hook and Ladder, Company of Fantastics,

AT THE PARK.

The procession was commanded by Marshal G. V. Emens and Assistant Marshals N. H. Haviland and Thomas Carr, jr., who marched it through the principal streets to the park, where it broke up. The orator of the day and a number of prominent citizens repaired to the pagoda and after listening to music from the band bowed their heads in holy reverence while Rev. Mr. Markham offered an appropriate prayer. "America" was sung by the glee club and the Declaration of Independence was read in an impressive manner by Rev. Father Daniel O'Connel, of Oswego. Then the venerable ex-Senator of New York, the Hon. Dennis McCarthy, delivered a somewhat lengthy oration and was attentively listened to by the older members of his audience, who complimented him with frequent applause. The exercises were appropriately closed with the "Star Spangled Banner," by the glee club. In the afternoon occupied the attention of a fair sized crowd of people and were opened by an attempt on the part of a number of men and boys to climb a greased pole erected on the vacant lot, corner of Cayuga and Second streets. A 100 hundred yard running race, 50 yards of which was run backward was won by Merritt Tallman as was also another 100 yard running race. Charles Vogelgsang captured the greased pig, which he disposed of for $6. There was a boys' running race on Oneida street. Willie Miner came in first and Charlie Tallman second. In the tub race James Elder, jr. carried off the laurels and $2, and Eddie McDonough won $1, the second money. A good display of was witnessed in the evening by a large crowd. They were sent off from the canal bridge adjacent to the Riverside mills.

THE SPORTS

FIREWORKS

NOTES.

Cleveland, N. Y., celebrated in a somewhat elaborate manner.

There was a circus at Central Square and the tent was blown down.

Hannibal celebrated and the Hannibal News says the affair was a perfect success.

Miss Minnie Moore's Oswego Falls school drew the prize for being the largest school in attendance, there being no other school present to oppose their claim.

The Sons of Temperance had a tent on the park where they dispensed ice cream, lemonade, etc., and enriched their organization by $31.80. The gross receipts were $55.

There was a slight disagreement in reference to the place for sending off the fireworks. Some of the insurance and mill men were opposed to their being sent off near the mill property.

Messrs. A. B. Fletcher and H. Brown engaged in a pigeon shooting contest on the fairground, on the Fourth for a purse of $50. They shot at nine birds each. Fletcher killed six birds, winning the money and Brown brought down five.

A fire balloon struck the cupola of the Genesee mills during the display of fire works. It was dislodged in sections by Mr. Osborne, an employee of the mill who reports that some portions of it were still burning when he tore it from its fastening.

There was an attempted celebration at Oswego, but several little incidents combined to mar the glorious (?) festivities of that slow and easy going community. There was to have been a balloon ascension but it failed to connect. Fireworks had been ordered from New York, but they did not come.

The Reading Union of lower Oswego Falls held a picnic on Van Buren's Island on the Fourth. It was largely attended and a bountiful repast was served about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, consisting of all the delicacies of the season. They will commence holding their meetings late in the fall, and many are looking forward to the time with eagerness.

The fantastics included several amusing features, prominent among them being the characterization of personal peculiarities of a number of Fultonians, but one of the representations was so obscure in meaning that it was difficult to decide whom it was intended to hit. The committee having the fantastics in charge says that the monkey, which [illegible] formed the most amusing [illegible]

Mrs. [illegible] of New York is rusticating in Fulton.

Mrs. Frank Preston of Oswego Falls is visiting at Cornwall, Ontario.

Call at Oneida St. Cigar Factory for choice brands of Cigars and Tobacco.

Mr. James Morton, who has been ill for some time past, is much improved in health.

Rev. David McFarland of Hannibal and Mr. B. R. Dow exchanged pulpits Sunday morning.

Mr. Ira Curtis of Hannibal was the guest of his son Dr. I. C. Curtis last Wednesday and Thursday.

Cigar Clippings only 22 cts. per lb. at Oneida St. Cigar Factory.
Samuel J. Doyle, Manager.

The Presbyterian church have raised the salary of their pastor, Mr. J. S. Riggs, from $1200 to $1600.

The subject of Rev. W. F. Markham's discourse next Sunday evening will be "The Bankrupt Young Man."

Mr. Jeff Bailey, accompanied by friends from Syracuse, held a picnic at Van Buren's Island yesterday.

J. C. Dewey has purchased the house and lot of James Campbell and will remove to Oswego Falls this fall.

The Sunday school of the First Methodist church of Oswego is holding a picnic on the Fair grounds to-day.

Misses Dollie and Jennie Bixby of South Norwalk, Conn., are the guests of Allie Waterman on Buffalo street.

The Ultacs is engaged in a lawn tennis tournament at the park to-day. The result will be given in next week's Times.

O. G. Stowell and wife, who have been visiting friends and relatives in lower Oswego Falls, have returned to their home in Rochester.

Mr. Worden, an old resident of Fulton, who has been more or less deranged for a number of years, was taken to the Utica asylum yesterday.

Mr. B. R. Howe is to have his brick store in Oswego Falls stained and tucked. C. J. Hogan, who just completed the church will do the work.

The Meridian correspondent of the Baldwinsville Gazette writes that Dr. and Mrs. Carroll of Fulton, have been visiting their son, Dr. Will Carroll.

We are indebted to C. P. Tucker & Son for a sample of large strawberries called the Sharpless. They are raised by Dr. L. E. Hewitt and are kept on sale by the above mentioned firm.

Mrs. George Ghauncey, who has been in poor health for some time past, and has been stopping with her father, Mr. R. Bradshaw, is so much improved that she has joined her husband at Suspension Bridge.

Mrs Anna Randall Dhiel, the famous elocutionist, was the guest of Mrs C. S. Eggleston for three days last week, leaving for her home in New York on Saturday. Mrs Dhiel was formerly an instructor in Falley Seminary.

The ordination of Mr. B. R. Dow, the new pastor of the Baptist church is to be deferred until September, as Mr. Dow will take his vacation during the month of August and he does not wish to be absent from his church for so long a period immediately following his ordination.

The church of the Immaculate Conception will hold a picnic on the Fair grounds on Thursday, July 19. Those who attend will doubtless enjoy themselves to the fullest measure, as an amusing programme of entertainment has been prepared. There will be a horse race, mule race, and impromptu sports of a varied character.

Mr. William Coats, who has been principal of the Manlius, Onondaga county, public school for a number of terms, has resigned his position as principal and has just accepted the editorship of the Syracuse Sunday Times. Mr. Coats will be remembered as one of the ablest instructors ever in charge of the Union Graded School. Mr. Coats is in town for a few days.

[illegible] Improving.

[illegible] is rapidly improving. He told The Times yesterday that he expected to be out by the latter part of the week. He is able to sit bolstered up in his bed for several hours every day. The ball has not been extricated and probably will not be found. Atwood has not yet been caught.

Obituary Notes.

George Sylvester, who lately removed from Oswego to Oswego Falls, died last Wednesday, aged 53.

Last Thursday Mrs. Margaret Kennedy died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. McGue, in Oswego Falls, at the advanced age of 87 years. Her funeral services were held at the church of the Immaculate Conception on Saturday.

Moses P. Withey died at his home on Utica street last Sunday morning at the age of 72 years. Mr. Withey was a tin peddler and lost his horse a few days since, which discouraged the old gentleman and probably hastened his demise. His funneral occurred yesterday at 10 o'clock.

Smoke "Uncas Club." Best 5cts. Cigar in town. For sale at Cigar Factory.

The Lower Quarry.

Work in the lower brown stone quarry has been abandoned for the present. Attorney H. C. Howe and Thomas R. Wright took the quarry about two weeks ago and were given ten days time by S. C. Schenck, who is the owner, to investigate the quality of the stone, and if it proved good they would retain the quarry and work it. Messrs Howe and Wright called for an extension of ten days, as the inclement weather had prevented them from completing their investigation. The extension of time was refused by Schenck, and Howe and Wright will have nothing to do with the quarry unless their request is granted.

Enforcing the Law.

President of the village J. F. Herrick is inaugurating energetic measures for the enforcement of the Excise law upon the Sabbath, which has lately been openly and boldly violated by a number of the liquor dealers. Acting upon the request of a number of prominent citizens Mr. Herrick last Saturday notified the liquor dealers that their places must be closed on the Sabbath. James Sweet, a thoroughgoing temperance man, was appointed a special officer to see that the order was obeyed. Last Sunday no violations were reported and to all appearances every place was closed. Hereafter arrests will be made and offenders promptly brought before a magistrate.

Home Again with Three Prizes.

Ten pupils from the Fulton Union Graded School competed in the State Inter-Academic Literary Union examination at Binghamton last week, and two of them came home wearing the laurels of victory. They were Mr William R. Wright, who won the first prize in physics—$15—and the second prize in chemistry, which amounted to $10, and Mr Alfred LaPort who drew the first prize in United States history, amounting to $15. The first prize in chemistry was not awarded as no one of the 100 pupils, representing 13 schools attained the required 85 per cent. Mr Wright's, per cent. was the highest in this study and was over the necessary 75 to secure the second prize.

Two Weddings.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning Mr Patrick O'Grady of Buffalo was married to Miss Nora Noonan of Fulton, at the church of Immaculate Conception. The ceremony was performed in an impressive manner by Rev Father Kearney. Mr John Reynolds acted as groomsman and Miss Anna Harte was the bridesmaid. The bride wore a golden brown silk dress, with a Jersey waist. The skirt was puffed with drapings, was box plaited and trimmed with ottoman bows. Real Irish point lace adorned the neck and sleeves. Miss Maggie Cullen made the dress. A number of friends and relatives witnessed the ceremony. The Times joins their many friends in tendering congratulations.

Last Thursday Mr Wilber F. Hill was married to Mrs Cora A. Blackman at the residence of Mr Nelson. The ceremony was performed by Rev W. F. Markham. May they live long and prosper is the wish of The Times.

Fulton, July 10th, '83.

To Dr. C. G. Bacon and others:

Dear Friends—Your communication containing a request for the repetition of my sermon on "Independence in the Young," preached last Sabbath evening, is at hand. In reply, I would say that while I appreciate very highly your endorsement of my teaching and the interest manifested I would gladly avail myself of every opportunity to do good to any and all. I think it best, and would prefer with your permission, to hold the matter of your request open until the completion of the short series of sermons promised, (of which the one of last Sabbath evening was first in order) to be partially met perhaps by a review or summarizing of the more important teaching of the series in a supplementary sermon. Hoping my thought and wish will meet your approval I remain, Yours Respectfully.

The Coming Race.

Mr. Charles T. Brockway, of Mexico, the representative of Hanlan, Hosmer and Lee, who are to row on Lake Neahtawanta July 26, is in town making arrangements for the event. A grand stand is to be erected along the eastern shore of the lake with a seating capacity for 5,000 people. The race will be over a three miles course with a double turn and will extend along and nearly parallel to the eastern shore, or over the same course of the Courtney-Riley race of two years ago. The railroads will carry passengers at half fare to and from the race.

A Literary Picnic.

The annual picnic of the the Methodist Church Literary Society was held on Van Buren's Island yesterday. Upwards of 50 participated in the affair In the afternoon, after a very sumptuous repast had been served, the President, Mr. F. E. Goodjon, proposed the following toasts: "The M. E. Literary Society," responded to by Rev. W. F. Markham; "Why am I here," E R. Redhead; "Pic-Nico," Dr. G. V. Emens; "The Bachelors and Maidens," Mrs. Redhead; "Music and Art," Homer Emens; "The ladies of our society," Mrs. Emens. The occasion was a very enjoyable one, and will long be remembered by those who were present.

Nearly Completed.

The First Congregational church of Oswego Falls is nearly completed and the builders, painters and other workers will probably have ended their labors by the middle or last of August. Last Thursday evening an important meeting of the society was held, at which a goodly number of the church and congregation were present. Clerk of the Church Marsh read a detailed estimate of the cost of the church building and said the subscriptions amounted to $10,440, including $2,000 from Mr. A. D. Julliard and $2,000 by Mr. B. R. Howe, which were offered upon the condition that the church be dedicated free from debt and that the seats remain free. The gifts were accepted on these conditions and resolutions adopted to that affect. The total cost of the building is estimated at $14,440. It was decided to use electric light in the church and A. L. Merrick, the architect, and Mr. A. D. Julliard have been authorized to select suitable chandeliers.

THE WAY OF LIFE.

"If you will pass
To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,
Which you are out of." [Coriolanus.

This a very simple direction, and yet for lack of giving heed to it many a one has fallen into trouble, and has suffered not only mental anguish, but material loss. An over self-confidence, a proud self assertion, a haughty depreciation of others less demonstrative, but possibly more valuable gifts, often lead one out of the way, and if he will pass to where he is bound, he must inquire the way. THE WORLD CHALLENGED

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

ENSILAGE.

A Story of the Amateur Agricultural Editor.

Dykes Fortescue rambled into the office of a rural newspaper published in the interest of a small class of rural readers, and named the Farmers' Friend and Cultivators' Champion. Dyke was fresh from Denver, where he had been doing local work on a daily. He wanted a situation—he wanted it badly, and he soon closed a bargain with the proprietor of the Farmers' Journal and Cultivators' Champion. The proprietor intended to be absent for two weeks, and Dyke undertook to hold that journal's head steadily up stream until his return.

"You will receive some visitors, quite likely," said the proprietor. "Entertain 'em. Entertain 'em in a manner which will reflect credit on the paper. They will want to talk of stock, farming, horticulture, etc., you know. Give it to 'em strong."

Dyke bowed, borrowed a half dollar, got a clean shave, a glass of beer, and soon returned to face the music and edit the first agricultural journal with which he had ever been connected.

"I can feel that, with my journalistic experience, it will be just fun to run an agricultural paper," said Dyke to himself.

At two o'clock p. m. the first visitor showed up at the door of the office, and Dyke cordially invited him inside. The farmer hesitatingly remarked that he had expected to meet the proprietor, with whom he had an appointment to discuss ensilage.

"I am in charge of the journal," said Dyke.

"O, you are! Well, you seem to have a pretty clean office here."

"Yes," replied Dyke. "But about this ensilage. Ensilage is a pretty good breed, isn't it?"

"Breed!" exclaimed the farmer. "Why—"

"I mean it's a sure crop—something that you can rely—"

"Yes, yes, I know it isn't a crop," said Dyke, perspiring until his collar began to melt away down the back of his neck; but you can do better and and cleaner work with good sharp ensilage on tubby ground than—"

"Take it for a sulky plow, do?"

"No, No," said Dyke. "You don't seem to understand me. Now, if a farmer builds an ensilage on low ground—"

"Builds an ensilage! You seem to have got the thing mixed up with some kind of a granary."

"Pshaw! no," continued Dyke. "I must make myself plainer. You see, this ensilage, properly mixed with one part guano and three parts hypophosphate of antimony, with the addition of a little bran and tan bark, and the whole flavored with chloride of lime, makes a top dressing of strawberry beds which—"

"Why, ensilage isn't no manure."

"No, certainly not," said Dyke. "I know it is not often used in that way. You don't catch my drift. When I said top dressing I meant turkey dressing—stuffing you know—for Thanksgiving—"

"Good heavens, man! Ensilage isn't human food!"

"No, not a human food exactly," said poor Dyke, grinning like an almshouse idiot. "It isn't a food at all, in the true sense of the word. My plan has always been to lasso the hog with a trace chain and after pinning his ears back with a clothes pin, put the ensilage into his nose with a pair of tweezers."

"My good lands! You don't use ensilage to ring hogs."

"I never believed myself that it should be used for that purpose, but when you want to ring hens or young calves to keep them from sucking—"

The farmer gravely shook his head.

"Did you ever try ensilage on the hired girl?" said Dyke desperately, and winking like a bat at 11:30 a. m.

The farmer slowly rose and with some evidence of rheumatic twinges in his legs.

"Young man," he said solemnly, "you are a long way from home, ain't you?"

"Yes," replied Dyke, dropping his eyes beneath the stern glances of the farmer. "In my ancestral halls in England sad eyed retainers watch and wait wearily for my return."

"Go home, young man, go home to your feudal castle, and while on your way across the rolling deep, muse on the fact that ensilage is simply canned food for live stock—put up expressly for family use in a silo, which is nothing less than an air tight pit where corn stalks, grass, millet, clover, alfalfa and other green truck are preserved for winter use, as green and verdant as the sub-editor of the Farmers' Friend and Cultivators' Champion."

And Dyke Fortescue sighed as he remarked to himself:

"There ain't so blamed much fun running an agricultural paper as I thought."

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that [illegible] people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. [illegible]

[illegible]

"Do [illegible] to me, sir," said one distinguished grammarian, who wished to establish [illegible] that six and seven are eleven."

"It are" replied the other equally excited.

Much confusion followed, and it was feared that a collision would ensue between the distinguished grammarians. It was finally agreed to leave the question to the decision of the Teutonic gentleman who owned the premises. Said one of them:

"Hans, which is right, to say six and seven is eleven, or six and seven are eleven?"

"Vich is recht?"

"Yes."

"Sex unt seben ish eleven or six unt seben are eleven?"

"Yes, yes, that's it."

The Higher Motive.

John B. Gough, in a temperance lecture, related a conversation he once had with a Christian gentleman in England on total abstinence. The gentleman remarked: "I have a conscientious objection to teetotalism, and it is this: our Savior made wine at the marriage of Cana in Galilee."

"I know he did."

"He made it because they wanted it."

"So the Bible tells us."

"He made it of water."

"Yes."

"Well, he performed a miracle to make that wine."

"Yes."

"Then he honored and sanctified wine by performing a miracle to make it. Therefore," said he, "I feel that, if I should give up the use of wine, I should be guilty of ingratitude, and should be reproaching Master."

"Sir," said I, "I can understand how you should feel so; but is there nothing else that you put by, which our Savior has honored?"

"No, I don't know that there is."

"Do you eat barley bread?"

"No," and then he laughed.

"And why."

"Because I don't like it."

"Very well, sir," said I. "Our Savior sanctified barley bread just as much as he ever did wine. He fed five thousand people on barley loaves by a miracle. You put away barley bread from the low motive of not liking it. I ask you to put away wine from the higher motive of bearing the infirmity of your weaker brother, and so fulfilling the law of Christ." [The Examiner.

Being Kind to a Stranger.

Among the passengers in a parlor car on the Lake Shore Road the other day was a handsome woman, whose husband shared the seat with her and who would have been picked out as a quiet, sedate, absent-minded man. The seat opposite was occupied by a flashily-dressed young man, with a lady killing twist to his mustache, and he was considerably surprised when the husband handed him a daily paper with the remark:

"Have a glance at the news. Plenty of excitement around the country, I observe."

The young man was busy with the paper for half an hour, and then he was handed a magazine. This entertained him for half an hour, and he had scarcely closed the book when the good man reached over with:

"Have a cigar. These are prime Havanas and I know you will enjoy one."

The young man accepted with thanks and naturally made his way to the smoking car, where he put in nearly another hour, but without the other's company. When he returned he was greeted with:

"Perhaps you'd like to look at the latest novel? Very entertaining I assure you."

He read until weary, and upon being offered another cigar replied that he was to leave the train at the next station, and added:

"I want to thank you again for your many courtesies."

"O, don't mention it."

"You never saw me before?"

"Never."

"Don't know my name."

"No."

"Then tell me why you are so courteous to an entire stranger."

"Young man, I will explain. In times past when a loafer sat and stared at my wife as a steady job I got up at the end of an hour and broke his neck. This made me much trouble and expense, and I changed my programme. I now carry books and cigars to bribe them. Had you been going a hundred further, I should have offered you a drink of brandy, a new puzzle, two more dailies and another cigar, and my wife would have secured quite a rest."

"Sir! I—"

"Oh, it's all right—all right! It was cheaper than throwing you out of the window, and I hope you'll get up to the hotel safely. Good day, sir—good day—glad to have met you!"

And that young man with the lady killing mustache and cherry colored [illegible]

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

Lathrop's Summer Song

FOR 1883.

Summer's here rather queer,
Weather neither warm nor clear,
But croquet I display,
For the skies will mend some day.

See my fishing tackle case,
Full of flies for killing bass,
Pike or prout or speckled trout
All you can pull out.

Rods and lines, fragrant pines,
Bananas from the tropic climes,
Rockers new, wagons too,
With iron ex. I'll sell to you.

Pipes, tobacco and cigars,
Trumpets, horses, engines, cars,
Doll cabs neat, candies sweet,
Bass drums never beat.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the state of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the 18th day of May 1876, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego at Oswego, N. Y., on the 18th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m. in Liber 109 of mortgages, at page 210, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Antinger, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage as follows: Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86.) The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4) block number twenty eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 2d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 7th day of March 1883. ORLANDO HOWELL.
HOWE & RICE, Att'ys, Assignee.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagor Nathan Rowlee mortgagee, Harmon J. Rimons, mortgage dated March 3d, 1870, to secure four hundred and eighty dollars ($480) part of the purchase price, and recorded in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego May 2d 1872 in book 91 of mortgages at page 485. Said mortgage has been duly assigned to James H. Langdon of Oswego Falls N. Y., who is the owner thereof. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York, and being five acres to be laid off in a "square form as near as may be on the south west "corner of forty acres on lot seventy one in the old "military township of Hannibal, now Granby, and "bounded as follows: East and north by the original "line of said lot No seventy-one. South by the road "leading from Oswego Falls to Hannibalville, and "west by a line to run from said road leading as "aforesaid to the north line of said lot and parallel "with the east line of said lot 71, and at such a distance therefrom as shall include the said five acres "of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the 1st publication of this notice the sum of one hundred dollars principal and interest thereon from October 1st 1881, which is the whole sum unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding in law or equity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid and notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction, to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 6th day of July 1883 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, April 3d 1883. JAMES H. LANGDON,
Assignee and owner of said mortgage.

[illegible] ARISTOCRATIC WAYS!

[illegible] notice this title reads like an ex[illegible], and please [illegible] a very [illegible] tone of voice in conjunc[illegible] exclamatory clause, and [illegible] it complete, just as Aunt [illegible] put it.

[illegible] spending the summer with [illegible] in the thrifty little town of N——, [illegible] far from the White mountains, [illegible] its proximity to the refreshing [illegible]tainous region made it a popular [illegible] for summer boarders, a few of [illegible] were annually accommodated at [illegible] ample farm house where I had de[illegible]edly taken up my abode for the sea[illegible]

[illegible] home was in an always quiet and [illegible]ired New England village, and the [illegible] of a "summer campaign," in a [illegible]-the-time-being fashionable locality, [illegible] an experience of which I had long [illegible]med with most joyous anticipations; [illegible] they said all the rooms at the spa[illegible] hotel had already been engaged, [illegible] were rapidly being occupied, al[illegible]ough it was only the first week in [illegible]

Uncle Eben had gone to New York [illegible] on business, and Aunt Phœbe had [illegible]ceived a letter from him which she [illegible] reading, when suddenly her brow [illegible] clouded, and, with an expressive [illegible]umph," she exclaimed:

"Dear me! if Eben hasn't gone and [illegible]aged to take Rosa Van Withren for [illegible] summer! Well, I never did!"

"Why, Auntie," "I thought you [illegible]anted some people to come here; [illegible] difference does it make?" but she [illegible] me short—

"You know nothing about it, Maggie; [illegible] Van Withrens are one of the old, rich, [illegible]portant feeling families, who hold themselves above everybody else; they were at the hotel last summer, and this daughter Rosa was with them; I can see her now with her aristocratic ways! Her aristocratic ways! She is not the kind I want in my house. What will [illegible] and Mrs. Herbert think, I wonder, [illegible] sensible people that they are? [illegible] the class of persons I like to en[illegible]tertain. Wealthy, to be sure, but totally [illegible] from fashionable ideas and humbug [illegible]!"

"Another thing," Aunt Phœbe continued excitedly, "Rosa Van Withren is a very different person, Maggie, from what your mother would wish to have you thrown in with. You're a tolerably sensible girl now, but there's no knowing what a few months with a prinking New York girl would make of you. Well, all it is, we must treat her politely but you've no need to make a companion of her, and as to all the world of furbelows and earthly vanities she will bring along in her great Saratoga, you must remember such things are very displeasing to the Lord; it's all of the earth, earthly, and no one with true religion in their hearts will run after such things."

Now I heard Jane—Aunt Phœbe's [illegible]—say "that of all the close, fussy creatures she ever heard of, that rich, disagreeable woman from Springfield ranked first and foremost." So I might be pardoned for concluding in my own mind, how well I should like "staid, sensible, Mrs. Herbert." But Jane had [illegible] that most persons who came from [illegible]sachusetts, and particularly from [illegible], were "just splendid," very kind [illegible] considerate of the "help" and "nice [illegible] people." But way down deep in [illegible] wicked little heart, I secretly rejoic[illegible] that this proud, handsome, stylish [illegible] lady was coming home with [illegible] Eben. My reading had furnished [illegible] with some idea of what such a per[illegible] might be, and I really trembled [illegible] excitement—unsophisticated crea[illegible] that I was—at the thought of in[illegible] a house with a real live "fash[illegible]." True, there must be a sin in, [illegible] like stolen waters, the very fact [illegible] danger accompanying the form[illegible] such an acquaintance, seemed to [illegible] a hidden sweetness.

[illegible] and Mrs. Herbert were to arrive [illegible] morning, and in the evening Miss [illegible] and Uncle Eben were ex[illegible] so all was hurry and bustle for [illegible] of the day. The great [illegible] room on the second floor [illegible] for the Herberts, Miss Van [illegible] to occupy a spacious room [illegible], and my room was next [illegible] the third apartment on the [illegible] upon her, all of two hours after her arrival. Not so Mr. H.—he settled down at once in a comfortable easy chair and troubled no one.

And towards evening, just before tea time, came Uncle Eben and Miss Van Withren. She was the fairest creature I had ever seen. I mean by the fairest the loveliest. The sun had been warm and the day warm and tedious. A mass of bright, crimpy hair partly shaded her white forehead, while her great hazel eyes had a worn look in their liquid depths which went to my heart. Aunt Phœbe was pleasant and cordial to her, but she looked so tired out and sweet withal, that, forgetting my intended indifference, I almost instinctively took her traveling satchel and offered to go with her to her room.

As we entered the room together she said heartily, "Oh, how kind you are! and I am so thankful you are here; I was afraid there might be no young people in the house."

Then I left her, and immediately the tea bell rang.

In a few minutes Miss Van Withren came down, a charming picture, to my eyes; she apologized for coming to dinner in her traveling dress, but explained she felt too tired too open her trunk at once. He travelling dress, indeed! I realized on the instant how accustom- she must be to fine clothes, for the dress in question was a striped black and white silk, all puffed and looped, and ribboned and buttoned, until to my eyes it was a perfect marvel of the dress maker's art.

Aunt Phœbe remarked that her family dined at noon, whereupon Mrs. Herbert, in what appeared to me to be very ill taste, discanted at considerable length upon the improper and unwholesome practice New York people adopted of eating their heartiest meal at night fall; to all of which the lady assented with well bred acquiescense.

The next day was spent by our stately visitor in unpacking. She had explained that the reason for coming to N—— without her parents, was because they were unable to leave the city for two months longer, and Uncle Eben offering his escort, it was thought best to send her thus early where she could breathe good country air. Later in the season her parents hoped to join her.

Well, it was not the nature of things for two young ladies of the same age to occupy adjoining rooms without becoming somewhat familiar. Yet I stood aloof, really admiring this beautiful girl, but determined she should never have cause to feel contempt for me for forcing myself upon her in any way. But she was a mighty fascination. It frequently happened she would ask me some question which would result in my straying into her room while she was dressing for the afternoon. And what a pleasure and attraction it invariably was to watch the completion of her toilet. With shapely white fingers she would deftly plant a jaunty bow, or sweet tuft of flowers, in the midst of a lot of crimps over her smooth brow, and it would look as if they came there, both bow and crimps, without being placed by hands, so perfectly graceful and unstudied would be the entire arrangement. Her elegantly laundried muslins, or crisp silks, fitted her to a charm, and even the ribbon or flower was so daintily nestled among the laces at her throat, as though placed by fairy fingers. She became to me a beautiful study with her rich attire and finished manners, although "probably brought up in a ball room," as Mrs. Herbert had rather spitefully remarked. I used to pray God to convert and save the lovely girl, for reared as I had been, I feared there must be much of sinfulness and danger lurking beneath so much tasteful display.

A few afternoons after her arrival, Mr. Spencer, the talented young minister of N——, had called, and while I sat confusedly wishing I knew just what to say, Rosa swept noiselessly into the room. O, the ease and grace with which she received and conversed with him! I can now see the perfect attitude she assumed, all unconscious, apparently of the faultless adjustment, as seating herself sideways on the sofa, so as to face him as he sat in his arm chair, her long trail laid in ample folds along the floor.

To my surprise some question that Mr. Spencer asked revealed the fact that Rosa taught a large class of boys in the Howard Mission Sunday schools.

"Why," I said afterwards, "do you teach in the Sunday school?"

"Certainly," she replied; "I couldn't well get along without my poor, dear boys; ma sometimes worries about my going so often to their wretched homes, but it is one of my chief pleasures to go and try to comfort them now and then."

Aha! Here was a new phaze in this dressy beauty's character. That was more than I had ever done in my life. I had prayed for the poor but most of the people in our village were comfortably off, so I knew little about wretched homes of poverty, but the New York poor of all others!

It is true Rosa used frequently to ride with fashionable acquaintances at the hotel and spent more or less time in gay company; but sweeter or more agreeable manners I had never seen, although re[illegible] and [illegible] continually thrown out by Aunt Phœbe and Mrs. Herbert [illegible] reserved in [illegible] would seem [illegible] supper, one of the neighbor's boys burst excitedly into the room with the unpleasant intelligence that of the Glen boys "had been run over," and Dr. Gray doubted if he could live through the night.

The Glen boys belonged to a very poor but respectable family, who lived about a mile from Aunt Phœbe's, and although every one expressed surprise and curiosity, no one seemed to take very deeply to heart the fact that a mother's boy was suffering great bodily pain, and in speedy death.

A few moments later, to my surprise, I met Rosa in the hall, plainly dressed in a short cambric—of a remarkably pretty pattern—and with her gypsy hat and gloves, I saw she was equipped for a walk.

"Why," I said, "It is almost dark. you are going out alone?"

"I am going to poor Mrs. Glen's," she replied, simply, "she must need help, or at least sympathy, this long, painful night."

"Oh, let me go, too! do," I pleaded, for she hesitated to reply.

"Certainly, if your aunt is willing; but I may stay until morning."

Aunt Phœbe's face would indeed have been a "picture for a painter," when I told her where I wished to go and with whom.

"Law, yes," she said, when her surprise enabled her to find utterance, "and for mercy's sake, notice what she does, for all things! But I waited to hear no more, and in another moment we were off.

But the lesson I learned that night was how fair, jeweled hands could soothe a bruised and fevered brow; how low, cultured tones could breathe consolation into the ear of a lowly but stricken mother; how an ample purse, in generous hands, could provide for some of the necessities of the suffering poor. Dear, blessed girl! Child of fashion she might be, but what harm, after all, could the fine vesture prove, with such a true heart beating beneath?

And if you can believe it! When I told from a full heart the next day some of the necessities of the previous night to Aunt Phœbe and Mrs. Herbert, auntie only said, "Humph!" and Mrs. Herbert declared it was all "only done for effect."

So great is "the variety of Christian charity under the sun."

One morning, Mr. Herbert, usually an acquiescent gentleman, had announced his intention of going gunning, expecting to be absent all day. His wife had objected, but he had persisted, and when these usually acquiescent gentlemen undertake to persist in anything, if you ever knew it before, reader mine, let me inform you, they generally persist in persisting. So Mr. Herbert went gunning, and Mrs. Herbert went at once into a very unsatisfactory state of mind.

It had been a charming day, and towards evening a gentleman had called and invited Rosa, and to my great delight, also invited me, to a hop on the green at the side of the hotel. Rosa had accepted the invitation, but as to poor me, oh, dear! Aunt Phœbe would never consent in the world, I felt sure she wouldn't. But to my surprise and joy, my worldly-wise auntie consented; with some show of reluctance it is true, for I believe she was a truly religious woman, but Rosa paid good board, and had by no means proved the objectionable person as to her manners that Aunt Phœbe had anticipated she would; besides, later in the season her parents were expected as boarders, so quieting her conscience with the observation that, "if it was in the house she wouldn't consent for anything," she allowed me to go. I suppose the influence was, that to dance on God's carpet was not a quarter part the sin it would be were it one made by wicked man. She need have felt no fear on my account, however, for, as a Christian, I never danced, although not disposed at all to condemn others who might differ from me in the matter.

At the tea table Mrs. Herbert, who had been rather testy all day, turned suddenly towards Rosa and observed tartly:

"So you are going to dance to-night? I understood you were a church member, and my church manual forbids such excesses on the part of professing Christians."

Now Rosa had as much spirit as it is proper for any young lady to possess; she made no reply. I only noticed that her neck curved a little more to the right, and the naturally lofty pose of her stately head became a trifle more apparent. It was this same curve and pose of the head, I think, which made Aunt Phœbe so pronounced as to "her aristocratic ways."

But God has so ordained that some members of his exquisitely modeled lily family so carry and away their graceful blossoms on their slender stalks, one might imagine they fancied themselves the queen of all the flowers. But there is no pride in the heart of a lily; it curves and waves, and displays its matchless charms, just as God made it to do.

But there was to be no dance for either of us that night. As Mrs. Herbert was sweeping sullenly from the dining room, she paused at a window in passing, and the next instant exclaimed with more alarm than elegance:

"Oh, my goodness gracious! what does this mean, I wonder?"

All hurried to the window, and at first could only discern a rapidly crowd approaching the house; but a moment more and it became apparent that some one was being borne along [illegible]

disfigured, soiled and bleeding. He sharply ordered "bandages, plenty of them; quick, too!" Mrs. Herbert was of no assistance whatever; she could only ring her hands in real anguish, and implore every one to save him, her "dear, good, kind husband, oh, save him!"

Aunt Phœbe ran for old [illegible], and quick as a flash I saw Rosa [illegible] her delicate cambric handkerchief in [illegible] and hand it to the doctor, who tightly bound it about one bleeding wrist. All that night Aunt Phœbe, Rosa and I watched, and bathed, and carefully tended the poor unconscious sufferer.

The next day, however, other boarders arrived, and Aunt Phœbe could not spend many moments in the sick room. It was impossible to find a trustworthy nurse in the town, and for a whole stifling hot week, Rosa and I shared the vigils of the wonderfully softened woman, who watched by the bedside of her dearly-loved husband.

One day I witnessed a scene which sent me rushing to my room, to give way to irrepressible sobs. The doctor had pronounced Mr. Herbert out of danger, adding to his wife, "and you can greatly thank your young friends here, who have rendered you such wonderful good assistance in this time of need, particularly that young princess, who has stood by you day and night. She needs rest now. Her eyes are heavy with something besides their own splendor." Happening to go to Rosa's room on some trifling errand, I saw Mrs. Herbert standing before her, and all at once she threw her arms around Rosa's neck, exclaiming:

"Oh, you lovely Christian! I spurned you because I thought you dressed too much; I've ridiculed the idea of your professing religion, because being young and beautiful you have adhered with natural pleasure to customs of the fashionable society in which you have been reared. But God Almighty has shown me that it is by their fruits His children are to be known, and you are one of the Lord's own. Oh, forgive me, dear child."

But I could wait to hear no more, I only rushed away as I have described; but all barriers were swept away that summer night. I had my own little confession to make, not only to Rosa, but to my own heart; and the lesson I learned from contact with this beautiful girl was a most wholesome one. I know now, it does not follow that the rich and fashionable are necessarily proud and ungodly. Neither are they the heartless creatures we are too prone to imagine them.

I was surprised, I must own, when at the close of the season, our "talented young minister" begged of Rosa's parents the privilege of offering his love to their beautiful daughter, she turned from the proffered gold which wealthier suitors ardently urged upon her acceptance, and took the pure love of good Mr. Spencer.

She has been one of us for years now; for I spend my summers still with Aunt Phœbe, I and mine. It is true she is always faultlessly attired; it is her nature to be, and I verily believe it is one reason why she is so invariably fresh and attractive to all admiring eyes. Her lovely face is greatly beloved by "her people." And what wonder! No home so lowly but her daintily shod feet can enter most willingly. No one sunk so low in vice or crime, but she can stretch out her soft, white hand to render good assistance in helping to lift them up. No child so poor or small, but she could bend her queenly head to bestow the expected caresses. And even Aunt Phœbe has long since ceased to mention, even if still conscious of, her aristocratic ways.

If your hair is getting thin, the application of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer will promote a thick, new growth.

Fashion Notes.

The plainest made white muslin dresses are the most becoming and are easily laundried.

The coming dress obliterates the shoulder seam of the corsage, extending in a point to the neck of the dress.

White mull fichus with wrought edges in Irish point or trimmed with valenciennes lace, are preferred in warm weather to linen collars for neckwear.

Collarettes of lace take the form of high ruffs or of a row of lace turned down over a ribbon passing around the neck, finished with two jabots side by side, giving a square effect.

Bulgarian linen scarfs with gray Turkish embroidery in each end are pressed into the milliner's service this season, and made to form etire hats, or else merely trim the rough straw round hats, and to adorn the smallest capote.

Clear dark blue, brown and gray are the colors most seen in the wool dresses for traveling, and these are accompanied by, a close turban, made of the dress goods, laid in many folds and wrinkles, and without other trimming.

There is a return to vests and cutaway jackets in the tailor suits of serge cheviot flannel, or cloth made for traveling sea-side and mountain dresses. The vest may match the jacket or be of contrasting color, red cashmere vests being much used with blue, green or brown dresses. White pique vests are also used, and liked for appearance of coolness.

Bonnets of straw fringe are the novelty for midsummer. The entire bonnet is made of row after row of dark colored fringe of fine straw with [illegible] ends, the loops being woven into a slight [illegible] for heading, and [illegible] to conceal [illegible] These come in [illegible] and [illegible]

[illegible] and not bound with ribbon as it formerly was, but this whole thing is covered on the outside with flowers, usually with roses stripped from their stems and without leaves. Rosettes of grass straw, or of mignonette, on which humming birds are poised, are pretty for country hats.

Fans are of medium size, neither very small or extremely large, and measure about eleven and a half inches on the outside sticks. Tortoise shell sticks are preferred for black lace fans, and pearl sticks for white lace. A novelty is the use of both painting and lace on one fan, the lace serving as a sort of frame for a large painted landscape in the centre, or for two or three medallions placed at irregular intervals. For pretty and inexpensive fans those of Japanese paper are chosen with flowers painted by hand on gilt or silver grounds. The Tuscan straw fans fold into a small compass, and are liked for pocket fans and for general use. Satteen fans are mounted to match the dress with which they are worn.

A Pittsburg girl was caught in some machinery yesterday, and fearfully squeezed, surprized her friends by appearing a few hours later, as if nothing had happened. Inquiry developed the fact that the young lady was engaged to a puddler, with muscles like steel, and the machine hasn't been invented that could fatally squeeze her.

THE NEW PATENT

DUST-PROOF

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 20, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very were severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

ROLLINS has withdrawn from the Senatorial contest in New Hampshire. His withdrawal is said to have been due to pressure brought to bear by William E. Chandler, Secretary of the Navy. Mr Chandler has himself entered the lists, but his candidacy does not promise any greater success than did that of Senator Rollins.

THE DEMOCRATIC press have started the war cry of "Turn the rascals out," and the Republicans retaliate with the watchword of "Keep the rascals out." It is about "six of one and a half dozen of the other," although a bran new quota of public officials might find it politic to administer the affairs of the government with honesty for a season at least.

THE enterprising State of Ohio comes forward with two highway robbers who have begun business at the tender ages of eleven and twelve years respectively. Charles Butler and Henry Bunn stopped a wagon driven by another boy named Parmentor, and, at the muzzle of a revolver, ordered him to throw up his hands while the robbed him. They have been arrested.

IN ANOTHER column we print an account written by the members of the delegation to Binghamton from the Fulton Union Graded School of their trip thither and return and what they saw while there. It will be found interesting reading, for while these young scribes have not yet attained the skill of accomplished journalists, their efforts bespeak for them talent in this direcrion of no mean quality.

DENIS Kearney, the great California sand lot orator, has just arrived in New York, where he proposed to make several speeches under the auspices of the Central Labor Union of that city, but at a meeting of the Union held Sunday, Kearney was utterly repudiated, as he was a few days ago by the anti-monopolists at Chicago, It is said that Kearney is laboring as a paid advocate in the interest of the railroads.

FROM present indications the New York market before the season is over will be better suppled with watermelons than it has been in years. The New York Truth notes that "from 30,000 to 40,000 watermelons arrive in this city daily now and the promise of an immense crop and very low prices is excellent. Commission merchants predict that a good watermelon will be sold at five cents as soon as growers in the Carolinas, and Maryland and Delaware begin to ship the fruit northward. The bulk of the watermelons now in the market come from Florida."

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

Monday the cheese market was steady and a slight advance in prices. The attendance was small, there being twenty-five factories registered, 1869 boxes of cheese offered. The ruling price was 10 cents.

AT UTICA.

The cheese market Monday was somewhat exciting because rumors were flying about wildly that numerous sales had been made at 10¾c. and 10½c., and it was surmised that 10½c. at least would be the ruling price. But the buyers stuck fast to the 10c. text; and altho' [illegible] lots exceed that amount, as is always the case, fully three-quarters of the [illegible] sales went at 10c. and nothing above. Palermo.

PALERMO, July 14.—The twentieth anniversary of the married life of William Johnson of Palermo was celebrated at his home last Wednesday and a large company of relatives and invited guests gathered in the afternoon to commemorate the event. Dr. S. Johnson, Dr. George Johnson, and W. Johnson, his brothers were present with their families. The affair was also made more interesting by the presence of Mr. Johnson's invalid mother, who always finds a pleasant home with any of her sons. The presents were numerous and valuable. At the proper hour refreshments were served, including ice cream and other dainties, which were heartily relished by the assembled guests. The feast was supplemented by appropriate remarks, and a prayer by the elder, after which the company dispersed for their various homes, well pleased with the welcome they had received. May prosperity attend the couple whose anniversary was thus celebrated and may they live to enjoy a green old age, surrounded by the children who are the fruit of their happy union.

ONE OF THE GUESTS

Caughdenoy.

CAUGHDENOY, July 15.—A visit to the quiet little village of Caughdenoy after the lapse of several years reveals many changes and improvements. At the old Midland depot, which was then closed to the public, you meet the pleasand obliging agent, Charles Burghart, who now occupies the same with his family and keeps it clean and comfortable for passengers wishing to stop at this station. The hotel has been remodelled and is as well kept by Mr. Rhines as any house of the kind on this line of the road. The river at this point has as good fishing facilities as any sportsman need desire and Mr. Rhines can give them as good a dinner. The old store and post-office is now kept by Mr. Hiram Gibson who keeps pace with the times in his business, and supplies his townsmen with the best quality of every kind of goods which this market will warrant. He is assisted by the Hon. T. W. Green whose genial face is never forgotten by any one visiting Caughdenoy. The flouring mill and saw mill, which used to remind one of "The creaking old mill" of the song, "Maggie by my side," is now repaired and under the supervision and ownership of Messrs. Hart & Son, whose management bespeak business and enterprise. His handsome brick house opposite would be an ornament to any town. A new bridge spans the river in place of the old rickety wooden structure and near by Mrs. Richard Burghart has built a pretty new house within the past year. On River street are several new houses all painted nicely and presenting an attractive appearance. On the hill stands a handsome new Methodist Episcopal church, dedicated free from debt. It is of a modern style of architecture with stained glass windows and complete in all its appointments with the exception of the old organ, but the young people are raising money for a new one, for which purpose they held an ice cream festival in the old church on Friday evening of last week and realized a handsome sum. Messrs. Charles and Fred Church have purchased the old church and will remove it to some other location and fit it up for an evaporator. These gentlemen in connection with Mr. Wesley Matteson were last season engaged in the business of drying fruit by this method and were very successful. They propose this year to enlarge and improve their business. In recalling many improvements which have been made here within the past ten years we can but congratulate the people who have made them and are now reaping their reward.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

Adams, Jefferson county, is suffering from diptheria.

George Briggs of Seneca Hill is dead. He was 65 years old.

Last week a special train with railroad officials ran from Binghamton to Syracuse, 81 miles in 83 minutes and they ran from Syracuse to Oswego in 40 minutes.

"Dick" Cavanagh, who escaped from Oswego jail last spring, has been captured in Chicago, through the agency of George N. Collins, a resident of Oswego, who recognized him in the streets of Chicago on Tuesday evening July 3.

The New Haven correspondent of the Mexico Independent writes as follows concerning the strawberry industry of that section: The larger portion of the strawberry crop has been harvested and shipped to different points, and as many as 800 crates or 28,800 quarts have been shipped in a day. On the whole the producers will realize fair profits for their berries. According to the Texas correspondent of the Times and Express, [illegible]

[illegible] principal of the Binghamton High School, and Secretary of the Union, who kindly conducted us two blocks away to our boarding place, Mrs. Finch's. It was exceedingly gratifying to the party that the Principal worked in our behalf and secured for us seats at the same table. The viands served, the jokes cracked and the congeniality of all members of the household are a part of things long to be remembered. All is well that ends well, and so on Saturday morning, July 7, we bade farewell to the fair city of Binghamton, and starting for home on the four o'clock train, all in good spirits, but some rejoicing more than others. Along the way, two of our number whose visiting time was not yet complete, left us, and so we numbered only eight on our arrival in Fulton.

THE JOURNEY TO THE PARK.

The morning of Wednesday, the Fourth of July, dawned brightly and the forenoon was intensely warm. While some were engaged in examination the remainder wandered about the city, trying to see everything which was of interest. After dinner it was decided to visit Ross Park, which is about two and one-half miles from the city. Our party mounted a street car, which was then nearly filled, and away we started for the park. It soon began to rain and long before the car reached the end of the route, we were in the midst of a terrible thunder storm. The flashes of lightning were vivid and frequent, the thunder deafening, the rain was pouring in torrents, converting the streets into rivers, and the wind was almost a hurricane, doing very serious damage. During the storm, a board was blown across the car track, and one of the cars in passing over it was run off the track and badly broken. Fortunately none of the passengers were injured. The storm was so bad that but two of our party dismounted when the end of the route was reached, but on the contrary, a number from the park mounted the car which was then overloaded, and the terrible heat and crowding, together with the rain, made a most uncomfortable state of things, but the party at last reached home in safety and in good spirits in spite of all discouragements. Those of our party who dismounted at the park waited until the storm had somewhat abated and then started to walk home, going at such a rate that they said good-by to numerous companions who attempted to keep up but were unable. On the way up they passed under a car shed in good condition, but on the way back they walked over its roof, owing to the violence of the wind. They were considered the fortunate ones of the party as they reached home but a very little wet and not as tired as might be expected from having walked two and one-half miles in twenty-eight minutes. A later visit to the park revealed that it was a most beautiful place and well worthy of a visit. Its delightful coolness contrasted favorably with the heat of the city, and added to this were the natural beauties of the place. The park is on one of the numerous large and high hills surrounding the city, and is kept in good condition, all of the brush being removed and convenient seats and tables being arranged under the trees. Numerous brooks come from all directions and go rumbling over the stones or fall in cascades much more beautiful than fountains. It is decidedly one of the sights of the city and seems made for a place of rest and quiet enjoyment.

THE COMB FACTORY.

On Thursday morning we visited the comb factory of Joseph P. Noyes & Co. We watched with interest all parts of the manufacture from the time the rough horns entered the factory till they were sent forth finished combs. The horns, as they come from the western prairies, are cut into spiral strips; these are then boiled in oil, to soften them, straightened and pressed, after which they are scoured to remove all impurities, and the rough edges sawed off. The strips are now ready to have the teeth cut. They are made wide enough so that two combs, having the teeth of one lying between the teeth of the other, may be cut from the same strip. The piece is heated and placed in the machine, in which, there are two very sharp, thin knives working up and down. After the strip has run through the machine the combs are separated and pressed. They are then taken to another machine where the teeth are sharpened and rounded, after which they are polished and packed in boxes ready to be shipped to any part of the world.

THE INSANE ASYLUM.

One of our interesting visits while in Binghamtom was to the Insane Asylum. It is a large, stone building situated about two miles out of the city. It is finely located and from it the city can be distinctly seen. The grounds are beautifully laid out. There are a large number of inmates and some of them are quite amusing. There was one little woman who came around with a little tin bank in her hand asking for money, I dropped in five cents and she said that she would pray for me. She then went [illegible] building the matron in charge warned us that the structure did not compare favorably with the massive building for the insane; for originally the building was a ladies' seminary, and, of course, was not just such a one as the circumstances required. Passing from the parlor to a reception room for the friends of the orphans, we started for the kitchen. Here a sister was engaged in cooking over an immense range. Next, climbing a flight of stairs, we entered a recess, in which a number of little girls were engaged in mending. As we entered they arose and remained standing until we passed out. In another recess the girls were engaged in sewing carpet rags. Passing the bed rooms of both boys and girls we noticed the neatness and systematic arrangement always seen in such a building. On our way to the boys' section of the building, we passed a room in which a number of babies were taking their afternoon nap on the floor. The matron informed us that the boys were so wild that they were obliged to remain half a day in school during the summer months. While in the school room the matron asked a little colored boy a few questions, but the answers were so low that no one but the questioner heard them. After leaving the school room, a few of the party went to the attic to see a stuffed alligator about eight feet long that lay on the floor. We next passed through the rooms in which the clothing was stored. Here the Sunday clothing of both boys and girls is kept. Ascending another flight of stairs we entered the gymnasium. From this point we have a fine view of the city. After returning to the parlor and refreshing ourselves with draughts of cool water, we returned to our home well pleased with the visit to the orphan asylum.

THE RECEPTION.

On Friday afternoon, July 6, our party attended the reception given to the contestants in the Inter-Academic examinations by General Jones of Binghamton. The home of the General is a new building of the Queen Anne style. It is very elegant and unique in all its appointments. Situated as it is at the lower extremity of the city and far back from the street, the house commands a fine view of the city and its surroundings. We were cordially welcomed by our host and hostess, and the time passed quickly and pleasantly. Elegant refreshments were served by the General's family. Several ladies and gentlemen from the city favored us with fine music. After spending some time in conversation with the educators from various parts of the State, and with our fellow contestants, we bade farewell to those who had so kindly received and hospitably entertained us, and wended our way homeward after spending a day long to be remembered by the contestants of '83.

SPRING FOREST CEMETERY.

On Saturday our party visited this beautiful cemetery, which is situated one and one-half miles from the post-office, and is reached by a zig zag road called the winding way. The fine shade and elegant residences make it a very [illegible] walk. Some portions of the cemetery are kept with much care, while other parts are very much neglected. Time forbade a close inspection of the many fine monuments; of those that particularly attracted attention, the one erected for the volunteer fire company is the finest; it is situated in the centre of a large well-kept lot and is of pure white marble, about 25 feet high. On the front is cut the figure of a fireman, rescuing a child from the flames. The Dickinson and Michelbach monuments are very fine. There are also many Scotch granite monuments.

THE SPEAKING CONTEST.

Thursday and Friday evenings, July 5 and 6, were devoted to the time honored prize declamations and recitations. Nine gentlemen contested in declamation for the thirty and twenty dollar prizes Thursday evening, and eleven ladies contested in recitation for like prizes Friday evening. A few renditions were of high order and such easily won the prizes. Binghamton largely shared in the victories, a young man of 15 of the Binghamton High School taking the first prize in declamation. But as a whole, the opinion prevailed that the rhetoricals were not quite up to the standard of last year.

THE PRIZES WON.

There were only six contestants in our party. Of the possible sixty dollars prize money, forty dollars were won and brought home by the [illegible]

R. Wright, first prize, physics, $15; 3d. Wm. R. Wright, second prize, chemistry, $10. There were no honorable mentions in chemistry, no first prize awarded. All the principals and other teachers of chemistry in the state universally concede that the chemistry questions demanded more time than was allotted them.

THE DANGER OF OVER-EXERTION.

A Stalwart Man Becomes Weaker Than a Child and Then Recovers His Former Strength.

(Waterloo, N. Y., Observer.)

In these days of rowing giants and athletic heroes fine physical development is more observed than ever before since the time of the Athenian games. A man who shows the elements of physical power is looked up to far more than in the days of our ancestors, possibly because there are fewer specimens of well-developed manhood than then. An emissary of this paper met a magnificent specimen of physical power a few days since in the person of Dr A. W. McNames, of Waterloo. His muscles, which showed unusual development, were as hard as wood. At his request the writer sought to pinch him in the arms or legs, but found it wholly impossible. A realization of what was meant by an iron man was fully made manifest.

Have you always been as stalwart as this? inquired the news gatherer.

Not by any means, was the reply. When a young man I was always strong and active and felt that I could accomplish any thing. This feeling so took possession of me on one occasion that I attempted to lift a box which four men found it impossible to move. I succeeded in placing it on the wagon, but in two minutes from that time I was unconscious and remained so for hours and when I recovered consciousness I vomited a large quantity of blood. From that day I began to grow weak and sickly. I believed that I had suffered some internal injury and experienced a general debility, which seemed similar to the effects produced by malaria. My back was very weak. I had no appetite, and at times loathed food. My lips were parched and cracked. My head felt as though it was entirely open at the top and it pained me on the side intensely. In six weeks' time I had fallen away from 208 pounds to less than 170. I was in a most wretched condition. I was completely discouraged.

What did the doctors say about you?

Almost everything. I consulted no less than six different physicians. They all treated me and none did me any good. At that time I was suffering intensely. I could not sit upright but was obliged to rest in a cramped uneasy position. I was compelled to urinate every five minutes and I passed over three quarts every day. I was not living. I was existing.

One night, (how well I remember it!) my wife had put the children all in bed when the feeling came over me that I should live but a very short time. My wife and I talked matters over and I gave her the minutest directions as to what she should do after I was gone. I was not in a flighty condition by any means for the doctor on leaving town, the day following, bade me good bye, saying he never expected to see me again, for I was suffering with Bright's disease of the kidneys in its last stages. Within the next few days more than twenty friends came to bid me good bye. Among the number was Dr John L. Clark. He asked me what I had used in the way of medicines. I told him. He then recommended a remedy of which I had heard much, but about which I was very skeptical. If faith were an element of power it certainly was lacking in my case.

And so you did not try it?

On the contrary, I did try it and to my surprise it seemed to go to just the spot. Indeed it was the most palatable thing I had taken into my mouth for months. I relished it.

And did it cure you?

Do I look as if it did?

Yes, indeed. What was it?

Warner's Safe Cure.

A proprietary medicine!

Of course. What of that? I suppose I once had as great a prejudice against advertised medicines as any one could have. When I was studying medicine at Ann Harbor, Michigan, I used to vow with the rest of the class that we would fight all such remedies at all times. When a man comes down to the last hour, however, and bids his wife and friends good bye, such bigoted prejudices as these all vanish I can assure you, and any remedy that can cure is gladly welcomed.

And how have you been since then?

As well—or better than before.

Do you still exert your strength?

Certainly. But I do not over exert as formerly. My strength is increasing everyday, and my health is No one. I know that my life was saved by Warner's Safe Cure, and I believe it is the best medicine that was ever compounded by any chemist or physician. I am willing the doctors should sneer at me for such a statement if they choose, but I have proven its truth, and am prepared to stand by it.

The above experience should be of great value to all who are suffering. It shows the deceptive nature of this terrible malady, that all symptoms are common to it and that there is but one way by which it can be absolutely avoided.

THE TWO CHURCHES.

It would be a difficult task for even an experienced and competent critic to say whether the handsome Presbyterian church or the new Oswego Falls Congregational church, which is just receiving its finishing touches, is the more attractive to the eye, or which will be found the most desirable for church purposes.

A BIT OF HISTORY.

One pleasant Monday afternoon, the 16th day of October, 1882, the corner stone of the First Congregational church of Oswego Falls was laid by the Hon. Peter Burns of Syracuse, attended by impressive ceremonies. In the stone was deposited a tin box containing a photograph of the pastor, a list of the names of the members of the society, and those who subscribed toward the building of the church, a manual of the laws of the Congregational church, a copy of the Congregationalist, THE TIMES, and the Patriot, and the names of the officers of the church and Sunday school. On the day the corner stone was laid $7,000 were pledged to build the church. To-day the subscriptions reach nearly $15,000 and the church will be dedicated free from debt. With the exception of a few finishing touches it is completed, and will be found interesting. The structure rests upon a brown stone rough faced foundation and is of handsome dark colored brick with black tucking. From First street the eye rests upon the Sunday school room which extends toward the east from the main auditorium of the church. There is an entrance on either side of the church with double action doors leading into the auditorium and Sunday school rooms. A handsome rose window adorns the eastern gable of the Sunday school room. The stained glass for this window will be contributed by the Sunday school. The auditorium and Sunday school room are separated by four large sliding doors. By sliding these doors into the walls a broad entrance of some twenty feet is left between the two rooms, being ample for a perfect view of the speaker from every pew. The trimmings of the inside of the church are of oil finished ash and cherry and the Sunday school room, which is about thirty feet square is arched with a high, handsomely frescoed ceiling. The dome shaped ceiling of the auditorium is very elaborately frescoed in an olive tint. Hundreds of stars, whose centres are of gold leaf adorn the dome, and emblems in free hand frescoing of Alpha and Omega are found upon the walls on either side of the chancel, while upon the wall at the rear of the auditorium on either of the doors are the Ten Commandments and the Holy Bible, and above the doors may be seen a cross, while back of the pulpit a dove is apparently floating through space. The stucco work and molding about the pulpit are noteworthy and these and many other features make this auditorium one of the finest in the country. Its dimensions are sixty by forty-five feet, and it will seat 350, while the Sunday school room will accommodate another 150. The seats of the auditorium are arranged in semi-circular form on a descending grade from the rear toward the pulpit, which is raised about two feet, and ornamented with tastefully carved panels. Upon the posts on either side of the chancel are handsomely frescoed mediaeval vases. The whole interior presents a bright, cheerful appearance and is a decided contrast from the dismal walls and ceilings of old time churches. The ventilation is good and the speaking qualities of the auditorium is excelled but by few churches.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE EDIFICE

The whole church is a model piece of architecture and is a great addition not only to Oswego Falls, but Fulton, where a number of its most earnest promoters reside.

AN ENTERPRISING GENTLEMAN.

Mr. A. D. Juilliard, who is a large owner of the stock of the Oswego Falls factories and of the property thereabouts, was the donor of the lot to the church, and with a true spirit of business enterprise, coupled with a lively interest in the welfare of the employes of the great mills, has not only subscribed a large sum of money toward the church building but has taken a personal interest in the church society from its inception.

A Horse Thief Around.

The Fulton correspondent of the Oswego Palladium sent the following to that paper Monday:

Last Saturday evening Mr. Eli DeRucha left his horse and buggy tied in front of Williams' drug store on First street, and went about town on business. When he returned the store was still open with lights in the windows burning brightly, but the horse and carriage were gone. He got a lantern and with the aid of a party of friends, including night officer Wilkinson, started on the trail. The horse had crossbar shoes on his forward feet, and by this means they tracked him over to Granby, when they came back to town and waited till daylight and started again. They tracked him to Stony Robbie and found him in the barn of Mr. Ward. Mr. Ward says he found the horse in the road and put him in the barn. Mr. De… [illegible]

Mr. E. A. Cook of Mexico is the new salesman in the Rosenbloom clothing establishment. He is recently from a large Syracuse clothing house and was formerly from Messrs. Rosenbloom's Mexico store. He is a gentleman of pleasing presence.

Mr Amasa Blodgett, residing a short distance from Fulton, died last Wednesday, aged 66 years. He was a well-known farmer and was highly respected by his neighbors. His funeral occurred at Hannibal Friday, Rev Mr Griffin of Gilberts Mills officiating.

Fremont Perry was driving a horse and buggy across the upper bridge last Friday, when one of the wheels came off and the horse ran away. Perry was thrown backward and struck on his head. He was slightly hurt. The horse was injured and the buggy was demolished.

During the storm of last Thursday night the barn of Mr D. D. Eames, residing a few miles from Fulton, was struck by lightning, doing considerable damage, but the building was not fired. One of Mr Eames' horses has been suffering from deafness since the barn was struck.

Yesterday a woman named Williams was found with her head saturated in blood in the hold of the canal boat Ira Betts, which was tied in the mill race lock. She was removed to the cabin of the boat where Dr. C. M. Lee attended to her injuries which were not serious. It is thought she was intoxicated and fell from the deck. She is the cook of the Ira Betts and her home is at Seneca Hill.

B. J. Dyer continues his closing out sale, and is desirous of disposing of his present line of goods as soon as possible. This stock is offered to the public at rates so low that it will be for the interest of every one to give him a call before purchasing elsewhere. 9tf

Gone to Get a Wife.

Mr. Will Osborn, the gentlemanly assistant of Mr. C. R. Nichols, left this morning for McLean, Tompkins county, where he will take unto himself a wife in the person of Miss Emma Watson, who is a sister of Mrs. D. E. Mason of Fulton. The wedding will occur to-morrow afternoon, when the newly married couple will go to Albany and possibly to New York for a short trip and will make their debut in Fulton in about a week or ten days. Mr. Osborn is a young man of pleasing address and has scores of friends in Fulton. He deserves a good wife and will doubtless get one.

The Great Race.

Mr. W. S. McKean of Ogdensburg, Secretary of the great Hanlan-Ross race at that place to-day, has been chosen referee of the Fulton regatta on Lake Neahatawanta July 26 between Edward Hanlan of Toronto, Ontario, champion oarsman of the world, George H. Lee of Newark, N. J., winner of the Saratoga regatta in August last, defeating Courtney, Ross and others, and George H. Hosmer of Boston, second winner of the great Pullman regatta in Illinois last month. These world-renowned oarsmen will surely compete. It is also expected that Charles E. Courtney will be present as a spectator, with a view of sizing up the winner. The railroads will run special trains and carry passengers at half fare on the day of the race.

The Lawn Tennis Tournament.

Last Wednesday some of Fulton's most popular young ladies and gentlemen engaged in a lawn tennis tournament on the park. A refreshment tent had been pitched and everything prepared for a pleasant time for the contestants who engaged in this exhilerating sport, all of whom were members of the Ultac. It had been agreed that any contestant who was absent should forfeit his game, and it was settled by lot as to what contestants should be pitted against each other. Harold Bacchus was to play Charles Willard, but Mr. Bacchus was absent and forfeited. William Lovejoy was defeated by Frank Willard and Bert Hoff won a victory from Elmer Morrill, while John Bacchus forfeited a game to Frank Waterman. In the game between Allie Waterman and Rebecca Stewart the latter was victorious, and May French proved her superiority over Allie Case. Anna Gilmour defeated Gertie Stevens and in a game between Bertha Lee and Carrie Jennings the latter carried off the colors. A day or two later the winners among the ladies played off the tie and the result was that Anna Gilmour won the first prize from May French, May French the second prize from Rebecca Stewart, and Carrie Jennings had the honor of receiving the third prize. The first prize was a handsome racquet, which was given by Mr. John Bacchus. The second prize was an emblematical ladies' scarf pin, and the third prize was a leather medal. The gentlemen have not yet played off their tie, owing to inclement weather. The Ultacs were to have held a picnic at Reynold's woods yesterday, but it was deferred until to-day on account of the weather.

The West Baptist Church of Oswego will hold a picnic on the fair grounds on Friday. The Kingsford band will be in attendance.

Almon Bristol and wife have gone east to visit some of the largest piano and organ manufactories. They will be absent about two weeks.

Mrs. James Carroll of Bennington, Vermont, who has been visiting with her mother Mary McGue of Oswego Falls for a few days, returned home Saturday.

Mrs. Alfred Taylor of Hamilton is the guest of Mrs. Marcus Schenck. Mrs. Taylor is the widow of the late Prof. Alfred Taylor, of Madison University, and who was a brother of B. F. Taylor, the famous lecturer.

Miss Lizzie Lee and Miss May Gardner are home from Oberlin college. The latter, who is a daughter of D. W. Gardner, has graduated, and it is said that in her graduating essay entitled, "Catherine de Medici" she did herself great credit.

Mrs. Fred VanWagenen has returned home and again resumed her position as organist in the Presbyterian church Sunday after an absence of four weeks. Mrs. F. A. Emerick filled the position during Mrs. VanWagenen's absence in a most creditable manner.

Tax-payers should remember that Friday is the last day that corporation taxes will be received at one per cent. Otto Scholz's barber shop on the Oneida street is the place where you can leave the superfluous cash which you intend to devote to this luxury.

S. C. Schenck informs THE TIMES that he has granted Messrs. H. C. Howe and T. R. Wright further time to ascertain the quality of the stone in the lower brown stone quarry. He says furthermore that he would not allow Mr. Collins to operate the quarry, preferring to have men of responsibility who can pay their employees.

This morning Fred Highriter was adjusting a sign on the exterior wall of Spooner's drug store, when he fell and injured a nail on the second finger of his left hand, which was considerably mangled in some of the wheels at the Oswego Falls Mills a year or so ago, and the nail had grown out unnaturally in a hooked shape. The nail was cut out by the roots a few moments after the accident this morning by Dr. C. M. Lee and Mr. Highriter hardly winced during the painful operation.

Last week Judge Vann of Syracuse rendered a decision dissolving the temporary injunction restraining the Board of Trustees of this corporation from discharging its clerk Lyman H. Patterson. On Monday before Judge Churchill the opposing counsel in the case agreed upon a statement of facts which will form the basis of an argument before Judge Churchill at an early day for a decision as to whether the Board can, at its discretion dispense with Patterson's services on the strength of the charges in question.

… last Thursday at 7:10 p. m. and at … an answer was received. The message was sent by way of London, Falmouth, France, across Europe, through Asia, from China to Japan and thence across the sea to Australia. The whole distance to Australia and return by this route is some 40,000 miles and the record of 45 minutes is a good one.

[Fulton Times, June 27.

NOT CORRECT.

A day or so later the Utica Herald commented upon the item after this fashion:—"The Fulton Times says that a telegram was sent from that village to Sidney, Australia, the other evening and an answer received in 45 minutes. The message was sent via London and Falmouth, France, across Europe and Asia, from China to Japan, and thence to Australia. As the message would have to be re-sent at least twenty-five times each way, it looks very much as if some one had been telling the editor a fish story." The Oswego Times and Express which for various reasons with which most people are familiar, does not harbor any great affection for the Fulton papers, was quick to publish the above item from the Herald under the caption, "Not credited."

CORRECT.

Now, we are prepared to say that we are no more the victim of a "fish story" than other reporters and editors who daily publish stories much more improbable. A dispatch is on file in the Fulton office of the Western Union Telegraph Company dated "Fulton, N. Y., June 21, 1883, 7:10 p. m." which was sent to the Central Cable Office in New York, to be forwarded to Sidney, Australia. At 8:25 the same evening an answer was received at the Fulton office containing information which the operators here believe could have been obtained from no other source than the Australian office. Besides Manager Boardman, of the Western office of Fulton, states that he believes it to be a fact that the quick time above recorded was actually made and says that it is not unusual to get quick replies as in this case, and that the message went via the Falmouth route which is almost entirely under water. Starting, it goes to New York, thence to Valentia, on the south-east coast of Ireland, thence to London the distributing point, from thence to Falmouth, by cable to Lisbon in Portugal, thence under the ocean through the straits of Gibralter, the Mediterranean Sea, Suez Canal and the Red Sea to Aden, from Aden under the Arabian Sea to Bombay, from there to Singapore and then to Port Darwin, Australia, crossing the Island to Sidney by land lines.

But, if there was any "fish story" about the affair, THE TIMES is not the only paper that was hoaxed. A few hours after THE TIMES man obtained the material for the above item the truthful young man who writes to the Syracuse Herald from this town heard the news and sent the following to the Herald which was published on Sunday, June 24.

THE TRUTHFUL YOUNG MAN WRITES TO HIS PAPER.

"W. E. Waugh of the Western Union telegraph office had a hand in a lively piece of telegraphing Thursday evening. A gentleman came in at 7:40 and wished to send a message to Sidney, Australia. He said he would come in a day or two and get his answer. In just forty-five minutes from the time of leaving the Fulton office an answer was returned. When one considers the thousands of miles this message traveled it will be seen to be a lively piece of work. There is no excuse why it should take twenty-four hours to get a reply from Syracuse. This is evidence that operators are not blamable for delays."

If the kind reader will take the trouble to examine the two original paragraphs as given above he will find that in statement of fact they do not vary one iota and yet only one week later, Sunday, July 1,

THE TRUTHFUL YOUNG MAN REPUDIATES

as follows, and apparently forgets that he ever penned the paragraph above quoted, which was all well enough if he had dropped the matter right there. But he could not. Even at the expense of making himself the object of ridicule and derision of the community at large he must get in his sly thrust at THE TIMES. The opportunity was too good to be lost and this was what he said:

"The Utica Herald of Friday morning accuses the Fulton Times of being the victim of a hoax and says: "The Times tells a fish story." When the Herald comes to know the Times better it will discover that the establishment is proverbial for most anything but the pure and unadulterated truth."

"PURE AND UNADULTERATED TRUTH,"

indeed. This is the most anomalous, incongruous style of "pure and unadulterated truth" of which we have ever heard, and if this paragraph of repudiation is a specimen of "pure and unadulterated truth" we beg to be excused from appropriating the article as a watchword.

But, to be serious, would it not be in keeping with the occasion for some public-spirited citizen to start a subscription for a monument to be surmounted with the emblematical hatchet to perpetuate the memory of the young man who looms up as the peer or even more than the "Father of his country" as a speaker and writer of "pure and unadulterated truth."

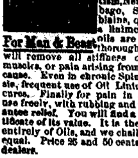
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



For Man & Beast

This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparalleled success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

SULPHUR BITTERS

It will drive the Humor from your system, and make your skin [illegible]

[illegible]
[illegible] pictures all faded and torn,
And [illegible] by the finger-tips
Of dimpled hands that have fallen to dust—
Yet I strive to think the Lord is just.

But a feeling of bitterness fills my soul
Sometimes when I try to pray,
That the Reaper has spared so many flowers
And taken mine away;
And I almost doubt that the Lord can know
That a mother's heart can love them so.

Then I think of the many weary ones
Who are waiting and watching to-night
For the slow return of the faltering feet
That have strayed from the paths of right;
Who have darkened their lives by shame and sin,
When the snares of the tempter have gathered in.

They wander far in the distant climes,
They perish by fire and flood,
And their hands are black with the direst crimes
That kindled the wrath of God—
Yet a mother's song has soothed them to rest,
And lulled them to slumber upon her breast.

And then I think of my children three,
My babies that never grew old,
And know they are waiting and watching for me
In the city with streets of gold,
Safe, safe, from the cares of the weary years,
From sorrow, and sin, and war,
And I thank my God with falling tears,
For the things in the bottom drawer.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the most effective blood-purifier ever devised. It is recommended by the best physicians.

The Railroad Station Loafer.

Of all loafers the railroad station loafer is the most loaferishest. He is noisy, obtrusive and insolent. He sits down and compels the passenger, the patron of the road to stand up. He kicks their valise as he passes it. He is never seen without a mouthful of tobacco, and he always expectorates in the direction of your valise or your feet. He stands in your way at the ticket office, although he never goes anywhere. He looks over your shoulder at the telegraph window while you write a message. He spars and "rastles" with other hoodlums. He loudly calls the attention of his fellow loafers to your personal appearance, and makes stage aside remarks for you to hear as you pass by him. He is utterly useless, infinitely worthless, and a wholesale nuisance. When he is under 14 years of age, he should be flogged and sent to school; between the age of 14 and 21 he should be sent to the house of correction or a reform school; and after reaching the age of 21 he should be hanged. Off with his head. So much for the loafer. [Burlington Hawkeye.

Electric Light in New York.

One of the things most remarkable in the out-door appearance of New York at this time is the glowing splendor of the illumination of the streets and public squares by the electric light. Gas seems to have no show anywhere except in the houses and on the side streets, and while it is pretty good gas it has a pallid and sickly style when immediately confronted by its dazzling competitor. There are miles on Broadway and Fifth avenue where there is not a gas-light to be seen. It is the style to illuminate the fronts of the great popular stores with the electric light. It is used in several of the newspaper offices. The Tribune type is set by the United States arc light. The Times and Herald have the Edison system, and the only testimony that it is an experiment is that the gas fixtures have not been taken down. There are 650 Edison lights in the Herald establishment. Our friends who have investments in gas stock may rely upon it that electricity as an illuminant is making progress. Its inroads upon gas are at least as rapid and certain as those of the telephone upon the telegraph, or the type writer upon phonography. It is not that the electric light is cheap. It costs about as much as gas. Its merits are incomparable brilliancy and absence of heat. The fact that gas is so hot will be the salvation of gas companies some day. [Cin. Commercial Gazette.

How to Live Cheaply.

Upon a calculation by me made with some care, I have found that thousands of hard working people of this city, who live very poorly on their small earnings, could for still less money live very well. And I will just tell you what I would do if I were placed in the position of one of these people at the head of a family. I would stint myself a little for a week as to meat and potatoes, and on the next Saturday night when I got my pay, I would take home a half bushel of beans, costing about $1.25. With the help of the beans I could easily economize on potatoes and meat for another week, and then I would take home a half a bushel or peas, costing about $1.75. Having done this I would already be on the road to true economy, and they do say that economy is wealth. At the end of the third week I should expect to be able to take home a half bushel of rice and two dozen cans of tomatoes. The next present that I would make my family might be a quantity of oatmeal sufficent to breakfast them for a month or so, costing $1.60 to $3. After this the road would be easy. I would always have in my house provisions enough to carry me through a month's sickness if such a misfortune should overtake me, and now, being so well supplied, I could afford to indulge occasionally in luxuries. I could buy a barrel of potatoes or a quarter of beef at a time. At the same time I should expect to find my family healthier and wealthier at the end of the first month than they had ever been before. Of course I would not make any large purchases at the little corner grocery where I had been in the habit of buying, but at some large house where they sell at wholesale and retail. By purchasing in large instead of small quantities I would [illegible]

[illegible] SARSAPARILLA [illegible] pressing my gratitude for the permanent cure this wonderful medicine effected in my case nearly two years ago, while living in Lowell, when all my physicians gave me up as being in an incurable condition. One thing before I close. I have recommended your Sarsaparilla to hundreds, and I think more than a thousand cases, and my faith in its invincibility in curing scrofula has become absolute by the wonderful cures it has effected aside from my own. I trust you will not be slow in making the merits of HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA known everywhere, for it is a duty you owe to mankind. With best wishes I remain very truly yours.

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

CONSUMPTION.

It is said that 8,000 people die annually in the United States alone from this disease. This can and should be avoided; our people are too careless about an ordinary cough or cold, and other symptoms of throat and lung affections that lead to this disease. Two or three doses of Dr. [illegible]

[illegible] to consist of broken stone, and these stones [illegible] intimately mixed with some bituminous matter, black and brittle, something of the nature of asphaltum. The black substance and broken stone were thoroughly mixed with hydraulic lime; not cement, but lime that contained sufficient clay to render it hydraulic. With my steel point I could plough out this hydraulic lime, and with my knife I cut and shaved the black substance, which lay in all conceivable ways, the grain in some bits presenting their flat sides, sometimes their ends, sometimes vertical, sometimes horizontal, showing it to have been mixed up with the lime and broken stones haphazard. The lime showed in such thin streaks that it is evident that the men who made the obelisk knew how to make concrete. Such a structure, made in concrete, could be safely carried up at the rate of from twelve to fifteen inches per day, and so positive am I that it is concrete, that I would not hesitate to enter into a contract to erect exact duplicates of it in any city for $15,000 each.

MORTGAGE SALE—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the state of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the 18th day of May 1876, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego at Oswego, N. Y., on the 19th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Liber 109 of mortgages, at page 310, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Auringer, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage as follows: Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86.) The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4) block number twenty eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 2d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

[illegible]

A lady, young, [illegible] sparkled with diamonds [illegible] herself the magnet of all eyes amidst the music, light and revelry of the August night at Silver Spring. Diamonds twinkled in the fair hair, poised there as a butterfly; diamonds trembled like dew drops about the snowy throat, and formed a blazing pendant medallion amidst the flowers of the satin corsage; diamonds flashed in the tiny ears and on each dimpled wrist.

"Professor Horton, do you see the lady with the diamonds?" inquired the Colonel with his [illegible], good natured laugh.

"Yes, I see her. What then?" retorted the professor grimly.

"Oh, nothing at all, only the Silver Spring will be regarded as a fashionable resort, what with the new Bellevue hotel and such guests. Next year we will be able to hold up our heads with Saratoga and Newport, if we can add a club house and a race course, sir." Here the Colonel rubbed his hands together with a gesture that has become traditional with the hotel proprietor of all ages.

The face of Professor Horton was lean, sallow and dolorous, on the contrary, and was clouded by the discontent of one who has a grievance to lay at the door of circumstances.

He retorted sharply, "Mrs. Delauney is the name, eh?" Are the diamonds real?"

"Real! They are of the purest water, and cost seventy-five thousand dollars, I am told. She was an heiress, you know, and when she married last year, the accumulated interest of her minority was was invested in these jewels."

"Who is her partner," pursued the professor.

"Oh, the French Marquis de Ratti. They say he followed Mrs. Delauney here after being all about in society at New York and Washington last winter.

"I do not believe in foreign noblemen," grumbled the professor. "They prove to be valets and barbers more often than not. He looks much more like a prize fighter than a gentleman; but perhaps the prize fighting element is the highest element of blood among the nobility," mused the republican spectator. "Humph! I should not care to meet him on a dark night. He might crack my skull like an egg shell between his finger and thumb. Oh, the custom of fashion! That young husband, leaning against the wall, permits the Marquis to waltz with his wife, instead of knocking him down for his impudence."

At this moment a pretty girl appeared behind the professor and the landlord, with round, fair face and hair meekly brushed back from her temples, and ingenious blue eyes. The pretty girl smoothed her neat apron and lowered her eyes demurely as she demanded in the softest of voices, "If you please, sir, may I have my tea?"

"Mrs. Delauney's English maid, Alice," exclaimed the Colonel, when he granted the request.

Why did Professor Horton follow the English maid, so young, so genteel, so demure, with his eye? He could not tell. He saw her pause outside of another window, where the Marquis de Ratti was taking the air, the dance being over and it seemed to the observer that the two exchanged a glance, a smile, a signal, before the girl disappeared around the corner of the house.

"We only lack the gallantries of noblemen and ladies' maids to complete the ruin of our Silver Spring," muttered the stern moralist, whose ideas were so old fashioned. He sought his own chamber gloomily, for in addition to perturbation of mind, owing to his having his sylvan retreat invaded by the Philistines of fashion, he was literally broken by bodily fatigue. He had rambled many miles that day, botanizing in the valleys, and seeking geological specimens on adjacent hills. His shoes were dusty, his raiment brier-torn, his loose sack coat freighted with rubbish, precious to the savant in the wide external pockets, while rheumatic twinges in knee and back reminded him that he was no longer young, thereby increasing his exasperation. Then to return to a hotel where all the world was dancing and one woman was decked like an idol with seventy-five thousand dollars worth of diamonds. The Professor's cup of bitterness brimmed over at these reflections. The room was stiflingly hot, but he lighted his lamp, and forced himself to read an extract from Dr. Dollinger, while moths blundered about the flame, frying themselves to a condition of unpleasant crispness, and mosquitoes stung his temples. His watch marked midnight, and still the movements of the ball room and the twang of musical instruments reached his ear, precluding the possibility of sleep.

"Squeak, squeak, fiddles! Boom away, bass viols! Keep it up till morning, by all means. I wonder if that is the music of the future? Ah"—here the listener clinched his teeth, with a diabolical expression, as it grated over his nervous system, snatched up his broad felt hat, and strode out of doors actuated by the impulse of escape.

The night was sultry and oppressive. The Professor breathed a sigh of relief as he gained the vicinity of the hotel, [illegible]

The [illegible] ed [illegible] rural [illegible] The [illegible] and [illegible] depths of the [illegible] vain. As he did so he [illegible] persons advancing from [illegible] to meet a few yards [illegible] himself. They scarcely paused before separating again with the same rapidity of movement as they had met.

"Wait for me," said the woman, "I shall have to manage to get away all."

"I will wait till morning," replied the man.

"She is sure to dance to the very last, you know" added the woman.

"Don't lose your head, that's all." admonished the man.

"I lose my head indeed!" retorted the woman, whose voice and bearing were youthful.

The Professor moved slowly away, scarcely heeding these words, wasted to his ear by the passing breeze. At an angle of the path was a rustic bench beneath a larch tree, known as Professor Horton's favorite seat. Hither he directed his steps in an irritated mood, and sank down upon it in sheer weariness. The scent of flowers reached him, while the foliage seemed to spread above him "fragrant robes of darkness." Grateful repose succeeded noise and light, lulling all his senses to soft oblivion; he fell asleep.

He was awakened by a terrific peal of thunder, and opened his eyes with a bewildering uncertainty as to surrounding objects. The trees swayed wildly in the surrounding wind, a few large drops of rain fell heavily among the leaves; lightning quivered on the horizon. Suddenly a female form bent over him, some small object was thrust in his hand, and a voice whispered in his ear:

"I am early. She had a headache; Quick! Take them, or I shall be missed."

The thunder rolled, the trees swayed, the woman vanished. Professor Horton winked several times, and opened his mouth to speak, then closed his lips without sound. The object thus unexpetedly consigned to his care was a small leather bag, scarcely more than a tobacco pouch, and heavy. Mechanically he thrust it into one of the wide pockets of his loose coat. Hark! A heavy footstep crushed the gravel on the path to the right. The Professor rose to his own feet as if moved by a spring, his knees shook, his teeth chattered, a deadly fear smote him.

Fear of what evil? He did not know. To shrink to the left, gain the next clump of shrubbery, and conceal him~~self, was the work of a moment, and ac~~complished with the more ease as he knew every inch of the ground from long familiarity. Had he not planted many of these which now proved friends? The hiding place gained was a larch surrounded by stiff little Japanese cedars, and forming a sort of a labyrinth. Scarcely had the Professor glided into this shelter than a vivid sheet of lightning illuminated the whole countryside. He saw himself seated on the rustic bench beneath the larch tree! He could not believe the evidence of his own senses; the breath remained suspeded on his lips. Had he been a devout Catholic he would have crossed himself, invoking the protection of a calendar of saints; a chill of superstitious dread certainly stagnated his blood. Was he to believe that his hour had come? There sat his own image on the rustic bench, the soft felt hat pulled down over the brow, the broad shoulders, the slouching nondescript attire; nothing was lacking to complete the resemblance, or had he gone mad? He pinched his flesh and rubbed his eyes violently. The figure under the larch tree did not vanish. Swift realization of the truth dawned on the drowsy scholar. He was alone, at a distance from the now silent hotel, and he had in his pocket a bag which belonged to another. What if the unknown had found him still on the bench? What if he emerged now, accosted the stranger, and gave him the bag?

"I should be murdered as sure as there is a heaven above us," shuddered the man of letters with a conviction for which he could give no reason.

At this juncture the wind freshened, and the rain fell in torrents, while the lightning became less frequent. Professor Horton quitted the larch tree, reached the hotel with surprising agility, found a window of the recent ball room unfastened, groped his way through that deserted apartment and gained his own chamber. The bag was gone. He had lost it from the wide pocket probably in his flight. His watch marked two o'clock. The professor extinguished the candle, opened the shutters of the window, and seated himself with his eyes on the eastern horizon. He was a prey to the most exciting emotions.

Five minutes later the rosy landlord was seized by the collar, dragged into his private office, and confronted by Professor Horton, whose agitation verged on sheer lunacy. The latter took from his pocket a little bag, and poured out the Delauney diamonds, telling a wild and incoherent tale [illegible]

[illegible] carriage [illegible] Delauney party [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Delauney were already seated, while Alice, the maid, had [illegible] to reply to the [illegible] which she re-entered the hotel. At this moment Professor Horton's door was opened, and the Colonel entered with the bouncing swiftness of movement peculiar to fat men in haste. If the conduct of the Professor had been extraordinary in the morning when he had restored the jewels, that of the Colonel was not less so in the afternoon. He locked the door, made a warning gesture to the Professor, and stole on tiptoe to a second door at the extremity of the large room, where he lay down on the floor and applied eye and ear to the crack. Voices became audible in the adjoining chamber.

"I was there at one o'clock, and gave it to you," said a woman.

"A lie! I waited all night, and you did not come," said a man.

"I gave it to a person under the tree, and he took it" gasped the woman.

"Fool! then the game is up. Get yourself dismissed at Newport, and cut to New York. If I believed you were tricky, my girl, it would be the worse for you."

There was a sound of footsteps, and immediately afterward the Delauney carriage rolled away.

The Colonel rose to his feet, chuckling at the success of his stratagem.

"Set a thief—ahem!—I mean a woman to catch a woman. My wife thought of having the English maid sent back in search of the missing bag, in order to give her a chance to communicate with her accomplice in the hotel if she had one. The bag was dropped in the empty room next to you, for the purpose, and a man joined her there. Your story is amply corroborated, you see, by the few words exchanged."

"I believe the Marquis de Ratti is the a complice, and no more a Frenchman than you are," urged the Professor.

"What is the charge? Your adventures of the night? The noble Marquis is caught whispering with a pretty girl? No, no; I gave back the diamonds to Mr. Delauney—with a suitable explanation—and he has carried them away in a money belt. We alone know the whole truth."

"Add the larch-trees," added the Professor. "It was the noble larch-tree that kept the secret, my friend. Well, well, I hope you are pleased with the fashionable elements attracted to our Silver Spring. Doubtless the Marquis de Ratti and the demure English maid, Alice, belong to one of those bands of ~~English thieves who are said to keep a~~ map of country-seats with reference to the plate chest, and are now trying their fortunes in America. How beautiful they were—those diamonds!"

The Marquis de Ratti departed by the nine o'clock boat that same evening. His foreign accent was never more apparent than when he took leave of Silver Spring.

Professor Horton was the the first votary of the Silver Spring abroad next morning. If he was feverish and haggard, with a stealthy, even furtive aspect, the boy at the fountain did not notice the circumstance. Always an early riser, the Professor sipped a glass of the sparkling water, and then walked along the upper paths of the grounds. Cautiously he skirted the rustic seat beneath the larch tree, and approached the larch. A short, dry laugh of triumph escaped the lips of the usually undemonstrative student. A leather bag, half pouch, lay, concealed by the long grass, beneath the spreading boughs. The larch tree had kept its secret well. The bag remained where it had fallen from the Professor's wide pocket. He clutched it, returned to his room, and proceeded to investigate the contents. The little bag held the Delauney diamonds. Necklace, bracelet, butterfly ornament—nothing was lacking in this precious heap swept hastily from cumbersome case and casket.

Fashion Notes.

White colored shawls for piazza use are preferred to colored ones this season.

Tailor-made dresses are the fashion of the season at sea-resorts, and the preference for white dresses is seen everywhere.

The fashion of arranging the hair quite on top of the head is gaining favor, and to many heads and youthful faces is most becoming.

The long lace pin continues the favorite broach, though word comes from abroad of a decided tendency toward round or oval broaches.

There has been a great change of late years in the fashion of wearing jewelry on the street, and the tendency is to get rid of all show and parade of jewels, restricting it to essentials—a watch and a collar button.

Some very simple dress of navy blue wool are seen at the seaside this season, [illegible]

[illegible] in the beauty of [illegible] dainty festoons.

The favorite linen collar is the clerical choice fastened with the collar button, which is now the favorite article of jewelry. Narrow collars with embroidered ends, Broken English fashion, are also much worn. Large round collars are popular for young ladies, and are universally worn by children. The newest are so large as to be shoulder capes rather than collars.

White, blue, and combinations of blue and red are the popular colors for bathing suits. The best materials are twilled wool serges or flannels of light sleazy quality. The trimming are smooth braid, either the smooth alpaca braid, used for skirt binding, or the figured Hercules braid, with its waves and diagonal lines, or else basket-woven mohair braid. A new fabric for bathing suits is woven in webbing like the Jersey cloths, though of much looser texture.

There has never been a time when fashionable people were so independent in the matter of gloves as now. Some leaders of fashion wear gloves in mousquetaire style of twenty-button length, and still others their soft, white, carefully-kept hands bare for the opera, ball or reception. Four-button length gloves are usually worn with tailor-made-costumes and Jersey jackets; still, many ladies prefer for street wear mousquetaire worn over the tight Jersey or cloth sleeve. Mousquetaire for the street are generally chosen in from six to eight button lengths.

Early Days of Famous Racers.

A representative of the press, making a flying trip over the Erie railroad, fell in with a pleasant looking man who seemed to take a good deal of interest in hose flesh. The gentleman was W. S. Hurlbert, of Cincinnati, who is worth a round million, and what he doesn't know about horses is hardly worth knowing. Speaking of the recent dash William H. Vanderbilt made with Maud S. and Aldine, Mr Hurbert said: "I was once the owner of Maud S. She was my property about a week. Captain Bugher, an old riverman, who came up from the Monongahela, was a great friend of mine. He was a fine judge of horses too, and one day we took a run down from Cincinnati to Woodburn, Ky., where there was a sale of blooded stock in progress. Bugher had plenty of money and, liking the looks of the stock, he bought eleven of the colts. Then it began to rain. We put up our umbrella and were just walking away when the last lot on the catalogue were brought out. She was as bright, and looked like such a good animal that I advised Bugher to buy her. "No," said he, 'I have bought enough.' After a while I concluded I would buy her myself, and I got her for $145. I told Bugher to take my filly to his farm with his, and he did so. A week or ten days afterward I went down to his place and looked at the colts, and Bugher pointed out a nervous looking little sorrel as mine. This sorrel filly had a piece of string tied around her neck. Bugher said that the string had been tied around the animal's neck to distinguish my property from the rest. I said that it did not look to me like the animal I had bought, but the Captain was so positive that finally I said no more about the matter. After I got home I looked at my memorandum book and found that the filly I had bought, was a bay with a white star on her forehead. When I saw Captain Bugher next time I showed him the paper, and he was satisfied there had been a error made. I picked my filly out from among the rest, and not long after had her sent to my own stables. That is where I made my mistake, in insisting upon the trade. That nervous scrawny-looking little sorrel that I was so anxious to get rid of was Maud S. and my little bay was her sister. Maud S. has trotted in 2:08 and"—

"Pardon me, the best time she made is 2:10¼," interrupted an elderly gentleman who was listening to Mr Hulbert's interesting recital.

"She has trotted in 2:08, sir," continued the Cincinnati turfman, "and what is more she has done it twice, having been timed by experts with stop watches—but this was in private. But you seem to be pretty thoroughly posted, my friend," said Mr Hulbert, turning to the old gentleman who had manifested so much interest.

"Well, I ought t' be, I s'pose," replied the o. g. cooly.

"I was the original owner of Goldsmith Maid."

"The Dickens!" we both exclaimed. Your name is"—

Thomas G. Alvord of Syracuse turns up again as a candidate for Member of Assembly and if the Republicans carry the Assembly, he says he will canvass for the speakerspip. First get the nomination and then try and get elected; then there is time enough to talk of speakership. Men who build castles in the air very often get left, as they make too strong calculations, but "Old Salt" thinks he has not yet lost his savor.

Candidates for the coming Presidential campaign, according to extensive interviews in the New York Times, are numerous; Saml. J. Tilden takes the lead in the Democratic party and has the best chance to receive the nomination by his party. James G. Blaine seems to be mentioned by the largest number of localities for the leading place on the Republican ticket. If these two prominent politicians should receive the nomination for the Presidency, one of the liveliest campaigns in 1884 ever before witnessed may be expected.

The New York Sun recently devoted an entire page to a statement purporting to be from Star Route Dorsey and his fellow thieves in an attempt to prove that the late lamented Garfield was as great a rascal as themselves, and that he promised to shield them from justice and finally betrayed them by inaugurating a vigorous prosecution. So long as the sole evidence of Garfield's guilt in this matter rests with such men as Dorsey and his compeers, the disclosure will call forth little more than a broad smile of derision and contempt for the cowardly villians who thus attempt to defame the character of a man who has been months in his grave and is unable to defend himself.

The international military shooting contest held at Wimbledon, England, was commenced on Friday. Great Britain and America were the competitors and the clever manner in which the Yankees began work rather surprised the Johnny Bulls, who had counted on beating their opponents to a good beating at the shorter ranges. The morning broke dull and cloudy with an uncertain light, and during the shooting rain fell heavily. Notwithstanding these drawbacks the scores were very good and the Americans more than held their own. The first day's shooting consisted of 200 and 500 and 600 yard ranges and were as follows, the Americans leading their opponents seven points at the close of the day's work. The scores at the various ranges on the first day were: Americans—200 yards, 359; 500 yards, 267; 600 yards, 360; total 1,078. British—200 yards, 340; 500 yards 377; 600 yards, 354; total 1,071. The second day's competition resulted as follows: Americans—800 yards, 346; 900 yards, 268; 1,000 yards, 319; total for the two days, 1,906. British—800 yards, 330; 900 yards, 297; 1,000 yards 254; total for two days, 1,951. The British team are accordingly victorious by forty-five points.

THE CHEESE MARKET.

AT SYRACUSE.

The meeting of the dairymen's board of trade was comparatively small Monday. About eighteen factories were registered and but few cheese offered. The warm weather has made the manufacture of cheese laborious, and the [illegible] unsatisfactory. Every lot was sold on private terms, except three, two of which were consigned. The private terms were understood to be conditional.

AT UTICA.

The sales Monday at the meeting of the cheese market was only about three-quarters as large as they were last week, owing chiefly to a small attendance at the board. Salesmen report that they [illegible] just held their own, so far as [illegible] of milk is concerned, the past [illegible] and anticipate another shrinkage [illegible] the present week. Transactions [illegible] boxes, 12 lots, at 9¼c; 7,- [illegible], 70 lots, at 9½c; 35 boxes, at [illegible] boxes at 10c; 5 lots, 891 [illegible]. Granby Centre.

Granby Centre, July 23.—Farmers are very busy doing their hoeing, haying and harvesting, which have come all together on account of the wet season.

Mrs. Augustus Hermonn and her daughter, Jennie, of Bradford, Penn., are visiting Mr. John Cornell and other friends in this section for a few weeks. She is a sister of Mrs. Cornell.

Messrs. Peter Knapp and Francis Guess from near Kingston, Ont., were the guests of Mr. Asa Phillips for a few days past. They visited different objects of interest in Fulton and vicinity and were highly pleased with business interests that are going on here; also of the country in general.

The fifteenth anniversary of the married life of Mr. and Mrs. John Summerville was celebrated at their home on Wednesday last. A company of relatives and invited guests to the number of forty were present to commemorate the event. Besides many nice and selected presents there were gifts in money. Among the presents was a handsome large Family Bible from his father, Mr. Edwin Summerville, of West Granby, also a nice Bible stand from his brother Theodore of the same place. A sumptuous repast was served from tables set up on the lawn in front of the house and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all present.

South Granby.

South Granby, July 24.—During a thunder storm Sunday morning between 7 and 8 o'clock the lightning struck a horse barn owned by Merryfield and Coppernoll near Jacksonville, and that and the main barn adjoining, a very large and handsome building, also a large tobacco shed adjoining the main barn, capable of holding five acres of tobacco, were entirely consumed. The bolt struck the horse barn and went to the ground right behind the horses and the barn being filled with hay it was soon enveloped in flames. One valuable horse was stunned and fell down and could not be got out. His mate standing by his side was led out and saved. In the barn were about 13 tons of hay. They had just finished haying. In the main barn was six acres of wheat; also about twenty-five bushels of old wheat, all of which was burned; also one new two-horse sulky cultivator; which was burned. A good share of the movable property was saved. A corn house standing a few feet from the horse barn was saved by great exertion on the part of their neighbors, but it was damaged to some extent. We understand their loss will be about $2200, on which they hold a policy in the Agricultural of Watertown for about $1100.

The hum of the mower will not be heard on Ox Creek flats this season we think, as the water covers them to the depth of eighteen or twenty inches. It will be quite a severe loss to those owning meadows there as they generally cut a large amount of hay on them in a dry season.

The harvesting of wheat has commenced here and the crop with but very few exceptions is good and if the present week is as good as the past has been it will be secured in good condition.

Tobacco, of which there is a large amount raised here, is looking very nice. About all has been hoed the first time and a few have commenced to hoe the second time.

Mr. Quade is getting along finely with his new barn. He has it all enclosed with matched pine and bids fair, when finished, to be a good substantial building.

Mr. and Mrs. William Shultz of Ira visited friends in this vicinity last Sunday.

Caughdenoy.

Caughdenoy, July 19th.—Noel, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Burghart, aged 5 years, died Friday after quite a long and painful illness of spinal fever. The funeral was held at the house Saturday following with a large attendance. The many friends sympathise with them in their bereavement.

Noel's pains are now at rest
  In that heavenly house above,
Death sent him as an angel,
  In spite of parent's love.
His shoes now stand empty,—
  His toys are laid away,
His departure is forever,
  There the rest of time to stay,

Oh, think of his celestial home
  With his angel brothers there,
Great must be their greeting,
  And the love that each will share.

Yes, great must be the change,
  [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]

[illegible] to his buildings called upon his neighbors for assistance and by force they secured him and were about to hand him over to the constable when he made his escape, taking the railroad track at a 2:40 gait. They gave chase but it being dark they soon lost sight of him. Tramps hereafter will fare hard in this section.

Mrs. Waterberry died at the residence of her son-in-law Mr. Bailey last Wednesday, at the age of 84 years. She, with her husband, Mr. Waterberry, moved from Rensselaer to this county about 60 years ago, cutting their road through the woods from Central Square to this place. They were two of the first settlers here and to them we partially credit the fertile fields and green meadows and prosperous crops, which were then nothing but wilderness, changed by their share of the hard toils of forest life. The funeral was held at the residence of the deceased on Thursday last, with a large attendance. She lived a true Christian life and was for many years a member of the church. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. Warner and a large number of friends to mourn her loss.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

The County Jail at Oswego is undergoing repairs. They are much needed.

The annual meeting of the Old Settlers association of this county will be held at Central Square on August 21.

That well-known railroad man, Mr. E. A. Van Horne, has become the Superintendant of the Black River Railroad.

Mr. H. L. Monroe, seventy years of age, living in the town of Sandy Creek, was thrown from his mowing machine one day last week and seriously, if not fatally, injured.

The body of Miles McCriskin, who was drowned off the tug John Navagh in the lake near Oswego a few weeks ago, came ashore near the mouth of Big Sandy creek Wednesday. An inquest was held and a verdict of accidental drowning rendered.

A Sand Bank correspondent of the Sandy Creek News makes the following very appropriate request: Will the News be kind enough to convey to the Oswego Times and Express the news that Pulaski has a good jail and while the Oswego jail is being improved to accommodate the rogues of that city they can find ample accommodation in Pulaski, as the people in this end of the county have no desire to erect a new jail to improve the looks of that fair city?

There were twelve cases of diptheria in Adams last week, five of which were fatal. That so healthy a village as Adams, should be visited with such a sudden epidemic seemed singular, and indicated that there was some local cause. The Board of Health investigated the matter and found that all the persons afflicted had been using the same milk. It was also found that the milkman had used the milk pails for carrying water mixed with Paris green, for killing potato bugs. But the doctors place no credence in this story, as the action of Paris green is entirely different. The Board of Health say they have discovered the cause, but they refuse to divulge it.

The Fair Haven Graphic in a doleful, mournful article last week, tells of the troubles and tribulations which it has had to pass through in its efforts to establish the Graphic in that village, it says: There was a time when the Graphic was good property and we could pay our debts without trouble. But time have changed. Three-fourths of our subscribers neglect to pay their bills, and many have discontinued their patronage. A few weeks ago we sent statements to all one year in arrears, a few responded and over one-half stopped the papers. We will move while we can raise money to get out of town. It will probably be some time next month.

[Hannibal News.

A Ridge Road correspondent writes the following pointed paragraph to the Sandy Creek News: We notice a government detective is around looking after pension claims. They seem to be afraid their pensioners are not all of a good moral character. When they enlisted these same men some 20 years ago or more, they did not send around to enquire of their neighbors if they all liked them, and it their moral character was good, they were glad to get them. But now they and their families must be patterns of goodness, or they are not fit to have a pension. Let a detective come into any town, he will find every man that draws a pension has enemies, without he lost a limb, they think he should not have a pension. Let those who think so, try it three or four years of a soldier's life, and see if their health is any better for it.

Last Wednesday workmen who are digging gravel from a pit in the town of Manlius, eight miles east of Syracuse, for the West Shore Railroad, came upon the remains of an extinct animal, a huge molar, weighing about twenty-five pounds, and a piece of a tusk nearly five feet long and eight inches in diameter in the thickest part were brought to this city. To-day other portions of the tusk and part of a shin bone were found. The remains lay about thirteen feet beneath the surface in a deposit of gravel. Search is being made for the remainder of the skeleton. Prof. Boynton, who exposed the Cardiff giant fraud, says that these are the relics of a [illegible]

[illegible] the depth of the nation. Scientists have studied it for the benefit of humanity; men have investigated it for the welfare of their families. It has been a vexed subject long considered, and through all this investigation the cyclone has swept across the land carrying destruction to the scientists as well as to the innocent dwellers in its track. One thing, however, is certain; the cause of the cyclone must be sought far away from the whirling body of wind itself. Its results are powerful; its cause must alone be powerful. Let us therefore consider a few facts. First, the appearance of a cyclone is invariably preceded by dark spots on the face of the sun. These spots indicate a disturbed condition in the solar regions, necessarily effect the atmosphere of our earth. An unusual generation of heat in one part of the atmosphere is certain to cause a partial vacuum in another portion. Air must rush in to fill this vacuum. Hence the disturbance—hence the cyclone. This theory finds additional confirmation in the fact that tornadoes come during the day and not at night. The dark spots on the surface of the sun, whatever they may be, seem to cause great commotion in the atmosphere of the world, and it is almost certain that the extremely wet weather of the present season can be accounted for on precisely this basis. Is it reasonable to suppose that the marvelous effect of the sun on vegetation and life in general shall be less upon the atmosphere itself through which its rays come? The cause is remote but the effect is here.

After describing some of the terrible effects of the cyclone, the speaker went on to say:—

This rule finds its application in nearly every department in life. An operator is in San Francisco—the click of the instrument manipulated by his fingers in New York. The president makes a slight stroke of the pen in his study at the White House, and the whole nation is aroused by the act. An uneasiness and disgust with every thing in life, commonly called homesickness, is felt by many people, when the cause is to be found in the distant home thousands of miles away. An uncertain pain may be felt in the head. It is repeated in other parts of the body. The appetite departs and all energy is gone. Is the cause necessarily to be found in the head? The next day the feeling increases. There are added by symptoms. They continue and become more aggravated. The slight pains in the head increase to agonies. The nausea becomes chronic. The heart grows irregular and the breathing uncertain. All these effects have a definite cause and, after years of deep experience upon his subject I do not hesitate to say that his cause is to be found in some derangment of the kidneys or liver far away from that portion of the body in which these effects appear. But one may say, I have no pain whatever in my kidneys or liver. Very true. Neither have we any evidence that there is a tornado on the surface of the sun; but is none the less certain that the tornado is here, and it is none the less certain that these great organs of the body are the cause if the trouble although there may be no pain in their vicinity.

I know whereof I speak, for I have passed through this very experience myself. Nearly ten years ago, I was the picture of health, weighing more than 200 pounds, and as strong and healthy as any man I ever knew. When I felt the symptoms I have above described, they caused me annoyance, not only by reason of their aggravating nature, but because I had never felt any pain before. Other doctors told me I was troubled with malaria, and I treated myself accordingly. I did not believe, however, that malaria could show such aggravated symptoms. It never occurred to me that analysis would help solve the trouble, as I did not presume my difficulty was located in that portion of the body. But I continued to grow worse. I had a faint sensation at the pit of my stomach nearly every day. I felt a great desire to eat, and yet I loathed food. I was constantly tired and still I could not sleep. My brain was unusually active, but I could not think connectedly. My existence was a living misery. I continued in this condition for nearly a year; never free from pain, never for a moment happy. Such an existence is far worse than death, for which I confess I earnestly longed.

It was while suffering thus that a friend advised me to make a final attempt to recover my health. I sneered inwardly at his suggestion, but I was too weak to make any resistence. He furnished me with a remedy, simple yet palatable and within two days I observed a [illegible] change for the better. This awakened my courage. I felt that I would not die at that time. I continued the use of the remedy, taking it in accordance with directions, until I became not only restored to my former health and strength, but of greater vigor than I have ever before known. This condition has continued up to the present time, and I believe I should have died as miserably as thousands of other men have died and are dying every day had it not been for the simple yet wonderful power of Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy I employed.

The lecturer then described his means of restoration more in detail, and concluded as follows:

My complete recovery has caused me to investigate the subject more carefully and I believe I have discovered the key to most ill health of our modern civilization. I am fully confident that four-fifths of the diseases which afflict humanity might be avoided were the kidneys and liver kept in perfect condition. Were it possible to control the action of the sun, cyclones could undoubtedly be averted. That, however, is one of the things that cannot be. But I rejoice to say that it is possible to control the kidneys and liver; to render their action wholly normal, and their effect upon the system that of purifiers rather than poisoners. That this end has been accomplished largely by means of the remedy I have named I do not have a doubt and I feel it my duty to make this open declaration for the enlightment of the profession and for the benefit of suffering humanity in all parts of the world.

The following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That the several sidewalks hereinbefore specified be built and repaired of sound two-inch hemlock plank laid lengthwise or one and one-half inch plank laid crosswise, or one and one fourth inch pine plank laid crosswise on 3 by 4 stringers, well secured with earth to make a firm foundation; that no new walks are built less than five feet in width, that the outer line of those that are re-laid be evenly laid, and in the line of those already built.

On motion the clerk was directed to immediately after the publication of the aforesaid ordinance, serve the several persons affected thereby with printed copies thereof, in the manner required by the charter of the village, and to make and file proof of such service.

THE NEW PATENT
DUST-PROOF
Stem Winding Open Face Case,
MANUFACTURED BY THE
AMERICAN WATCH CO.,
WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon; and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"Valdosta, Georgia, July, 20, 1882.
"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.
I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. E. W. BENTLY."

"Clinton, Iowa, April 29, 1881.
"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above very severe tests, and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case. Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

The J. I. VanDoren will accommodate people desiring to come from Liverpool, Phœnix and intermediate points and will return after the race.

A Big Picnic.

A large and successful picnic was held upon the Fair grounds last Thursday by the church of the Immaculate conception. Excellent music was furnished by Parker's band. A horse race, base ball match and other field sports were hugely enjoyed by all who witnessed them. Father Kearney was everywhere present and his jovial countenance and jolly manners added much to the joy of everybody. A goodly total of receipts was rolled up.

"Dr Dunbar," a well known character in this vicinity and his wife was the occasion of quite a crowd on the streets last Thursday. The couple indulged in calling each other some hard names and the Dr accused his wife of getting drunk, which was not far from being true, and "Mrs Dunbar" said the "Doctor" would come to Fulton three times a week and never bring anything home to eat. The "Doctor" since that time bought five cents' worth of crackers and cheese and and carried them home and now they are happy once more.

diamonds and rings,
With a puppy dog wrapped in a shawl.

I hear her repeat, as she flops on a seat,
And playfully toys with its toes,
"Oo dear little pet! Does I love oo Oo bet!"
Then she kissed its dirty pug nose.

The passengers grin, as it licks her fair

Her lover sits wistfully by,
And wishes his face in the puppy dog's

Two hundred and fifty tickets of admission to the late commencement exercises of the Fulton Union Graded School are still out. Parties holding them will confer a favor upon the Board of Education by leaving them at C. S. Eggleston's book store or at R. E. Phillips' drug store.

Argument by counsel will be heard in Oswego on Friday before Judge Churchill in the Board of Trustees case. The argument will be based on a statement of facts which was agreed upon by counsel before the same Judge last week. The proceedings under the order vacating the temporary injunction is continued until the hearing and decision of the case on the merits is reached.

The New School Rooms.

Workmen have commenced making alterations in the Samuel Green house, which was recently purchased by the Board of Education for school purposes, to fit it up for occupancy at the beginning of the fall term. Three good sized rooms will be arranged, the one in rear to be twenty-five by forty-five feet and to be used as a primary deportment, or for little ones entering the lowest grade of the school. It will be fitted up in the most approved style and nothing will be left undone to enhance the comfort of teachers and pupils. The entrance to this room will be on the side leading from a walk from the street. There will be no steps from the walk to this room, as the walk will be on a level with the floor, thus avoiding those accidents which are due to wet or icy steps and stairways. A room about twenty-two feet square in the northwest corner of the building will be used for the advanced primary pupils, and another room about twenty by twenty-two will be held in reserve. Ample playgrounds will be provided for both boys and girls and will be separated from each other. They will also be separate from those of the pupils in the other departments of the school. The work on the entire building must be completed by the last of August, and is being pushed rapidly forward under the personal supervision of President Hanna, of the Board of Education.

To Rent.

From now until April 1st next, the south half of the Saunderson Store on First street under Times Office. Enquire of GILES S. PIPER.

James Stevens of Oswego Falls is fully prepared to furnish ice cream in large or small quanities, at 40 cents per quart. A man will travel the streets of this village and those who wish this summer luxury can obtain it at their residences. A bell will be attached to a cart as a warning that the ice cream man is near. Mr. Stevens guarantees to furnish the best ice cream in the market. Orders received by mail promptly attended to. 5m2

A [illegible] Island Park, [illegible] has been [illegible] the [illegible] Park Hotel It is a massive structure, thoroughly and substantially built, of architectural beauty and solid strength. A broad veranda, 16 feet wide, extends around the building on three sides. Above this are balconies 6 feet wide for the second and third floors. A lofty tower, 189 feet high, overlooks the river and surrounding country. All the stories of the building are lighted with gas, and supplied with water by a steam engine. Its rooms are high and airy, with double French windows opening on a veranda or balcony. Electrical bells connect them with the main office. There are four flights of stairs located at different parts of the building, making it difficult to imperil its guests in case of fire. The Dining Room is said to be one of the largest and finest in the country. It is under the management of George A. May and its schedule of prices range from $2 to $4 per day and $12 to $21 per week. The principal meetings of the park for the season were as follows:

Believers' Meeting—July 15-22. Rev. D. W. Thurston, Leader.

S. S. Parliament—July 24-August 5. Rev. J. L. Hurlburt, A. M., Conductor.

National Temperance Society—August 14-19. Rev. D. C. Babcock, Leader.

National and State Woman's Christian Temperance Union—August 21-24. Mrs. Mary T. Burt, Leader.

Boston Temple Quartette—Aug. 28-31.

The generous patronage of the public is solicited for the entertainments of the season.

A Genuine Fish Story.

An item has travelled the rounds of the press which was originally written by a sharp correspondent residing at Caughdenoy, and detailing an inventure of O. E. West of Caughdenoy. It reads as follows: "Mr. O. E. West of Caughdenoy, had a thrilling adventure a few days ago, as the following extract will show: While crossing the river the boat upset. In the effort to save the skiff he lost one shoe, his hat and a watch valued at $20. Gaining the shore he was making his way homeward when an angry ox gave chase to him. Mr. West ran for a tree and raised himself into the branches just in time to escape the horns of the ox. Unfortunately his head struck a hornets' nest; he sprang to another limb which broke and he fell to the ground. Seizing the broken limb he beat off the ox, and finally arrived home with a fractured wrist and a swelled head cased by wasp stings." The joke of the matter is that not one word of the above is true; that it is a genuine fish story of the first water made up of whole cloth, and a large number of city journalists can respectfully take off their hats to a clever correspondent from a country town, who bids fair to rival Eli Perkins if he continues to run the race in which he has started.

The Ultacs.

Last Wednesday the Ultacs held a a very pleasant picnic at Reynold's Woods and on Saturday the tie games between the gentlemen who won the preliminary games in the lawn tennis tuurnament were played off, Frank Willard defeating Charles Willard and Frank Williard being in turn forced to yield to Bert Hoff, to whom the first prize was awarded. Frank Willard coming in for the second prize. In a struggle for the third prize between Frank Waterman and Charles Willard the latter was successful. The prizes awarded to the gentlemen were similar to those given to the ladies on Monday evening the club held a meeting at the residence of Miss Rebecca Stewart and the prizes were bestowed upon the winners. Mr and Mrs Frank Platt were elected members of the club and other business was transacted.

A Picnic of Three Churches.

The committee appointed by the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist Sunday Schools to select suitable grounds and make arrangements for a grand united picnic of the three schools have fixed upon Three River Point as the most available place and the schools to the number of about 500 left for that place this morning at 9 by the steamers J. I. Van Doren and Milton S. Price.

A Call to Mr. Riggs.

For some time it has been known in Fulton that Mr. J. S. Riggs was liable to receive a call from the Presbyterian church at South Orange, N. J., to become its pastor. Such a call has been received, and is now being seriously considered by Mr. Riggs. On Sunday, June 24, a committee of three gentlemen from the South Orange church came to see Mr. Riggs and hear him speak. They went away much pleased. A week or so later another committee of two gentlemen came upon the same errand and went away. Last Friday a third committee came and tendered him a unanimous call from the South Orange church, and presented him with a letter and set of resolutions of the mort cordial and solicitous nature. Mr. Riggs also received a letter from Rev. Dr. Irving, a member of the Board of Foreign Missions, who resides at Orange and was the Moderator of the meeting sending the call, urging him to come. South Orange is one of the three Oranges which extend for seven or eight miles along a beautiful valley at the eastern base of the Orange Mountains, and consists of a series of handsome villas and elegant residences of wealthy New Yorkers to the number of some 20,000 or 30,000 people. It is but a short distance from New York and access to that city is easy by a number of daily rapid transit trains. Mr. Riggs is offered $2500 and a parsonage by the Orange church, which numbers about 500 members. He will go to Orange next Sunday and deliver a sermon, leaving Fulton Friday evening and will decide next week as to whether he will accept or reject the call. Fulton can illy afford to lose so earnest a Christian gentleman as Mr. Riggs, but if he feels that duty calls him elsewhere THE TIMES bids him God speed.

[illegible] on bail given by [illegible] Jennings. He is to appear before His Honor August 13.

A [illegible].

George West, who says he lives in Troy, came to Fulton to visit friends and on Sunday night imbibed a little too freely. Officer Curtis gave him lodging for the night. He pleaded guilty and paid His Honor $5.

HE MET AN OFFICER.

On Saturday at 5 p. m. Augustus Juno was unfortunate enough to fall into the clutches of Officer Ney in a condition highly discreditable to himself and when he was brought before Justice Piper at 9 o'clock the same evening he pleaded guilty to intoxication and made himself poorer by paying a fine of $4.

POOR JOHN.

John James—poor John—so much has been done for him by the temperance people of this town that it seems a pity that some one of the many reformations should not prove permanent. Whisky is the the tyrant which rules him, the tyrant from whose vise-like grasp it seems impossibe for him to break away. For a number of weeks John has been wandering about the streets in a semi-intoxicated condition, threatening and abusing those with whom he came in contact. Harmless and peaceably disposed when sober, he is an ugly customer to deal with when drunk. On Monday he was arraigned before Judge Piper. The charge against him was that of being a public nuisance. After much testimony he was sentenced to the penitentiary for six months and was fined $6 to stand committed till paid, not exceeding 30 days longer. Sentence was suspended and John was sent to the country to rusticate.

LEVI COMES TO GRIEF.

Levi E. Montague had been on a bender for several days, but was brought up short in his mad career by Officer Curtiss on Friday. His Honor fined him $15 and it was paid at 9 p. m. Saturday.

GONE TO SODUS.

William Collins had been out of the penitentiary hardly a week when he got into limbo again for being intoxicated. On Saturday His Honor gave him the choice of paying $15 or going back to his Syracuse "home" for another six months. Subsequently His Honor relented a little and suspened sentence to allow Collins to depart for Sodus, where he is to be employed, but he must not show his face in Fulton again for six months without His Honor's consent.

A FAMILY ROW.

Last week warrants were issued for both John Dyer sr., and John Dyer, jr. Lately these two gentlemen have been indulging in altercations that have made the rest of the Dyer family uncomfortable. Each paid His Honor $5 on Saturday.

A valuable young horse belonging to Mr. P. McCausey of Sterling was brought to Fulton last Saturday and George W. Bell, the Oswego veterinary surgeon, treated the horse for a disease known as caries, removing a large piece of bone from the face of the horse about five inches below the eye. The operation was successful and the horse will be restored to usefulness.

Every Body is Going To

Oswego to see the Handsomest Woman in the world, and 25 performing Elephants, 1,000 wild beasts, colossal Circus in three rings, and 4-paw's Roman Hippodrome. The Great Forepaugh Show exhibits at Oswego, Tuesday, August 7th. In addition to the grandly great Circus in three great rings, and a monster menagerie of 1,000 wild beasts, all transported by four great railway trains, there isto be a great, grand, free procession on the day Forepaugh exhibits there. Every town in this county will be represented in this huge, highway, holiday parade. In addition to this the great pageant of "Cleopatra" and "Lalla Rookh" will be presented in the show parade. This latter spectacle is described as being the most gorgeous ever seen upon the streets of an American city. The loveliest lady in the land has been secured to personify the beautiful Eastern Princess, Lalla Rookh, whom poets describe as "more beautiful than any of those heroines whose names and loves embellish the songs of Persia and Hindostan; more perfect than the divinest images of the House of Azor." In this gorgeous, glittering, Oriental pageant, Lalla Rookh is seen reclining in her sumptuous howdah, borne aloft upon the back of a ponderous and kingly elephant, the largest on this continent, whose embroidered velvet trappings touch the ground; a fair young female slave sits fanning the Princess through the rose-colored veils, with feathers of argus-pheasant's wings, and the lovely troupe of Tartarian and Cashmerean maids of honor ride upon each side of the Princess upon small Arabian horses. Rajahs and Mogul Lords follow, accompanied by Cavaliers in costly armor, mounted upon

"Steeds with their housings of rich silver spun,
Their chains and poitrels glittering in the sun,
And Camels tufted o'er with Yemen's shells,
Shaking in every breeze their light-toned bells."

In keeping with the author of Lalla Rookh's description of this grand, glittering, lavish and luxuriant spectacle, are seen the Guards of the great Kedar Khan, with their silver battle-axes and maces of gold, followed by the Great Nazir, or Chamberlain of the Harem, and the retinue of the Court of Delhi, mounted upon elephants, camels and Arabian horses, decorated in Oriental trappings, and bearing aloft the Royal standards—the entire scene recalling to the [illegible]

PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, as flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture, like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, particularly at night. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure, where all other remedies have failed. Do not delay, but try it and be cured. Price 50 cents. Sent prepaid on receipt of price. Address, The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by M. M. Williams.

OSWEGO, CO., N. Y.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English, Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

☞ The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait for another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to

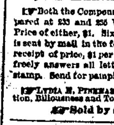
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparallel success. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The For Man & Beast. oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

Try Dr Sawen's improved mandrake pills, they are mild and effective. Price 25 cents.

S[illegible]PHUR [illegible]RS

[illegible]

[illegible] Throughout the villages it is thought a social distinction to wait upon the table well. In fact, in the frontier cities the waitresses at the hotels are persons of no slight consequence. A request for a cup of coffee, if not made with proper humility, is often met with the rejoinder: "Will you have it now or will you wait till you get it?"—a joke that, however stale, enjoys great prosperity with all except one of its hearers. Every thrifty waitress is indeed a real estate magnate. She has her three claims—home-stead, pre-emption and free, when proved up, give her a kingdom as large as many an old German state. The majority of the girls of the Northwest are, however, schoolmistresses. To have been a schoolmistress is there regarded as a title of nobility, though the order is so large that there is nothing invidious about it. The diverse fountains from which the male and female aristocracies of the frontier spring are remarkable. Sober bartenders constitute the former, schoolmistresses the latter. "Did you not keep a bar on the Jim River or the Cheyenne?" is a safe question to ask any local millionaire who is assuming too much of the air of the Bourbon or the Hapsburg. But the hundreds of mettlesome schoolmistresses, who in spring and autumn gather their little flocks together in the island huts that dot the waving fields of grass and wheat—no State could have a better foundation for its intellect and morality. In the summer the girls are engaged gathering in the harvest, for which they are paid $2 a day or more. In the winter they work at home and indulge in social recreations. [Boston Herald.

A lady writes: "I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family for many years, and could not keep house without it. For the relief of the pains consequent upon female weaknesses and irregularities, I consider it without an equal.

Patti's Rolling Boudoir.

Three cars, constructed on a principle similar to those in use on certain continental railroads in Europe, will be finished in a few days in the shops of the Gilbert Car Works in Troy. They are called boudoir cars and are being built on the order of Col Mapleson, the impressario, for the tour which Adelini Patti will make in this country the coming season. The car for Patti's accommodation will be called the Adelini Patti. It will have a dome roof and the exterior will be in dark blue and gold. Along one side will run a wide corrider. In the centre will be a spacious drawing room, fitted with divans, a table, sideboard and other appointments. Adjoining, on one side will be Patti's room, and on the other Niccolini's, and at either extreme will be a room for Patti's maid and Niccolini's valet. There will be linen closets, lavadories, and other rooms besides. The car will be ventilated by a process similiar to that in use at the Madison Square Theatre, by which the temperature in the heated term can be reduced 10 degrees, and heating apparatus designed for the purpose is to be employed in cold weather. The car will be upholstered in satin, even the walls themselves, according to the design prepared by the uphosterer to the Prince of Wales in London. The car is to cost $55,000.

The other two cars will be of the same pattern as the service cars. There will be a corridor the full length, with boudoirs accommodating four persons each. Altogether there will be room for 24 persons in a car. In every boudoir will be a couch on which a person may recline at length, and which at night can be coverted into the upper berth. A table can be transformed into steps leading up to the berth. The walls are to be covered with embrossed leather, heavily padded, which in addition to comfort, will afford protection to passengers in case of accident. The heating and cooling apparatus will be used in every car, and the exterior will be in dark blue and gold. A peculiarity about the cars will be the arrangement of the berths, which will extend crosswise, instead of lengthwise, and the motion will not be felt nearly so much as in the ordinary palace car. The cost of these cars will be from $25,000 to $30,000 each. The Grand Duke Michael traveled over Europe for four months in a boudoir car costing $150,000.

"Two cents?" sneered a Woodward Avenue man to a tramp who had asked for that sum, "why, you are getting very modest in your demands, aren't you?" "Look-a-here," said the old fellow, as he backed up to a hitching post, "wheat is only half a crop, corn is coming out behind, potatoes will be skeerce, and every prudent man in this country is preparing for a tight squeeze next fall. I'm right thar, I commenced hedging this morning. If we get another financial whooping over this country I'm not going to have it blamed upon me again—not if I know it!"

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procreth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

What Constitutes an "Intelligent Compositor."

It may interest the public to know what are the principle qualifications required of those printers that work in first-class city newspaper offices. Although every compositor is supposed to "follow copy" rigidly, he does not and cannot always do so. No matter how faulty the grammar, the punctuation, the spelling, the capitalization of the writer for the press may be, the compositor is expected to make it all right every time; so that the latter really assists at editing the journal on which he is engaged as type-setter. The compositor is the best friend of the composer. If there be given to the compositor a piece of manuscript copy in which occur the most unfamiliar foreign words and phrases, and in which there are written neither capital letters nor punctuation marks, he is usually thought to be equal to the task of bringing entire order out of chaos. If he errs, and the proof-reader happens to know wherein he has erred, he is generally compelled to correct such mistake or mistakes at the expense of his own time. Many have been the serious errors which I myself have corrected for writers, errors which would have probably gone unrectified had it not been for my action. The compositor is a mechanic, and his labor is largely mechanical; but his work is also largely mental. He toils with his brain as well as with his hands. He performs much gratuitous labor—does many things for which he receives little credit. Oftentimes the writer greatly annoys the compositor by failing to write proper names and technical terms plain. As the compositor almost invariably works "by the piece," i. e., at a stated price per 1,000 "ems," great loss is entailed upon him when he corrects errors which the writer has made it necessary to be rectified. Finally, the compositer is expected to be a walking encyclopædia, a philological prodigy, and a decipherer of genuine hieroglyphics.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."

River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."

CONEY ISLAND.

[illegible] Island in Full Blast—Scenes and Incidents told by our Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, July 29, 1888.

[illegible] any one wishes to see Coney Island [illegible] glory they should visit it now. [illegible] quickest and most convenient way [illegible] it is by the boat at pier number [illegible] North River. The sail down the [illegible] delightful, refreshing, and full of [illegible], for among the notable places [illegible] are Governor's, Beldoe and Staten Islands, Castle William, forts Hamilton and Lee. The shipping in the harbor is as cosmopolitan, as is the crowd of people on the boat. Ocean, sound and river steamers are always in view; [illegible] steam and sailing yachts, men of [illegible], merchant ships, police and pilot [illegible], tugs, dorys, elevators, punts and [illegible] boats pass you in constant review. [illegible] York is fairly represented on a [illegible] Coney Island boat, "all sorts [illegible] conditions of men" mingle on the [illegible] decks and exchange remarks [illegible] weather. Clerks and laborers sit [illegible] to the wealthy merchant, and a [illegible] of the streets elbows an amazon [illegible] the salvation army. The jolly, German is surrounded by Italians, [illegible], Cubans, Irish and people from [illegible] Jersey! Lovers are seen on all sides [illegible] and billing; married couples [illegible] attention to every one but each [illegible]; the solitary youth who by his [illegible] tells that he is either short of funds [illegible] girl has gone away with some one [illegible] the jolly old batchelor out on a [illegible] and many others all bent on having [illegible] time. A German band dispenses [illegible] which consists of parts of popular [illegible] and music from the variety stage, [illegible] every one on board either hums, [illegible] or whistles the music as it is played. [illegible] the narrows you can see the whole [illegible] Coney Island laid out before you like [illegible] animated map. West Brighton, [illegible], Manhattan and Oriental Beach are distinctly seen. All the boats [illegible] the iron piers. These piers are [illegible] on large iron piles driven [illegible] feet into the sand and extend a [illegible] distance into the ocean. The whole [illegible] each structure is decked over and [illegible] under its roof one thousand [illegible] houses, many restaurants and a [illegible] music stand. An admission fee is [illegible]. Standing on the pier you can [illegible] the crowd of bathers in the water [illegible]. The beach at Brighton Pier has [illegible] reputation of being the finest in this [illegible], and here all the interest is cen[illegible]. Methinks that if the poets and [illegible], who in past ages have written [illegible] sung of "The human form divine," [illegible] spend a few hours on Brighton [illegible], they would have stricken out [illegible] such lines. Of course there are [illegible] exceptions, but as a rule one dip [illegible] the ocean destroys the symmetry of [illegible] ordinary female form. As most of [illegible] suits are hired, they never fit cor[illegible], and when wet cling so tight to [illegible] form that it is shown in all its im[illegible]. Padded suits have come [illegible] use at some sea side resorts but as [illegible] have seen none here. The suits [illegible] are hired consist of a pair of short [illegible] pantalets, a loose blouse waist, [illegible] with a belt, and an old straw [illegible]. This is to pull over your face, so [illegible] friends wont know you. You are [illegible] of a friend unless they speak, [illegible] one looks alike. Knit suits [illegible] times worn, but unless a person [illegible] form they have no business [illegible] knit suit. Leaving the many [illegible] the water we walk up from [illegible] to what is known as "Photo [illegible]. Here you have to run a gauntlet [illegible] dozen "artists," each with a [illegible] of tin types in both hands, [illegible] chorus, "we take the whole [illegible] a quarter." As soon as you [illegible] people, the Dime Museums [illegible] before you. Each has large [illegible] painted canvas and an iron [illegible] faced lecturer who [illegible] wonders to be seen inside his [illegible] much louder than any [illegible]; and walking still far[illegible] in a [illegible] of beer sa[illegible], [illegible] machines, lung testers, [illegible] shooting [illegible] merry-go-rounds, [illegible] artists and [illegible]

[illegible] found [illegible] here is the [illegible] listen to [illegible] or to several lady [illegible] "dot loodle" games [illegible], a barrel organ, and the drum and cymbals of the Dime Museums. At all times you can catch strains from "Il Trovatore," "[illegible] Martha" or "Bohemian Girl," "Mascot," "Patience," "The Pirates," "Sweet Violets," "Wait till the clouds roll bye," "McNalleys row of flats," "Yankee Doodle," or "Old Hundred." The music of one band overlaps the next and from a distance you hear one continual blare—long drawn out. At hotel Manhattan, every Thursday, Paine of London tells the story of siege of Alexandria. To do this he has some five hundred soldiers, several vessels, the harbor and city of Alexandria represented on canvas, a large amount of red fire and numberless bombs and sky rockets. The representation is very clever and appears very natural. It is also said to be correct. The ball opens with shots from the ports which are answered from the ships, red coated troops advance, are repulsed, advance again in triumph. The Egyptians surrender and the town burns down amid much red fire and solemn music from the band. Rockets of triumph are sent up from the ships and soon all is lost in darkness. Other hotels have pyrotechnical displays but not on so extensive a scale. At 8 o'clock in the evening the crowds are the greatest but the boats and cars come down crowded until after ten. At 12 the people begin to think of home and then comes the tug of war—to get a comfortable seat on a boat or train. At 3 a. m. everything is quiet. The bugles have been laid away, the merry-go-rounds are still, rifle shots are no longer heard, and nothing disturbs you but the sob of the waves on the shore, and an occasional whistle from a watchman. The place that a few hours ago was a populous city, is now like a city of the dead, but with the rising of the sun, Coney Island will again be ready to receive the jolly crowds from all parts of the world.

WANDERING JEW.

Fashion Notes.

Sateen suits are very popular.

Chicken-down yellow is the latest.

Shingled front hair is all the rage.

Ann Boleyn sleeves are long and flowing.

The dude lace pin is the latest novelty.

Sleeves have a tendency of fulness near the top.

Very wide brocaded satin sashes are popular.

Crushed strawberry is no longer a fashionable color.

Dutchman yellow is a recherche color for neckerchiefs.

The fancy for yellow has brought topaz and amber into fashion.

Flower necklets or dog collars are a pretty novelty for evening wear.

Alicante brown and Soldat red are popular shades of these colors.

Shirts with pique bosoms are worn by gentlemen for evening dress.

Neck ribbons an inch wide are worn again, but mostly with linen collars.

Tucks on skirts, draperies, sleeves and corsages are very fashionable.

Lustre painting on fabrics for room decoration is becoming fashionable.

Puffed sleeves are worn on white dresses with knots of blue or pink ribbon.

Jersey waists are kept from rolling up by fastenings of small Rhine stone buckles.

Eel-bracelets are very popular. They are made of gold, and the eel is half skinned.

¶ A glass of iced milk with a little salt in it, is the popular summer drink among young ladies.

Small satin aprons with a pansy shaped pocket are worn in the morning at summer resorts.

Charles IX slippers of alligator skin, dyed a very dark red, are a passing fancy for morning wear.

There is no limit to the delicate beauty shown in the making up of new summer toilets of white.

Cambric dresses in designs of coaches and dog carts have taken the place of those with designs of Jumbo in spring.

The mother Hubbard slip, without sleeves, and low in the neck, worn over an underwaist and guimps, remains the popular dress for little girls.

A pretty material for evening dresses is Melbourne foulard. It makes up very stylishly in cream color with draped scarfs trimmed with wide loops and ends of ruby velvet.

Two new styles of lace have been introduced, the one being needle run Chantilly, to be used with jet embroidery, the other a lace with velvet flowers and buds appliqued, and outlined with colored beads.

The following are some of the [illegible] combinations of colors: [illegible]

The [illegible]
But [illegible] down
Gra[illegible]
And his heart [illegible] ever know
A shadow of grief or pain.
For he sees his wife as he saw her then—
A matron comely and fair,
With her children gathered around his board,
And never a vacant chair.

Oh! happy this dream of the "Auld Lang Syne,"
Of the years long slipped away!
And the old man's lips have gathered a smile,
And his heart grows young and gay.
But a kiss falls gently upon his brow
From his daughter's lips so true;
"Dinner is ready, and, father dear,
We are only waiting for you."

The old man wakes at his daughter's call,
And he looks at the table near;
"There's one of us missing, my child," he says,
"We will wait till mother is here."
There are tears in the eyes of his children then,
As they gazed on an empty chair;
For many a lonely year has passed
Since "mother" met with them there.

But the old man pleads still wistfully;
"We must wait for mother, you know!"
And they let him rest in his old arm-chair
Till the sun at last sinks low;
Then, leaving a smile for the children here,
He turns from the earth away,
And had gone to "mother," beyond the skies,
With the close of the quiet day.

THE STOLEN LETTER.

All through the long, pleasant summer on the Williams farm the two girls had been rivals—almost to the death. Society has its restraints—well for many of us that it is so! For on the last evening of her stay at the farmhouse the heart of Kate Jervis was full of cold and deadly anger as she reviewed the events of the campaign and knew that it had failed.

She had come to that lonely and secluded place only because Charles Edwards, the handsome and wealthy widower from Australia, was to be there. Throughout the cool days of autumn and the hazy beauty of the Indian summer she had lingered on, hoping continually that she might win him away from Lily Melville, whom in her secret heart she had stigmatized as "a dark little thing with not an atom of style about her."

But to the end of time the question, "Why does a man love one woman and not another?" will never be satisfactorily answered.

Miss Jervis, large, tall, stately and fair, devoted to dress, and with social talents of the very highest order, had only received from the gallant widower the ordinary attentions which every gentleman is bound to pay to the ladies near him.

While Lily Melville, who was poor and unnoticed, who toiled daily with her pencil for her daily bread, and who was utterly unable to follow the shifting fashions of the day, even if she did wish to do so, Lily Melville had won the widower's heart, and need only say the word to receive the offer of his hand.

Kate Jervis did not deceive herself. She had watched their parting only two days previously, and had read her own doom in Charles Edward's face.

"May I write to you?" had been his last words to Lily.

For Kate, he had only the conventional regrets at parting, mingled with his adieu. Not one word of hope as to any future meeting!

Yes, she had failed—utterly and ignominiously—failed—and now she must pack up the useless finery which had cost so much and go back to the city boarding house, to the narrow, pinching consideration of ways and means, from which, by the capture of this man and his fortunes, she had hoped to have been forever freed.

"If I could only spoil her happiness, I would not so much mind giving up my own," she thought, as she walked along the road that led from the farm to the village on the third evening after Mr. Edwards's departure. [illegible]

As that moment she saw the boy who was employed at the farm to run [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] "Don't [illegible] The next moment the letter was spread out before her. With [illegible] heart she read the manly, straightforward proposal of marriage, but her fair, proud face brightened at the concluding words.

"I had not the courage to say this while we were together. Nor have I the courage to meet your refusal even though it should be a written one. So I will beg of you, if your heart is otherwise engaged, not to pain me by the knowledge. If you do not answer this letter I shall understand that it is for that reason. If you do answer it you will make me the happiest of men.

Yours faithfully,
CHARLES EDWARDS."

"There is the answer!" said Kate, spitefully tearing the letter across and across, and thrusting it deep into the hedge in its envelope.

Then she walked back to the farm. That night the first snow of the autumn fell and the farmhouse was deserted the next day by the last of its summer guests, good Mrs. Williams writing down the city address of Lily Melville and faithfully promising to "forward any letters that may arrive," while Kate Jervis looked silently on.

* * * * * * * *

Two months went by. Lily toiling away at her paintings found time to wonder, sadly, why the hoped for letter from Charles Edwards never came. Not for his fortune did she love him but for himself.

It was a mild, open winter, and when the holidays drew near she took the few dollars she had so painfully saved and went back to the old brown farmhouse where she first met him.

Since she was to see his face no more it would be some consolation, although a sad one, to visit the places where she had been so happy by his side.

The secluded road that led to the village had been one of their favorite walks. There Lily lingered through a whole sunny afternoon—the last of her stay that year as her purse was nearly empty.

Some bitter tears were in her eyes as she turned to go. A carriage was coming from the station, and not caring to be seen there weeping she drew back, with her face toward the barren hedge.

At her feet something white gleamed. She picked it up mechanically, and to her astonishment saw a torn and stained letter with her own name on the envelope.

Under the snow of the past autumn it had lain waiting for her coming. She could still decipher it, and as she read a mountain of snow and ice seemed lifted from her heart. "Thank God! He did love me," she exclaimed.

"Lily—Miss Melville," said a familiar voice.

She turned. The carriage which she had seen stood waiting in the road, and at her side was Charles Edwards, looking from her happy face to the torn letter in her hand with a questioning gaze.

"I was coming back to the dear old place," he said. "You made me very unhappy last autumn. Yet I am like the moth with the candle—not wise enough to keep away, even after getting severely burned."

"I only found it this moment under the hedge!" stammered Lily, giving him the fragments that she held. "It must have been lost and hidden under the ice all this time."

"You would have answered me then?" he asked.

Her shy, happy eyes looked gently up at him.

"Drive on to the farm my man. We will walk," he called to the staring man.

And drawing Lily's little hand within his arm, they began their life journey happily together.

What You Really Need for Fishing.

Did we not go fishing it would not be summer. Conversely, if it were not summer we would not go a-fishing.

"We are going fishing next week," said Mr. Oldboy, "and I want to be sure we've got all our things together."

"Got a tent," asked his partner.

"Yes. I've got a tent."

"And a boat?"

"Yes; that's engaged."

"Whisky?"

"Lots of it."

"Some pilot biscuit?"

"Yes, a whole box."

"Five or six dozen of beer?"

"Yes."

"Cigars?"

"Hundred's of 'em."

"Plenty of whisky?"

"Yes."

"[illegible] and canned meat?"

"Yes."

"[illegible] of beer?"

"What are these among so many?" is a question suggested by the statement of a missionary of the American Sunday-School Union in Missouri, that within a year he has "gathered 3,700 into Sunday-schools, while in that State there are about half a million of children without adequate religious instruction, and in Arkansas the the darkness is still greater."

An important meeting in the interest of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, is to be held at Ocean Grove, N. J, on August 14. There will be three sessions—morning, afternoon and evening. Bishop Simpson, Rev Dr Reid, Mrs L. M. Dunton, and others, will speak. It of is expected that Mrs Hayes, the president of the society, will be preside.

Prof Philip Schaff says that the Old Testament is still in the hands of the American revisers, who are preparing the Americam Apprendix; that is, selecting from all their readings and renderings which the British revisers have rejected those which they deem worth laying before the public for final decision. The revised Old Testament will proabbly be published before next spring. Then the Convocation of Canterbury, which originated the movement, will subject it to official judgement.

[illegible] that there are two candidates [illegible] for the consideration of [illegible] conventions this fall. Their [illegible] are George M. Case for State [illegible], and Henry C. Howe for County [illegible]. They are both known from one [illegible] of the county to the other, and [illegible] or less throughout the State at [illegible]. They are both men of integrity [illegible] ability and each has done yeoman work in the party's service. With a united party, to be nominated on the Republican ticket in this county is to be elected. Fulton deserves the honor. The men deserve the honor. Will they receive it?

TERRIBLE storms are still prolific in the great West, destroying lives and damaging buildings and crops.

CETEWAYO, the famous South African Chief who gave England so much trouble a few years since, is reported dead.

R. V. GURNEY, of New York, claims that he and Charles H. McKensie are the only survivors in the country of the famous Six Hundred who made the charge at Balaklava.

BEN. BUTLER, Governor of Massachusetts, has commenced his canvass for the re-nomination as Governor of that State. He thinks his nomination sure, and that he will again take the gubernatorial chair. Don't be too sure, Ben.

ASSOCIATED press dispatches bring the intelligence of a terrible railroad accident in Colorado to a train bearing excursionists composed of delegates to the Grand Army convention at Denver, and in which it is reported that 170 persons were injured and 140 killed.

IT IS said that the Oswego Stalwarts are angry with Mr. Case because he failed to corrupt the ballot-box of Volney and Granby two years ago. This is the highest compliment which could be paid Mr. Case. If this is the sole accusation against Mr. Case he can stand it.

JAMES CAREY, the informer, was shot and killed Sunday while landing from the steamship Melrose at Port Elizabeth, a South African town. The English government have taken expensive measures to protect Carey, and were trying to smuggle him away to South Africa, where it was hoped his identity would be lost.

THE body of Capt. Webb, who was drowned last week in his fool hardy attempt to swim through the Whirlpool rapids at Niagara Falls, was found in the river near Lewistown Saturday by a Youngstown man, who was looking for driftwood. It was not mutilated, except that there were some bruises. Death was evidently caused by a gash in the head, which was received while diving.

A NEW exchange has recently come to our table. It is the the New York Truth, one of the brightest, liveliest and most independent papers published in the metropolis. A few weeks ago A. Oakley Hall accepted the position as editor of Truth and his great name alone is a sufficient guarantee that Truth will take its place among the foremost metropolitan journals. Its circulation crowds 100,000.

THE Massachusetts Legislature adjourned sine die last Friday, after a session of 206 days, the longest on record. The longest previous session, which lasted 175 days, was in 1874. Just before adjournment the only bill that the Legislature had been able to pass over the Governor's veto was enacted. It increased the salaries of clerks of the Senate and House $500. This Legislature has made itself notorious for its opposition to the reform movements of Gov. Butler, especially in the case of the Tewksbury almshouse.

A FULTON politician says in an interview in another column of THE TIMES that "Stalwarts at Oswego hold Mr. Case responsible for Mr. Cullinan's light vote in the towns of Volney and Granby two years ago. Had Mr. Case 'put his hand in his pocket' at that time and secured Cullinan a majority in these two towns Cullinan would have been elected." This is an honorable accusation. Be it said to Mr. Case's credit that he is not one of those who "put their hands in their pockets" to corrupt voters at the ballot box.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR, accompanied by a party of gentlemen, including Secretary Lincoln, Senator Vest, Surrogate [illegible] of New York, and Governor J. [illegible] Crosby of Montana, are going to Montana and the Yellowstone Valley on a hunting and fishing expedition. They expect to leave Chicago next Friday and will travel by special trains [illegible] will be furnished them by the [illegible] companies without expense. There has been a good deal of interest [illegible] about the possible significance of the proposed trip. [illegible] the fact that ex- [illegible] Cameron, ex-Secretary [illegible] Judge Al- [illegible]

[illegible] The shocks began at 9½ o'clock last night. At that hour a majority of the people of the upper classes were at the theatre. Nearly all of the houses in the town collapsed. It is estimated that 1,000 persons were killed and 800 injured. A number of steamers have been brought into service to carry the injured to Naples. The impression produced by the disaster is indescribable. Many of the victims belong to good families.

Later dispatches put the number killed at 3,000. Casamicciola is a town of 4,300 inhabitants on the island of Ischia, twenty miles south-west of Naples. The tourist in Italy usually visits the island by steamer from Naples, landing on the north shore, one mile and a half from Casamicciola. The island is sixteen miles in circumference, and contains a population of 28,200 people, nearly all engaged in grape culture and fishing. The bathing establishments of Casamicciola and its neighborhood have been famous from the remotest antiquity, and when the shores of the bordering mainland were dotted with Roman villas the baths of Casamicciola were in high favor, as now, among invalids with weak lungs and skin diseases. The thermal springs and baths have made the town a favorite watering place.

Montgomery Blair Dead.

Montgomery Blair, the well known lawyer and politician, died at his country seat in Silver Springs, Maryland, last Friday morning. He was born in Franklin county, Ky., May 10, 1813. He was the son of Frank P. Blair, to whom General Jackson bequeathed all his manuscripts, memoranda, letters and documents for the purpose of writing his biography. The older Blair never found time to do this, so, when he passed away to the majority, the papers, which are said to be of great interest fell into the possession of his son Montgomery, who, so far as is known, had no leisure to make any use of them. The Blair family came originally from Scotland. Montgomery Blair's grandfather, James Blair, was a lawyer in Virginia, who removed to Kentucky and became Attorney-General of that State. Frank P. Blair was one of the most powerful and pointed political writers of the country. For many years he edited a Democratic daily paper, called the Globe, which was an organ of great and commanding influence. He was a personal friend and adviser of General Jackson. He supported Van Buren as a candidate for the Presidency in 1848 and joined the Republican party in 1855. He lived to see his eldest son high in the councils of his party and a member of the Cabinet, and his youngest son a candidate for the Vice-Presidency, a member of Congress and soldier of distinction. The central idea of the Blairs was always love for the Union. It began before 1830 and was paramount over every other consideration. It endured through all the national changes. Montgomery Blair was educated at West Point, graduating in 1835, and served in the Seminole war. He resigned his commission in the army in 1836, and entered upon the practice of law in St. Louis. In 1839 he was appointed United States District Attorney for Missouri and from 1843 to 1849 was a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. He removed to Maryland in 1853 and was appointed solicitor of the United States in the Court of Claims in 1855. Previous to the repeal of the Missouri compromise he was a Democrat, but afterward supported the Republican party. He acted as counsel for the plaintiff in the Dred-Scott case in 1857, and in 1860 presided over the Republican convention of Maryland. In 1861 he was appointed Postmaster-General by President Lincoln, and held that position until 1864. After the war he identified himself with those Union men in Maryland who opposed the reconstruction policy of the Republican party, and became identified with the Democratic conservative party then organized in that State. He was a delegate to the convention which nominated Mr. Tilden for the Presidency and was conspicuous in denouncing the means by which the returning boards seated Mr. Hayes in the Presidential chair. He was elected a member of the Maryland House of Delegates from Montgomery county in 1877. Mr. Blair's long continued prominence as a public officer and statesman has given him a national reputation. In the early part of the present month a newspaper correspondent visited the home of Mr. Blair and during his inquiries in that neighborhood learned that the defeat of the Judge in the race for an election to Congress last fall had affected his health and spirits in a remarkable degree. His defeat at that time is said to have been by the largest Republican majority ever cast for a Republican in that district.

Pulaski Democrat—Mrs. A. Fisher of this place has recently purchased a handsome granite monument of the St. Johnsbury, Vt., Granite Company, which has recently been placed upon her lot in Pulaski Cemetery. It was sold by D. L. Simmons, special agent for the company. The monument stands 14 feet 8 inches high with a base four feet square. Mrs. Fisher ordered this monument as a duplicate of the one purchased by her brother, Mr. Calvin Osgood of Fulton. It stands upon a very pleasant spot in the cemetery and is one to be seen and admired. The lettering is plain and the handsome, tapering shaft with its supporting base is, taken altogether, a great addition to the beautiful cemetery in which it stands.

A distressing and terribly disastrous accident happened at twenty-five minutes past nine last Friday night on the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg Railroad, near a small station called Carlyon, in Orleans county, ten miles northwest from Albion, on the Central road, and thirty-six miles west of Charlotte. Nineteen persons were killed outright, and as many more were injured, some so seriously that death is certain. The accident was caused by a collision between the tourist train running from Niagara Falls to the Thousand Islands, Montreal, Quebec, and other eastern points, and a freight car which the wind had blown from a switch upon the main track. Carlyon is a very out of the way station and the passenger train did not stop there, but rushed through at a high rate of speed. The ill-fated train was made up of eight sleeping cars, one regular coach and smoking car, and one baggage car, and was drawn by two engines, Nos. 61 and 51. The night was lowering and stormy, and at about 9 o'clock a particularly furious gust struck a box car on a side track near Carlyon station, blowing it out upon the main line. Before the accident could be discovered and remedied, the train came thundering along and dashed into the obstacle with a crash that could be heard loud above the pelting storm. The engine in front was flung from the track on the north side, while its companion left the rails on the south and turning around parallel with the train, literally threw a somersault, landing in the ditch with its trucks in the air. The baggage car was jerked after it, and tossed as if by a giant's hand on top of the engines, while the smoking-car which followed was also torn from the rails and smashed into pieces. The first sleeper kept the track, though it was hurled from the trucks and the sides and ends were dashed out, leaving a scene of indescribable wreck; the second telescoped and left the trucks; the third left its forward truck but remained on the rear truck, not suffering very serious damage. For a wonder the engineer and fireman of the head engine escaped unhurt, or with but trifling injury, but their companions on No. 51 were less fortunate; the fireman being instantly killed, and the engineer so terribly scalded that his death was only a matter of a little time. The killed were engineer William McCarthy and fireman Louis Furnace, of Oswego; Archie V. Tyler, baggageman, and Stiles, a porter of Watertown; Henry McCormick of Benton, Mich.; E. W. Stone, of Battle Creek Mich.; N. W. Adams of Chicago; "Willie" Lefaver of Bay City, Mich.; Mr. Dower of Lansing, Mich.; a young lady from Leslie, Mich., name unknown; Thomas Haines of Chicago; Mrs. Carl of Lansing, Mich.; O. B. THE NEW PATENT

Stem Winding Open Face Case,

MANUFACTURED BY THE

AMERICAN WATCH CO.,

WALTHAM, MASS.

This case is formed in one solid piece without joint or seam, opening in front only, thus avoiding the usual Cap, and securing greater strength and durability.

These watches are all open face. The bezel, into which an extra strong crystal is fitted with an especially prepared water-proof cement, is attached to the case by screwing it thereon, and thus forms an air tight junction with the body of the case, which is proof against dust and moisture.

To railroad men, travelers, miners, lumbermen and others who are almost constantly exposed and who have to make frequent reference to the watch these qualities are of the utmost importance.

The following letters tell their own story.

"VALDOSTA, GEORGIA, July, 20, 1882.

"I sold one of your Patent Dust Proof Cases about ten months ago, and the other day it came back to me with the request to make it wind easier. On examination I found that the stem was rusty, and I inquired into the cause of it. The gentleman stated to me that he was starting some saw-logs that had lodged in the bend of the river, when his chain caught in a bush and threw his watch into about twelve feet of water, and he was about two hours finding it. When he got it out it was running and he thought all right. In about three months he found that the stem was hard to turn and sent it to me.

I can say that the watch is all that the company claims for it and recommend it to all railroad and mill men. B. W. BENTLY."

"CLINTON, IOWA, April 29, 1881.

"I wish you would send me a spring for the Wm Ellery Watch * * * By the way this Ellery is a watch I sold in your Screw Bezel Case to a farmer last fall. The first of January he lost the watch in the woods, and found it this week in about one foot of water. It had lain three months and over in snow and water, with but slight injury to the watch—only a hair spring. C. S. RAYMOND."

The above [illegible] and demonstrate beyond a doubt, that for any reasonable length of time during which a watch might be under water it would receive no injury whatever.

We make these case cases in both gold and silver, and as a Perfectly Dust Proof Stem Winding watch Case, Challenge the World to Produce its Equal.

He had a rope in his hand and said he had made all the preparations. Mrs. Hanna had locked the door and tried to prevent his getting out of the house by holding the doors and trying to dissuade him from his purpose. He sat down on the doorstep with his wife, but he told her that it was no use and said he should finish himself. He then made his exit through the front window, his wife clinging to his clothing and trying to prevent his getting out as long as she could keep her hold. Hanna blew out the light and while his wife was relighting it he went through the window and down the steps. Mrs. Hanna at first thought he had gone down town. As soon as she could collect her senses she went to the door and several times. Then she rushed to the barn and looked through the window and saw her husband door, when Mrs. Hanna went to her husband, took his hand and asked him if he was dead. He made no reply. A number of men soon arrived. Night watchman Charles Wilkinson cut the rope and with the assistance of Officer Curtis and laid on the barn floor where it remained until the arrival of Coroner Gilbert at about 4 o'clock.

THE BODY WAS TAKEN DOWN

HOW HE DID IT.

When Hanna left the house he went to the barn, placed a step ladder near a pair of sleighs on the west side of the barn, made a loop in the rope which he placed around his neck before securing it. In one of the joists was a large nail and two wooden pegs and around these he tightly wound the rope, so that his head was but a few inches from the flooring of the second story of the barn. Here he was found with one foot touching the sleigh. It is thought that after fastening the rope he stepped from the ladder.

ROBERT HANNA

is 54 years old and has been a cartman for a number of years. Of late he has been despondent, threatening several times to make away with himself. When he came home from church a week ago last Sunday he took off his coat, saying he should never wear it again, and that it would do for a burial robe.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

Coroner Daniel Gilbert held an inquest at 8:30 this morning at the residence of deceased. The following jury served:

Frank Wilson, foreman, R. Bradshaw, Jefferson Bailey, Carl Fuller, William Heatherington, Peter Decker and D. A. Waterman.

Dr. W. A. Hall testified that he had examined the body shortly after suicide and that death ensued from strangulation.

Mrs. Hanna said that while her husband was trying to free himself from her grasp he used no violence and talked very calmly with her. The rest of her story is in substance as published above.

Several other witnesses testified and the jury came to the conclusion that the deceased "came to his death by hanging, by his own act."

Broke Jail.

Billy Collins who was arrested here about a week ago on a charge of drunkenness, and sentenced for a term of six months in the O. P. or $15 fine, after which the sentence was suspended that he might leave town and go to Sodus where he had employment promised him, and that he should not return to Fulton under six months. Yesterday he returned to this village claiming that he could not work as he had a sore hand. He was immediately placed in the lock-up by Officer Sweet who held a commitment to take him to the Onondaga Penitentiary which would have been done to-day. Collins broke the jail some time during last night by tearing the boards from the ceiling and crawled through between the joists and succeeded in making his way into the stairway in the rear of Patrick Cullen's meat market, thence down the stairs, pulled back the bolt and escaped. Collins was locked up in one part of the jail and in the other part there were two other prisoners. Had they all been together the jail would have been empty this morning. Collins is a treacherous man, and the manner in which he secured his escape was evidence that he has been an old time convict and that he understood his business.

She has perfect command of the French and German languages.

Owing to a pressure of matter on our columns last week we did not note the improvement that had been made in our esteemed contemporary, the Patriot. Two weeks ago it expanded to nine columns and came out in a new dress of clear, bold faced body type. It also contained much more reading matter than heretofore. It has long been the most reliable Republican paper in Oswego county and this improvement is a renewed evidence that it is increasing in party favor. It is to be earnestly hoped that with each issue it will supplant more and more its sycophantic contemporary published in the sleepy city by the lakeside. We tender our congratulations, neighbor. "May you live long and prosper."

HANLAN'S HIPPODROME.

A Rowing Exhibition on Lake Neahtawanta by a Traveling Combination.

Last Thursday there was an exhibition of rowing on Lake Neahtawanta by Edward Hanlan, George W. Lee and George H. Hosmer. About 2,000 people witnessed the affair from the bank of the Lake about half of this number were from out of town.

A "race" between these three celebrated oarsmen had been advertised to occur at 4 o'clock, but the exhibition, for such it was, was not given until after 5 o'clock.

An alleged three-quarter mile course had been laid by guess-work along the eastern shore of the lake and at 4:55 p. m. the men were called to their positions, Lee having the inshore course, with Hosmer next and Hanlan beyond Hosmer and still farther out on the lake. Major Herman Michael of Syracuse had been chosen referee and at 5:01 p. m., he gave the word "go" and started the men on their

EXHIBITION OVER THE COURSE.

They pulled out with all that vigor and energy which always characterizes a genuine exhibition. Lee's oars struck the water first and he was about a half boat's length ahead by the time the exhibitors were fairly under way, Hanlan was slightly behind Hosmer, but he soon paddled ahead of his brother exhibitors and took the lead. Lee dropped into Hosmer's wake and in this order the procession paddled over the course, Hanlan spurting at the finish and coming in about three lengths ahead of Hosmer, who was a half length ahead of Lee.

HANLAN'S TIME

was 21:30. If the course had been full three miles in length this would have been remarkably fast time for a course with a double turn, but as the course was probably about two miles and a half in length 21:30 is rather slow time for the champion oarsman of the world.

HANLAN AS A TICKET SELLER.

Hanlan was the Treasurer in the ticket office and two of his friends sold the tickets, and as he said this was the first race he had ever rowed on a percentage it is to be presumed that Fulton is his starting point in the hippodroming business.

PICKPOCKETS AND BUNCO STEERERS.

The grounds had been policed by the "management," but for all that a gang of "soap" men, bunco steerers and pickpockets carried on their nefarious trades with more or less success, and it has been intimated in certain quarters that the "management" were in league with the rascals and deferred the race for an hour to give them a better opportunity to fleece the gullible country people. It is reported that a conspicuous Fulton moralist invested in a bar of soap which he was very certain contained a five dollar gold piece. But it didn't. From here the combination went to St. Paul, Minn. where they will exhibit to-morrow.

A Rector Called.

The Vestry of Zion Episcopal church have extended a call to the Rev. J. B. C. Beaubien, of Toronto, Ont., to become rector of this parish

The Call Not Accepted.

THE TIMES is rejoiced to make the announcement that Mr. J. S. Riggs has decided not to accept the call to become the pastor of the Presbyterian church at South Orange, N. J., Mr. Riggs went to South Orange last Sunday and delivered a sermon. He was very cordially received and great inducements were offered him to accept the extended call, but after carefully considering the matter Mr. Riggs has decided to remain in Fulton.

Bristol will sell all the popular Sheet Music at 40 per cent off the list. Music received daily.

Decision Deferred.

The case of L. H. Patterson against the Board of Trustees was argued before Judge Churchill at Oswego last Friday upon the statement of facts previously agreed upon by counsel, H. C. Howe and W. C. Stephens appearing for plaintiff and G. S. Piper and H. E. Nichols for defendants. The Judge took the papers and reserved his decision, intimating that he would not have time to take up the case and render a decision until after his vacation. The counsel for defense urged the importance of an immediate decision, but Judge Churchill replied that he had other cases on hand which would occupy his time until his departure for California on his vacation tour. He will go sometime this week and will extend his trip through Oregon and Washington Territory, returning home about October 1, via the Northern Pacific Railroad.

Mr. W. B. Williams made THE TIMES a call last week.

Bristol is sole agent for the Sterling Organ.

Ballou & Son's new store will soon be ready for occupancy.

Mr. Charles Guile rejoices in the arrival of a new daughter.

Falley Seminary, for young ladies, will open Monday, September 3.

Mr. and Mrs. Dr. I. C. Curtis are visiting friends in Pennsylvania.

Mr. B. R. Howe and family are sojourning among the Thousand Islands.

The Priory of St. Paul of Oswego are holding a picnic on the fair grounds to-day.

Mrs. Clark Smith was again stricken with paralysis on Monday. She is improving.

The work on George Johnston's new store in Oswego Falls is being pushed rapidly forward.

A cow belonging to Mr. John Alexander, residing two miles south of Oswego Falls was struck by lightning last Friday night.

Miss Kittie Dickinson, who has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Dr. Hall, for some time past, will return home this week.

Work is progressing in the remodelling of the upper Oswego Falls school building, which will comprise five school rooms when completed.

M. A. Stewart and family leave for the east to-day for a trip of ten days or two weeks. They will go to New Haven and other points and possibly to the Thousand Islands.

Lewis Bush has purchased the horse and cart and good will of James Sweet and will be found at the cartmen's stand, where he will be ready to serve the public at all times.

The Oswego Falls Manufacturing Company have advertised for bids for the construction of machine and carpenter shops in their mill yards. The new building will be of brick and stone.

Workmen are engaged in painting and tucking the Howe block in Oswego Falls. Howe's hall is also undergoing repairs, and when all is completed the entire block will be lighted by electricity.

George Johnston will next week put a heavy galvanized iron cornice on the brick block, corner of Oneida and First streets owned by Willard Johnson. This improvement will add to the safety of the block.

The Oswego Falls Manufacturing Company are preparing to utilize the water of a spring located about fifteen rods below the mills on the bank of the river. The water will be carried to the mills by means of a hydraulic ram.

The church of the Immaculate Conception held a festival at Nichols Hall last Thursday evening and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all those present. The receipts of the festival and the recent picnic on the fair grounds amounted to more than $400.

Rev. W. T. Gallowway of Hamilton, filled the Baptist pulpit last Sunday. There will probably be no preaching service in the church again until Mr. Dow's return, about September 1. There will be the usual Sunday school service and Sunday evening prayer meeting at 7:30.

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees of Oswego Falls on Monday evening a Street Commissioner was elected in place of John Patrick, resigned. There were two candidates in the field, John McCarthy and Frederick Parker. Each received two votes, and the tie was broken by President Marsh, who voted for McCarthy.

Charles Sutton, who obtained money surreptitiously upon two checks on the Citizens' National Bank and left for parts unknown a few weeks ago, subsequently returned of his own accord and was declared insane by Dr. W. A. Hall, of Fulton, and Dr. Loomis of Jennings Corners. He was sent to the Insane Asylum at Mexico.

Among the politicians who have recently visited Fulton may be mentioned Mr. John W. Shea, candidate for County Judge from Pulaski, Mr. D. L. Wilder, candidate for Member of Assembly, from Constantia, Hon. John A. Place, of the Oswego Times, School Commissioner Parkhurst, from Scriba, Frank David of Phœnix, candidate for Surrogate, Judge Avery of Phœnix, James McCarthy, ex-Assemblyman P. W. Cullinan, ex-Mayor Neal and ex-Senator Doolittle.

"There is a pretty general scramble for places by a large number of candidates," said a prominent local half-breed a few days ago, "and some of the most confident among them will not get there."

THE LEADING CANDIDATES.

"Who are the leading candidates?" asked THE TIMES.

"Well, Senator Lansing has the Senatorial bee in his bonnet again, and it is probable that he will be nominated. He will bring a solid delegation from his own county, and the Oswego county delegation will doubtless be divided. But he is not doing a great deal to secure the respect of Republicans of this locality. He has placed himself in close alliance with that notorious political trickster, John A. Place, of the Oswego Times, and is going about the county arm in arm with his satellites. Besides, when he was nominated two years ago he made definite pledges that he would not be a candidate again. He made pledges to a number of gentlemen that he would be satisfied with one term, and he and Mannister Worts, who is now a candidate, made an agreement that if Mr. Worts would turn over certain Oswego county delegates to him that he and Jefferson county would be solid for Worts in two years from that time. Another thing connected with Mr. Lansing's candidacy is that I am just as certain that money was used to induce Steele delegates from some of the Jefferson county towns to send Lansing substitutes as I am that money is ever corruptly used in politics."

"What other candidates have you heard mentioned for State Senator?"

"Well, I should like to support T. W. Skinner and I think he is a candidate."

"Will he not be a candidate for Surrogate again?"

"No sir, I don't think he will. When H. D. Nutting was nominated for Congress last fall, certain promises were made to both Mr. Skinner and Frank David of Phœnix that they should be supported for Surrogate, but a number of the men who pledged themselves to Mr. Skinner's support are now out of politics and I think that David would beat Skinner, if the latter were a candidate."

"Have you heard George M. Case mentioned as a candidate?"

"Well, yes, I have heard his name mentioned, but I do not think there is the slightest prospect of his being nominated. In the first place he is doing nothing to secure the nomination and I do not think he could get the delegation from his own Assembly district."

"How's that?"

"Because the Stalwarts at Oswego hold Mr. Case responsible for Mr. Cullinan's light vote in the towns of Volney and Granby two years ago. Had Mr. Case 'put his hand in his pocket' at that time and secured Cullinan a majority in these two towns Cullinan would have been elected."

"I suppose you are a supporter of H. C. Howe for County Judge?"

"Yes sir, I intend to do everything I can for Mr. Howe and I think he is more likely than any one else to receive the nomination. He is a sharp politician and it will be a good man that defeats him."

A FREE FOR ALL RACE.

"Have you heard any one named for Member of Assembly in either district?"

"I can't say that I have heard of a leading candidate in either district. It is a sort of free for all race. In the Second district there are, however, several men who would like to lead the party to victory. They are Daniel Wilder of Constantia, G. M. Sweet of Phœnix, D. Trimble of Palermo, and possibly ex-Assemblyman Steele of Williamstown. In this district I do not know of anybody who is anxious to run."

"How about Cullinan? I have heard his name mentioned in connection with the nomination for Member of Assembly.

"From information I have received I do not think he is a candidate for that or any other office."

WHAT MR. CULLINAN SAYS ABOUT IT.

Mr. Cullinan himself was met by THE TIMES a day or so after the above conversation occurred. "I hear you are a candidate for Member of Assembly," was remarked. "That is a mistake." "Would you accept the nomination if it were tendered to you?"

"That is a question I do not care to talk about!"

MR. CASE NOT A CANDIDATE.

Mr. George M. Case was seen. "There has been some advocacy of your name in certain newspapers as candidate for State Senator. Have you authorized any such publication?"

"I wish to state most emphatically that I have authorized no such publication and that I am not a candidate for any office. There is still a feeling of dissension between the stalwarts and half breeds in this district and I wish to do everything in my power to unite the party. It is true that I stood by Gen. Grant at the Chicago convention, but I think it is time to bury the hatchet."

"If the nomination of Senator were tendered to you would you accept?"

"No, Sir. I wish to have it distinctly understood that I am for Mannister Worts for State Senator."

ANOTHER HALF BREED HAS HIS SAY.

"What about politics? Well there is going to be [illegible] in this county this fall [illegible]

[illegible] think of Mr. Lansing's chances? I think they are good. He will bring a solid delegation from his own county and the Oswego county delegation will be divided between nearly half a dozen candidates. Do I think Mannister Worts will carry this district? Yes, sir, but it is doubtful if he does the Second. I have heard that Judge Huntington of Pulaski was a candidate for State Senator and if he goes into the canvass he will carry the Second District. What about County Judge? Well, John W. Shea of Pulaski is a candidate, but he is too recently from the Democratic ranks to run very strongly. Five years ago he left the Democrats and became a Greenbacker. Two years later he turned up as a Republican candidate for District Attorney, and now he wants to be County Judge. Henry Howe? Well you can just bet your last last dollar he is working and if hard work will accomplish anything he will get there. Who will be Surrogate? It is a pretty even thing between Skinner and Frank David of Phœnix. Skinner is a sharp, shrewd fellow, but the fact that he has already been Surrogate for sixteen years militates against him. Besides David has plenty of friends and is hard at work. What of Cullinan? I heard a few days ago what I considered an unreliable rumor that Cullinan was getting in trim to run again, but I don't take any stock in it."

SOMETHING ABOUT LANSING.

An Oswego Stalwart was in Fulton a few days since. "What do I think of Lansing," said he in answer to a question from THE TIMES man, "I think he has broken his contract with Mannister Worts, and what is more there are plenty of men in Oswego who can step forward and testify that he agreed that if Mr. Worts would favor him when he ran two years ago he would turn over all of his forces to Worts this fall."

"But Lansing has a good record."

"Record!" sneered the Stalwart, "If he has such a remarkably good record, perhaps the people would be edified to know why he voted for the bill of the Black River Railroad."

FOUR CENT FARE

"Well, why did he?" "Why? Because his wife owns stock in the road!"

THE DEMOCRATS.

There is little stir among the Democrats in the county, for it makes no difference how good their candidate may be, his canvass as a general thing is little better than a side-show. It is thought that Judge Avery will be nominated for County Judge, but aside from that there are no prominent candidates as yet in the field. Mr. Willard Johnson has been nominated by one or two newspapers for Member of Assembly, but he told THE TIMES a day or two since that under no circumstances would he be a candidate for any office.

A Canal Boat Wrecked.

The canal boat, James Elder, owned by Edward Scouten, ran on to a submerged log and sunk on the Four Mile level opposite the square docking at 4 o'clock last Friday afternoon. Mr. Scouten was steering at the time when suddenly the bow of the boat was thrown out of water about four feet. It immediately settled into the water again and passed over the sunken obstacle, as did the boat Helena C. Betts, which the Elder was consorting. Mr. Scouten discovered that the Elder had sprung aleak and was filling faster than he could pump her out. He run her as far as the Little Gaskin, where she sank in seven feet of water. Five horses were towing the two boats and one sick horse was on the Elder but was taken ashore in safety. There were no persons on the boat but Mr. Scouten who got ashore all right. The cargo of the Elder consisted of 6,000 bushels of rye worth about 65 cents per bushel. About 2,500 bushels of the rye were taken from the boat, before it was damaged. The remainder of the cargo was sold to Foley Bros. of Buffalo by the insurers. The cargo was consigned to James Moss of New York and was from B. C. Frost of Oswego. The damage to the boat will probably amount to $1,500, but this is fully covered by insurance.

OSWEGO, CO., N. Y.

Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies.

Next term of 13 weeks begins on Monday Sept. 3d. The branches taught will be those usually taught in a first class boarding school. There will be a corps of well qualified teachers so as to give the best instruction. Common and Higher English Bookkeeping, Classics, French, German and Music will form part of the course. Five day boarders at special rates.

The school is designed for those wishing to make rapid progress in their classes. To this end the classes are small, so that each pupil may have individual attention. No student is required to wait on another but passes from one class to another as soon as qualified. Small schools, select in their character, are a great advantage to timid and backward pupils. The charges are low for the advantages offered. Boarders are received into the family of the Principal at moderate charges. Apply to

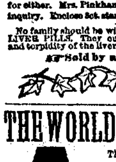
THE WORLD CHALLENGED



This liniment has been manufactured and used for twenty five years and our innumerable certificates of cure prove it to be an unparallel succes. We do not offer it as an internal remedy, positively asserting that any liniment that can be taken into the stomach without injury can have little efficacy as a specific when externally applied. This being compounded of Oils, is readily absorbed into the system, giving prompt relief even in cases of acute pain caused by Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Sprains, Bruises, Chilblains, or from any cause where a liniment is demanded. The oils are so penetrating that a thorough use of the Liniment will remove all stiffness of joints, lameness of muscles, or pain arising from inflammation or any cause. Even in chronic Spinal Disease, and Paralysis, frequent use of Oil Liniment will effect many cures. Finally for pain in any part of the body, use freely, with rubbing and warmth and we guarantee relief. You will find a trial of it the best certificate of its value. It is the only Liniment made entirely of Oils, and we challenge the world for its equal. Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers.

[illegible]

[illegible] town of Eaton is able to furnish liars for the great metropolis?" we asked in astonishment.

"Yes, my son, I certainly do. We can sell small, undersized, one-horse lies in the city; but when it comes to telling a great, five-story, one hundred-horse power side-wheel lie, the glorious country is the place to find the man to tell it. Several times to-day, while in your village, I have attempted to tell one of our weak, puny, Sunday-school, city lies to one of your people, and——

'Did he believe it?' we interrupted.

"Belive it! No, sir; he laughed me to scorn. 'Why' said he, 'a man who would come up here to Eaton and tell such a clumsy lie as that, why, I would not believe him on oath. Just hear one of our ordinary lies, Mr Perkins,' he said and then hang your head in shame.' Then he brought up Charley Campbell and told him to please repeat the pleasant exaggeration he had repeated to the Sunday-school scholars last Sunday. Mr Campbell, who is an old, bald-headed man arose and said: 'I believe I was making some remarks about previous hurricanes and hail storms in Eaton.' 'Yes,' that was the burden of your remarks,' said his friend. 'I had just told the Sunday-school how the wind blew my post-holes nine miles, and——' 'Yes, that's it.' Well, as I was saying,' said Mr Campbell, the wind on that occasion blew my cook-stove seventeen miles, and come back the next day and got the griddles.' 'Merciful heavens!' I said. O, that wasn't nothing, Mr Perkins.' It blew dozens of our citizens right up against the Baptist meeting-house and flattened them out as thin as wafers.' 'What did you do with them, Mr Campbell.' I asked. Why we sent them to New York and sold them for liver pads. We did, by gosh!' Well, just then John Whitney's No 11 stove-pipe hat hove in sight, and Brother Ford, who is Captain of the Salvation Army in Eaton, was invited to give his experience in raising watermelons, when he arose and remarked that for truth and veracity he was well known in Eaton. But he never had but one good crop of melons, and that was when he lived down South. 'You see,' Mr Ford I picked out 500 melons from my patch for shipment to New Orleans. It took six niggars and a span of mules to get each one of these melons to the steam-boat landing. I had them all set up in a row ready for shipment, when along came a lot of refugee niggers from the bottom lands and squatted on one.' 'How? What do you mean, Mr Ford.' 'Why every head of a family pre-empted one of them big melons for a cabin, and went to keeping house inside, as grand as you please.' 'You don't tell me!' 'Yes, and these confounded niggers dumped the seeds from those melons into the Mississippi River and formed a bar which compelled the boats to land three miles farther down the river.'"

"Now," remarked Eli, "these are ordinary Sunday-school lies, with such guns as Square Carpenter and Charley Morton to hear from yet. No, sir! I am going back to New York a broken hearted man,

"What train do you take," we asked.

"I shall take the passenger myself, but since talking with these country liars, I shall send my truth, veracity and bundle of lies by freight. Good morning!" and Eli went on hoeing up his sister's cabbages. [NIX, in Oneida Union.

"A BLESSING IN DISGUISE,"

284 ADELPHI ST., BROOKLYN, N. Y.
March 29, 1881.

No family should be without ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS; their healing powers are wonderful and their efficacy far reaching and lasting. For years past I have seen and known them to cure and relieve the most obstinate and distressing cases of rheumatism, kidney complaint bronchitus, neuralgia, lumbago, inflamation of the lungs and throat, paralysis, asthma, spinal weakness, and coughs and colds. In my own case they have afforded me almost instant and permanent relief. My friends consider them an invaluable and speedy remedy for all kinds of aches and pains. They are a blessing in disguise; and no wife or mother should be without them if she values her peace and comfort and freedom from nervous exhaustion and other ailments. As a strengthening plaster, also for backaches and weaknesses, they have no equal. I have never yet found a plaster so efficacious and stimulating, or to give so much general satisfaction. Used in connection with BRANDRETH'S universal life-giving and life-healing PILLS, no one need despair of a speedy restoration to good sound health. MRS. E. TOMPKINS.

ONE TRIAL.

If you have been using other Plasters one trial of Allcock's Porous will convince you of their wonderful superiority. Take no other so-called porous plasters that claim to be better, they are all frauds gotten up to sell on the world-wide reputation of the genuine article.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

MESSRS. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:

Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.

Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

FOR 1883.

Summer's here rather queer,
Weather neither warm nor clear,
But croquet I display,
For the skies will mend some day.

See my fishing tackle case,
Full of flies for killing bass,
Pike or prout or speckled trout
All you can pull out.

Rods and lines, fragrant pines,
Bananas from the tropic climes,
Rockers new, wagons too,
With iron ex. I'll sell to you.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage upon real property situated within the state of New York, whereby the power to sell has become operative, notice is hereby given that said mortgage, which is dated the 18th day of May 1876, and is recorded in the office of the clerk of the county of Oswego at Oswego, N. Y., on the 18th day of May 1876, at 9 o'clock a. m., in Liber 109 of mortgages at page 210, was given by Helen M. Foster, mortgagor, to Constantia V. Auringer, mortgagee, and the name of each assignee of said mortgage as follows: Orlando Howell. The sum claimed to be due upon said mortgage at the time of the first publication of this notice is six hundred and forty-three dollars and eighty-six cents ($643.86). The following is a description of the mortgaged property, contained in said mortgage: All that tract or parcel of land situate in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego and state of New York, specially described as seventy-four and seven-tenths (74 7-10) feet taken off from the north end of lot number four (4), block number twenty-eight (28) as laid down on the printed map of said village, and being sixty-six (66) feet in width on Oneida street and seventy-four and seven-tenths 74 7-10 feet deep. Pursuant to the power of sale contained therein, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the said mortgaged property, or a part thereof at public auction at the law office of Howe & Rice in the village of Fulton, county of Oswego, New York, on the 2d day of June, 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, and subscribed at Fulton, N. Y., this 7th day of March 1883. ORLANDO HOWELL, Assignee.

HOWE & RICE, Att'ys.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagor Nathan Rowlee mortgagee, Harmon J. Ransom, mortgage dated March 3d, 1870, to secure four hundred and eighty dollars ($480) part of the purchase price, and recorded in the clerk's office of the county of Oswego May 2d 1872 in book 94 of mortgages at page 425. Said mortgage has been duly assigned to James H. Langdon of Oswego Falls N. Y., who is the owner thereof. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York, and being five acres to be laid off in a "square form as near as may be on the south west "corner of forty acres on lot seventy-one in the old "military township of Hannibal, now Granby, and "bounded as follows: East and north by the original "line of said lot No seventy-one. South by the road "leading from Oswego Falls to Hannibalville, and "west by a line to run from said road leading as "aforesaid to the north line of said lot and parallel "with the east line of said lot 71, and at such a distance therefrom as shall exclude the said five acres "of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the 1st publication of this notice the sum of one hundred dollars principal and interest thereon from October 1st 1881, which is the whole sum unpaid on said mortgage and no suit or proceeding in law or equity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid and notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction, to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 6th day of July 1883 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day.

Dated, April 3d 1883. JAMES H. LANGDON, Assignee and owner of said mortgage.

WM. C. STEPHENS, Atty Fulton, N. Y.

MORTGAGE SALE—Mortgagors Louis LeFevre and Margaret LeFevre, his wife, Mortgagee James H. Langdon. Mortgage dated August 26th 1879, to secure the payment of $349.44 and recorded in the clerk's office, of Oswego county, December 2d 1879, in book 128 of mortgages at page 346. The premises conveyed by said mortgage are described therein substantially as follows:—

"All that tract or parcel of land situate in the "town of Granby, county of Oswego, and state of "New York; and being a part of lot No. 74, and "bounded as follows.—Commencing at the south-"east corner of land on said lot No. 74, formerly "owned by Dorlisks A. Northrup; thence northerly along the east line of said Northrup's land to a "point from which a line drawn westerly at right "angles with the east line of said lot, shall pass "thirty-seven feet from the south end of said Northrup's house (now owned by Andrew B. Simons) on "said lot, and to extend west far enough that a line "drawn southerly and parallel to the east line of "said lot and extending to the south line and thence "east to the place of beginning, shall contain three "acres of land."

There is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date of the first publication of this notice the sum of $140.44 and interest on the whole mortgage debt from the date of said mortgage, and there is yet to become due the further some of $200., and no suit or proceeding at law or inequity has been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof. Default has been made in the payment of the said sum of principal and interest due and unpaid as aforesaid, and notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises at public auction to the highest bidder at the law office of Wm. C. Stephens in the village of Fulton, N. Y., on the 9th day of Aug. 1883, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day. Dated, May 9th, 1883.

Why He Caught Flies.

A very small boy with a tattered straw hat and barefooted, was engaged in a species of occupation whose nature was made manifest. In his left hand he held a tin box, and with his right hand he was making downward sweeps with the earnestness and regularity of the piston rod of a steamboat engine. A man said:

"Say, boy, what are you doing there?"

The boy did not look up to see who his interrogator was. His arm merely went faster in its curving sweeps as he answered laconically:

"Ketchin' flies."

The boy ceased his gyrations and turned around.

"Look khere," he said, "you people bother me too much. Ef I tell you what I does with these flies, what'll ye gi'me?"

"A nickel," said one. "A dime," said the man who asked the question, and "a quarter," said another.

"All right," said the boy, screwing the top on his box and shifting himself about while the flies returned to the top of the sign board again; "hit's a go, but yous people got to put the sugar up first."

They "put up" the "sugar" in the boy's hand. There was a quarter, a dime and a nickel, and when the boy was confident the forty cents were all there he picked up his box and moved about a foot away so as to get a good start on the crowd. The crowd watched his motions, and the man who asked him what he was doing, when he saw the suspicious action said:

"Hold on, boy, you haven't told me yet why you catch those flies."

"All right," said the boy, stealthily putting another foot of pavement between himself and the crowd. "I'll tell you, if you really wants to know why I ketches them flies."

"Yes, yes," answered the crowd in a breath, finally losing patience.

"Well," said the boy, as he prepared to run, "kethin' flies is only a part of my business. Ketchin' suckers at forty cents is the other part. I think I does best on the suckers," and he disappeared around the corner.

CHICAGO'S SHADE SEEKERS.

Where They Go and What They Do—Germans and Their Beer—Drinking at His Girl's Expense.

CHICAGO, July 22, 1883.

As the thermometer stands at 90 in the shade and the city is pretty well deserted, I have taken a freight train and hied myself to sylvan glens to pass the wearying hours 'tween midday and sunset, and I will note down my reflections for the benefit of those inhabitants of that little burg who may sometimes sigh for the city of half a million or more in the great west. I envy you your seclusion and would enjoy to spend these warm days neath the shade of those grand trees to be found anywhere on the banks of the old Oswego, where I have often taken the unwary sucker and the slippery eel.

UNDER THE OLD OAK TREE.

I am now safely ensconsed beneath an old oak tree, and am enjoying the shade undisturbed and alone, unless I except the busy ant that I occasionally remove from various positions on my anatomy on account of its familiarity on so short an acquaintance and I may attract undue attention as I occasionally strike my pantaloons in various places in a frantic manner, when there is no visible cause for such movements.

WOODLAWN.

The tree that affords me protection, from the sun at least, is one of a thousand that go to make up a grove of several acres in area and is known to the picnic populace as Woodlawn. It is reached by the Illinois Central Railroad and lies on the shore of Lake Michigan, about eight miles from the city. It is divided into twelve or fourteen divisions and is let to different parties by the South Park Commissioners, who control it, it being improved ground belonging to South Park.

We are intruding on "ground No. 1" as denoted by a sign board nailed to one of the trees. This sign board has suffered, as is usual with sign boards in general, and is marked with the usual number of shot holes, left by the "city sportsmen." To-day these grounds are occupied by a German society, who are bent on having a good time, and to reach this end are engaged in dancing, swinging, ball playing and beer drinking—the latter being in especial favor from the hour of opening to the going down of the sun.

The musicians have been scraping their "merry strains" for some time, and one would judge from the appearance of their once laundried shirts that they either wore medicated scarlet flannel under their vests or else drank porter and perspired very freely. They certainly perspire freely in either case.

THE PRICE OF A BOAT RIDE.

One pleasure I forgot to mention, is boat riding, and although there is plenty of water and any number of boats, it is as exclusive as is the wearing of poor diamonds in Fulton. It reminds me of the Chicago man who was on a pleasure trip through the Holy Lands, and coming to the Sea of Galilee was induced to hire a boat in order to be able to say he had rowed on the sea that Jesus had walked on. After an excursion of one hour on the water he returned and was charged $9. On paying he incidentally remarked that he "didn't wonder Jesus walked."

THE GERMAN AND HIS BEER.

A German youth and his matchere have come to rob me of my seclusion, and as they settle near, their usual verbosity as to speech makes it impossible for me to court the Goddess of Inspiration so I will turn my attention to them for a short time.

It would seem that he was pleading for beer money or that they were trying to settle on the wedding day, as she seems to hold a full hand, while he is trying to bluff. He does not seem entirely satisfied by his surroundings, as he repeatedly says something that sounds like "Vill see einer spotseergong mockin?" which is instantly decided by the miss with "Nien!"

Were I a good German scholar I could fill a column of THE TIMES with three minutes of their conversation, but I would have to do it in shorthand. * * They have finally reached my level again as the young man says something like "Vo vilst ou?"

Young Lady—"Beer."

Young Man—"Swi Beer?"

Young Lady—"Yah!"

And happy in the possession of his dime and a chance to treat his girl on her own money, he carries her off to the stand where wet refreshments are sold, which invigorate but do not intoxicate—a German.

* * * * *

I was preparing to go into the Prohibition question as detrimental to the interests of the Republican party in 1884 when the music struck up "When the leaves begin to fall," and I was carried away in the arms of Morpheus, with a confused idea that the leaves were shaped like German feet and fell heavily and that they were using the bass viol as a receptable for empty beer bottles.

GOING HOME.

I have just awakened and find that my time-piece has disappeared—I always tell the time of day by the [illegible]

A WREATH OF ORANGE BLOSSOMS.

CHAPTER I.

A blazing July day; the hottest day the year had seen. The streets of London were an aspect of thorough laziness, and pedestrians seemed to shuffle rather than to walk along, so affected were they by the sun's rays, which poured with relentless fury upon the parched roads.

But although the streets were not very busy, the parks were—Hyde-park especially. Rotten Row was well filled with the elite of the fashionable world, and the side walks, as usual, held their hundreds of onlookers.

Among the promenaders was a tall and stately lady dressed in black silk, and whose face was concealed by a heavy black veil, through which it was impossible to penetrate.

Her bearing, proud and haughty in the extreme, attracted the attention of numbers of people, and many scores of eye-glasses were fixed very carefully, in order, probably, to view her the better.

Up and down, down and up, she walked, keeping her eyes well fixed on the Row, and scanning every rider who passed.

Suddenly she paused against the rails, clutched them tightly, and bent her head forward.

At the same moment, two riders, a lady and gentleman, passed, chatting merrily, and as they went up the Row, she looked fiercely after them.

Thus she stood until they had gone out of sight. Then she muttered in hard, cold tones:

"Then Alice is right, and she—she has taken my place? Oh, my God! can this be indeed! But let her beware! May my most bitter curse rest upon you, Grace Thorne!"

Now she moved away, and after penetrating the crowd of idlers, passed rapidly out of the park.

* * * * *

No. 88, Queen-square, Brompton, was, at the time of our story, in the occupation of Mrs. Danvers, widow of Captain Danvers, and said to be worth a considerable amount of money.

At No. 88 she resided with her daughter Ethel, "The Dark Queen," as she had been called by her schoolfellows on account of her complexion and her proud bearing.

Ethel was close upon twenty years of age, and a more beautiful woman could hardly have been found either in this or in any other country.

She was in every way a striking contrast to her parents, for whereas her father had been a tender-hearted gentleman, with a kind word for everyone, and her mother was the same, Ethel was totally different.

Her rule was not to ask but to command. The least thing would offend her, and she did not have to open her lips to inform any one that she was offended; they could tell that by the flashing eyes and the clenching of the delicate hands.

At eighteen, Ethel had been introduced to society, and being a beautiful girl, with plenty of ready wit, it is no wonder that she had plenty of admirers, and more than once she had had, not only the opportunity of marrying a rich man, but also of acquiring a title.

But all attention bestowed upon her was useless; she was as firm as a rock, as cold as ice.

To all?

No. There was one whose presence she sighed for—one whom she loved most passionately, according to her own fashion—one for whom she would have laid down her very life, and that one was Rowland Saxby, the son and heir of Sir Rowland Saxby, the well-known inventor.

But, alas for Ethel, Rowland did not return that love. Did he know that she entertained any love for him? He must have known, for she showed it plainly enough both by words and looks.

He was frequently present at Queen's-square, but when there he always acted as a friend—nothing more. Ethel, praised by all the men, could not account for this. She could not understand why it was that she appeared to be unable to attract Rowland to her side.

She grew thoughtful and listless, and her mother noticed it, and became alarmed in consequence. One day she asked Ethel what ailed her, and after some time, Ethel flinging herself upon her knees, and burying her face in her mother's lap, sobbed out her unhappiness.

Her mother listened calmly and attentively, and when her daughter had finished, she said, as she stroked the long, dark tresses:

"My child, all this is very, very foolish. From what you say, it appears to me that you would like to compel him to love you. Why, my dear child, there are scores of men, in brilliant positions, who would only be too ready to accept you. What is this attraction? I admit that Rowland is very handsome and all that, but if he does not show any more attention to you than to other ladies, why trouble about him? Dismiss all thoughts of him from your mind, my pet, or it may lead to something wrong. For my part I will not invite him here again, and then you will soon forget all about him."

"No, no!" cried Ethel, leaping to her feet. "Do not do that, mamma; I could not bear it!"

"It would be for your own benefit, my dear."

"Oh, no. I must see him. His absence would kill me."

"Ah, Ethel, you have had but little experience in these matters. As you grow older you will grow wiser, depend upon it."

"I believe in the maxim which says 'absence makes the heart grow fonder.'"

"Well, my dear, think over what I have said, and you will arrive at the conclusion that I am right."

Ethel did think over it, and she arrived at the conclusion that her mother was not right.

On the morning that we introduce Mrs. Danvers [illegible]

[illegible] turn any I wish to speak to her."

The maid bowed and retired.

Half an hour afterwards Ethel returned, and with a firm tread entered the drawing-room.

"Great Heavens, Ethel!" cried Mrs. Danvers, "what is the meaning of that?"

"That! What?"

"Why have you attired yourself in that black dress and veil?"

"Fancy, I suppose."

"No, no, Ethel, that cannot be the reason. There is something more than fancy in your going out in a black dress and veil; and you are paler than usual, and your hands tremble. Tell me, my dear," she said tenderly, "tell me what is the matter?"

Ethel hesitated for a few seconds, and then she said, as she clasped her hands:

"Mamma, I have found it all out."

"Found it out! Found what out?"

"The reason of Rowland's coldness to me."

"Rowland again! Dear, dear me, Ethel, that matter will certainly drive you mad if you persist in it. But tell me what you mean?"

"Some one told me yesterday that Rowland was to be seen in the Row every morning with a young lady."

"Who told you?"

"That does not matter; I have promised not to say. Well, this morning I went to the Row, and——"

"Played the spy!" interrupted Mrs. Danvers.

"No, but I watched and I saw that I had been rightly informed. Rowland was there, and by his side was—whom do you think? Oh," and Ethel rose and paced the floor excitedly, "I think I shall indeed go mad"

"Well, my dear, who was it?"

"Grace Thorne!"

Mrs. Danvers made no reply for some moments, at length she said:

"Well, and what of that?"

"What of it, mamma? What of it? Can't you see that she——"

"My dear Ethel, how strangely you talk! Surely Mr. Rowland Saxby may please himself with respect to friends."

"But they are more than friends."

"How can you tell that?"

"As they passed me I overheard a portion of their conversation. He addressed her as 'my dear!'"

"Well, that is rather out of the way, certainly, but you cannot complain."

"But you do not think of the long time I have been trying to bring him to my side. And to think that he should devote his attentions to a girl like her."

"Grace Thorne is a very pretty girl."

"True. But, mamma," and Ethel came close to her mother, "do you think she is more beautiful than I?"

"I do not, my child, but you know men's opinions differ so much. If I were you, Ethel, I should devote myself to young Leon Cathcart. He is a nice young fellow enough, very rich, and I am certain he loves you."

"That may be, but I have no love to give him"

"Ah me!" sighed Mrs. Danvers, as her daughter left the room, "things were very different when I was a young girl."

Ethel walked straight to her dressing-room. Alice, her maid, was awaiting her.

"Was I right, Miss Ethel?" she asked.

"Yes, you were," cried Ethel fiercely, as she stood and surveyed herself in the glass. "You were right. I saw them and heard a little of what they said. But I must wait and watch. By heaven! if she dares to stand in my path, I——"

"Oh, hush!" cried Alice; "your mamma may hear you."

"I care not who hears me," replied Ethel firmly, as she fixed her flashing eyes upon the maid; "I say that if she dares to stand in my path I will kill her!"

And as she uttered these terrible words, she clutched her maid tightly by the arm. The maid knew her temper—knew what she was when roused to fury, and she trembled.

"Oh, miss," she said, "I do so wish I had not told you."

"You did quite right to tell me, and I will make you a present for the information. Go now, Alice, and leave me alone. I want to think over it."

"I am sure something will happen," muttered the maid as she left the room.

CHAPTER II.

Rowland Saxby was one of the pets of society.

He was called "one of the handsomest men in London," and certainly when society said this, society, for once, was right. Rowland was indeed a remarkably handsome man.

But he was not conceited, after the manner of many men who are gifted by nature with more than the ordinary amount of personal beauty.

Besides being possessed of great personal beauty, he was heir to large estates, although not to a title, for his father's title would cease with his death.

From the fact of his one day becoming a very rich man, he was a great attraction to numerous mammas who had daughters on their hands whom they wanted to be comfortably settled in life.

These were introduced to Rowland by the dozen, but to their infinite annoyance he treated one precisely the same as another, so that, eventually, mammas were heard to say that to touch the heart of Rowland Saxby was utterly out of question, and they gave up the attempt as a failure, yet they still invited him to their numerous little parties, balls, and so on.

Then, all of a sudden, society was startled, and lifted up its eyes in pure astonishment.

What about?

Simply this: Mrs. Thorne, who kept a very beautiful house in Park-lane (although it was rumored that she was by no means well-to-do, and for that reason seldom moved in society), had an only daughter, Grace. At fourteen, Grace, who was then a remarkably plain girl, was sent to a boarding-school in Paris. She stayed there five years, and then very suddenly made her appearance in society.

[illegible]

[illegible] Danvers had seen her with Rowland in the Row, Grace was in the drawing room, looking eagerly out of the window.

Rowland, the previous evening, had sent her a note, which was to this effect:

"MY DEAR G—I—[illegible] morning I shall be with you early—say at eleven. I have a piece [illegible] to give you; a somewhat singular one, you will [illegible] but which [illegible] there will be something useful."

It was therefore no wonder that Grace was anxious to know what the present was.

Soon after the appointed time Rowland drove up, and soon held Grace in his arms.

"You are looking more beautiful than ever, my love," he cried, gazing proudly down at the upturned face.

"Oh, Rowland, how you do flatter."

"I am sure I mean what I say. There is no prettier girl in society than you. But now to business, as my father is in the habit of saying. I see you are looking at this parcel I have. Well, sit down, Grace, and I will show you the contents."

Grace did as he desired, and Rowland commenced to untie the parcel. Of course he did as men usually do—that is to say, knowing that she was curious, he took longer than was necessary to untie the parcel.

It was accomplished at last, and there was displayed a mahogany box beautifully and artistically bound with bands of solid gold.

Grace opened her eyes in wonder, and she found it impossible to sit still any longer.

Rowland now produced a key, unlocked the box, raised the inside silk lid, and then—well, then Grace uttered a cry of wonder.

Nestling amid a pile of white silk was a wreath of orange blossoms, and in the center of that a pair of bracelets, the diamonds upon which flashed and glittered like a running brook in the sun's rays.

"Oh, how lovely!" cried Grace.

"Which do you mean?" asked Rowland. "The wreath or the bracelets?"

"Oh, both!" But even as she said this her face wore an expression of wonder.

What was meant by the wreath of orange-blossoms?

Rowland took it out of the box and laid it carefully upon the table. Then he took Grace by the hand and led her to a seat, and sitting beside her, her hand still within his own, he said:

"My love, in presenting that to you I obey the commands of my dear dead mother."

Grace started.

"Your mother, Rowland?" she said.

"Yes. When my mother was dying she said: 'My dear boy, there is one thing I wish you to promise me. You may think it rather singular, but it is something I have always wished. You know that in my cabinet is a mahogany box, bound with gold. In that is the wreath of orange-blossoms I wore when your father married me. There also are the bracelets I wore for twenty years of my life. Now, will you promise that the lady you marry shall wear that wreath on the day she is married, and the bracelets also?' Of course, Grace, I promised. And I am sure you will please me by assisting me in keeping that promise. Will you not?"

"Oh, Rowland," replied Grace, as she kissed him tenderly, "that I will. That promise must be sacredly kept. And I see nothing strange in the idea. All women have some idea, you know. And when we—when we—"

"Are married. Yes, my dear."

"When we are married I shall wear it, and no one will know but what it is quite new. It does not look old, does it?"

"No, that it certainly does not."

"And the bracelets; are they not beautiful?"

"They are indeed. Let me place them upon your wrists."

And Rowland fixed the glittering jewels upon Grace's white wrists, where she surveyed them rapturously.

"And now," said Rowland, "I must be off, Grace. I shall return at one, and then, no doubt, you will be ready for the Row."

* * * * * *

"What, Leon, my boy! how the deuce are you? Where have you been? Where are you off to, and where on earth have you been hiding?"

And Rowland laid his hand lightly upon the shoulder of Leon Cathcart. He had not proceeded far from Grace's residence when he met him.

"Just half a moment, Rowland, my friend," replied Leon, as he slowly removed his cigar from his mouth. "I am not well up in memory, you know, and I am utterly unused to a running fire of questions. In the first place, how the deuce am I? Well, I am seedy, and I look it. Where am I off to? Haven't the least idea. Where have I been hiding, I think you said? Well, I've been to Paris, and as I found every one over there precisely the same as they are here, I came sorrowfully back."

"How did you find them."

"Dull, my boy, dull, and awfully slow. They say the world is continually going round, but, alas, I am of a different opinion, for I am certain it is continually standing still."

And Leon assumed an attitude of profound uneasiness.

Rowland laughed heartily, and placing Leon's arm within his own, the pair strolled on.

They had been friends and companions for years. As boys they played together, and it was, therefore, no wonder that they should tell each other their secrets, and as they proceeded Rowland informed Leon of his betrothal to Grace Thorne.

Leon congratulated him.

"I am sure you could not have selected a more fitting match, Rowland," he said. "She is everything a man could wish for, and I know you will both be very happy. Ah, dear me."

"Why do you sigh?"

"Oh, I have a load of misery upon my soul," replied Leon, in mock dramatic tones.

"Indeed! sorry to hear it, I'm sure. Where have you been to get such a disease?"

"Done there," replied Leon, pointing in the direction of Brompton.

[illegible] a few moments, and then [illegible]

"Yes, I do indeed."

"Impossible!"

"Don't say that. Has she heard of your engagement to Grace Thorne?"

"Not that I am aware of."

"Have you seen her lately?"

"No; I have not noticed her anywhere lately."

"And you have not called on Mrs. Danvers lately?"

"No, I have not. I have been busy."

"What, at Park-lane?"

"Not all the time. I have been busy with my father's affairs."

"Ah. Well depend upon it, Ethel has heard of your engagement. I won't say why I think so; and, you know, it is rather singular that you have not called there. I say, Rowland, tell me like a good fellow; you never had any love for her, did you?"

"Never, my boy, never!"

"But you don't dislike her?"

"Certainly not. I think Ethel is a very beautiful and accomplished young lady. I don't wonder you love her."

"Then perhaps I have made a mistake. I will have another try."

By this time they reached the park, and Rowland proposed that before he called for Grace, they should take a walk round the Row, a proposition to which Leon consented.

Leaning over the rails, idly watching the few riders who had made their appearance, and chatting respecting the merits of Grace Thorne and Ethel Danvers, they were not aware of the fact that a tall stately lady, dressed in deep black and wearing a thick black veil, had stolen up, and that while she was apparently watching the riders, she was in fact listening intently to their conversation.

For some moments she stood there, until Leon said:

"And when is the happy day, Roland?"

"Not very far ahead, my boy."

"Will it be in London? I suppose it will take place not a hundred miles from Hanover-square?"

"You are wrong, Leon. It will take place at my father's place, Blexley."

"Ah, nice place—very nice."

"We shall stay there some time before it takes place, and I hope you will favor us with your company. Of course, Ethel and Mrs. Danvers will be invited."

"Then you may be sure that I will be there."

"You may persuade Ethel to marry you at the same time."

"I will try, but——"

At this moment the lady in deep black uttered a low cry. It caught Leon's ears, and he turned just in time to see the lady move away.
